ESSAYS

OR

Councils, Civil and Popal,

OF

Sir FRANCIS BACON,

Lord Venlam, Vilcount St. Alban.

With a TABLE of the Colours

OF

Good and Evil.

And a Discourse

Of the WISDOM of the

ANCIENTS.

To this Edition is added the Character of Quoen ELIZABETH; never before Printed in English.

LONDON

Printed for H. Herringman, R. Scor, R. Chifwell, A. Swalle, and R. Bentley, 1696.

自己在发生 The way of the same done contract distant Street Bushing Land Correction of the said man a named . - 19413 BA and the same and THE RESERVE THE PROPERTY OF THE PARTY OF THE A STATE OF THE STA M. W. S. S. C. O. H. A. D. O.

TO THE

Right Honourable my very good Lord,

THE

Duke of Buckingham his Grace,

OF ENGLAND.

Excellent Lord,

Solomon says, A Good Name is a precious Oyntment; and, I affare my self, such will Tour Grace's Name be with Posterity; for your Fortune and Merit, both have been Eminent; and Tou have planted things that are like to last. I do now publish my Eslays; which, of all my other Works, have been most current: For that, as it seems, they come home to Men's Business, and Bosoms. I have enlarged them both in Number and Weight;

Je

The Epistle Dedicatory.

so that they are indeed a New work. I thought it therefore agreeable to my Affection, and Obligation to Your Grace, to prefix your Name before them, both in English and Latin: For I do conceive, that the Latin Volume of them, (being in the Universal Language) may last as long as Books last. My Instauration I dedicated to the King; my History of Henry the Seventh (which I have now also translated into Latin) and my Portions of Natural History to the Prince. And thefe I dedicate to Your Grace, being of the best Fruits, that, by the good increase which God gives to my Pen and Labours, I could yield. God lead Your Grace by the hand.

ich, Jab will Iver Gran any selber Westes being even most current:

Your Graces most obliged and Paithful Servant,

fu N

h

fe

C

e

fe

th

n

Elogies on the Illustrious Author.

Ben. Johnson, in his Discoveries, p. 101.

S

e

1

1

Here happened in my time, one Noble Speaker [Lord Verulam] who was full of gravity in his speaking. His Language (where he could spare or pass by a jest) was nobly censorious. No Man ever spake more neatly, more preftly, more weightily, or fuffered less empriness, less Idleness in what he uttered. No member of his Speech but confifted of his own graces. His Hearers could not cough or look afide from him without loss. He commanded where he spoke : and had his Judges angry and pleased at his devotion. No Man had their affections more in his power. The fear of every man that heard him, was, left he should make an end. And afterwards, Lord Egerton, the Chancellor, a great and grave Orator, &c. But his Learned and able, (though unfortunate) Successor, [Lord Bacon is he, who hath filled up all members, and performed that in our tongue, which may be compar'd or prefer'd, either to infolent Greece or haughty Rome. In fhort, within his view, and about his rimes, were all the Wits born, that could honour a Language or help fludy. Now things daily fall; Wits grow downward, and Eloquence goes backward: So that he may be nam d and fland as the mark and expir of our Language.

And a little after, My conceit of his Person was never increased toward him, by his place or honours. But I have and do reverence him for the greatness that was only proper to himself, in that he seem'd to me ever by his work, one of the greatest Men, and most worthy of admiration, that had been in many Ages. In his Adversity I ever prayed, that God would give him strength, for greatness he could not want. Neither could

could I condole in a word or lyllable for him; as knowing no Accident could do harm to Vertue, but rathe help to make it manifest.

A. Cowley, in his Poem to the Royal Society, after some reflections upon the State of Philosophy aforetime, goes on.

Some few exalted Spirits this latter Age has shown, That labour'd to affert the Liberty (From Guardians, who were now Usurpers grown) Of this Old Minot ftill, Captiv'd Philosophy; But 'twas Rebellion call'd to fight For such a long oppressed Right.
BACON at last, a mighty Man, arose, Whom a wise King and Nature chose

Lord Chancellor of both their Laws, And holdly undertook the injur'd Pupils cause.

Ш.

Authority, which did a Body boalt, Though twas but Air condens'd, and stalk'd about, Like some old Giants more Gigantic Ghost; To terrifie the Learned Rout With the plain Magick of true Reasons Light; He chac'd out of our sight, Nor suffer'd Living Men to be missed By the vain shadows of the Dead:
To Graves from wheme it rose, the conquer'd Phantome sted; He broke that Monstrous God which stood In midst of th' Orchard, and the whole did claim, Which with a useless sithe of Wood,
And something else not worth a name, (Both vast for shew, yet neither sit Ridiculos

Ch

B.

Be

Wi

F

(7

To

Li

H

H

Fe

W

In

Ridiculous and senceless Terrors!) made Children and superstitious Men afraid.
The Orchard's open now, and free; BACON has broke that Scare-crow Deity; Come, enter, all that will,
Behold the rip'ned Fruit, come gather now your fill.
Yet fill, methinks, we fain would be Catching at the Embidden Tree, We would be like the Deitie, When Truth and Falshood, Good and Evil, we Without the Sences aid within our selves would see;
For 'tis God only who can find All Nature in his Mind.

he

IV.

From Words, which are but Pictures of the Thought, (Though we our Thoughts from them perverfly drew) To Things, the Minds right Object, be it brought, Like foolish Birds to painted Grapes we flew; He Sought and gather d for our uje the True; And when on heaps the chofen Bunches lay, He prest them wisely the Mechanic ways Till all their juyce did in one Vessel joyn, Ferment into a Nourishment Divine, The thirsty Souls refreshing Wine. Who to the Life an exact Piece would make, Must not from others Work a Copy take; No, not from Rubens or Vandike : Much less content himself to make it like Th' Ideas and the Images which lie In his own Fancy, or his Memory. No, be before bis fight must place The Natural and Living Face; The real Object must command Each Judgment of his Eye, and Motion of his Hand.

From these long Errors of the way, In which our wandring Predecessors went, And like th' old Hebrews many years did stray In defarts but of small extent, BACON, like Moses, led us forth at last, The barren Wilderness be past, Did on the very Border stand, Of the bleft promis'd Land, And from the Mountains Top of his Exalted Wit, Saw it bimfelf, and shew'd us it. But life did never to one Man allow Time to Discover Worlds, and Conquer too; Nor can so short a Line sufficient be To fathom the wast depths of Natures Sea: The work be did we ought t' admire, And were unjust if we should more require From his few years, divided 'twixt th' Excess Of low Affliction, and bigb Happiness: For who on things remote can fix his fight, That's always in a Triumph, or a fight?

A. Cowley.

in

Se

rei

Ve wa fic

Tri on a 1 of an Might Might W

ESSAYS.

Ì.

Of Truth.

7 HAT is Truth? faid jefting Pilate, and would not flay for an answer. Certainly there be that delight in giddiness, and count it a Bondage to fix a Belief; affecting free-will in thinking, as well as in acting. And though the Sects of Philosophers of that kind be gone, yet there remain certain discoursing Wits, which are of the same Veins, though there be not fo much Blood in them, as was in those of the Ancients. But it is not only the difficulty and labour, which men take in finding out of Truth; nor again, that when it is found, it imposeth upon Mens thoughts, that doth bring Lyes in favour; but a natural, though corrupt Love, of the Lye it felf. One of the later Schools of the Grecians examineth the matter. and is at a ftand, to think what should be in it, that Men should love Lyes; where neither they make for pleasure, as with Poets, nor for Advantage, as with the Merchant, but for the Lyes fake. But I cannot tell. This fame Truth is a Naked and Open day-light, that doth not fhew the Masks, and Mummeries, and Triumphs of the World, half fo flately and daintily as Candle-light. Truth may perhaps come to the price of a Pearl, that theweth best by day; but it will not rise to the price of a Diamond or Carbuncle, that sheweth best in varied Lights. A mixture of a Lye doth ever add pleafure. Doth any man doubt, that if there were taken out of Mens minds vain Opinions, flattering Hopes, false Valuations, Imaginations as one would, and the like; but it would leave the minds of a number of Men, poor fhrunken things, full of melancholy and indisposition, and unpleasing to themselves? One of the Fathers in great severity called Poesie, Vinum Dæmonum, because it filleth the Imagination, and yet it is but with the shadow of a Lye. But it is not the Lye that passeth through the mind, but the Lye that finketh in, and fettleth in it, that doth the hurt, fuch as we spake of before. But howfoever these things are thus in Mens depraved judgments and affections; yet Truth, which only doth judge it felf, teacheth, that the enquiry of Truth, which is the love-making, or wooing of it: the knowledge of Truth, which is the presence of it: and the belief of Truth, which is the enjoying of it, is the foveraign good of Humane Nature. The first Creature of God in the works of the Days, was Light of the Senfe; the last was the Light of Reason; and his Sabbath-Work ever since, is the illumination of his Spirit. First, he breathed light upon the face of the Matter or Chaos; then he breathed light into the face of Man; and still he breatheth and inspireth light into the face of his Chofen. The Poet that beautified the Sect, that was otherwise inferiour to the rest, faith yet excellently well: It is a pleasure to stand upon the shore, and to see Ships tost upon the Sea; a pleasure to stand in the Window of a Castle, and to see a Battel, and the adventure thereof below: but no pleasure is comparable to the standing upon the vantage-ground of Truth: (an Hill not to be commanded, and where the Air is always clear and ferene:) and to see the Errors, and Wandrings, and Mist's, and Tempests in the Vale below: So always that this prospect be with Pity, and not with fwelling or Pride. Certainly it is Heaven upon Earth, to have a Mans mind move in Charity, rest in Providence, and turn upon the Poles Truth. To

ed

of

aut

or

n,

in

it

a-

it,

ut

g-ge ne

b,

h

ne

ne

1-ie i-

i-},

772

be be

0 d

-

To pass from Theological and Philosophical Truth, to the Truth of Civil bufmess, it will be acknowledged, even by those that practife it not, that clear and round dealing is the honour of Mans nature, and that mixture of fallhood is like allay in Coin of Gold and Silver. which may make the Metal work the better, but it embaseth it. For these winding and crooked courses are the goings of the Serpent, which goeth bafely upon the Belly, and not upon the feet. There is no Vice that doth fo cover a Man with shame, as to be found false and perfidious. And therefore Mountaigne faith prettily, when he enquired the reason, Why the word of the Lye should be such a disgrace, and such an odious charge: Saith he, If it be well weighed, To say that a Man lyeth, is as much as to fay, that he is a Brave towards God, and a Coward towards Men. For a Lye faces God, and shrinks from Man. Surely the wickedness and Falshood, and breach of Faith, cannot possibly be so highly expressed, as in that it shall be the last Peal, to call the Judgments of God upon the Generations of Men; it being foretold, that when Christ cometh, He shall not find faith upon the Earth.

II.

Of Death.

M EN fear Death, as Children fear to go in the dark:
And as that natural fear in Children is encreased with Tales, so is the other. Certainly the contemplation of Death, as the wages of sin, and passage to another World, is Holy and Religious; but the fear of it, as a tribute due unto Nature, is weak. Yet in religious Meditations, there is sometimes a mixture of vanity and superstition. You shall read in some of the Friers Books of Mortification, that a Man should think with himself, what the pain is, if he have but his singers end pressed or tortured, and thereby imagine what the pains of Death are, when the whole body is computed and diffolved a when many times Death passeth with less pain, than the torture of a Limb: For the most Vital parts are not the quickeft of Senfe. And by him that spake only as a Philosopher, and natural man, it was well faid; Pompa mortis magis terret, quam Mors ipsa, Groans, and Convulfions, and discoloured Face, and Friends weeping, and Blacks, and Obsequies, and the like, shew Death terrible. It is worthy the observing, that there is no passion in the mind of Man so, weak, but it mates and masters the fear of Death: and therefore Death is no such terrible Enemy, when a Man bath so many attendants about him, that can win the combat of him. Revenge triumphs over Death; Love flights it; Honour aspireth to it : Grief flieth to it; Fear pre-occupateth it. Nay we read, after Otho the Emperor had flain himself, Pity (which is the tenderest of Affections) provoked many to die, out of meer compassion to their Soveraign, and as the truest fort of Followers. Nay, Seneca adds Nicenels and Satiety; Cogita quandiu eadem faceres; Mori velle, non tantum Fortis, aut Mifer, fed etiam Fastidiosus potest. A man would die, though he were neither valiant nor mi-Terable, only upon a weariness to do the same thing fo oft over and over. It is no less worthy to observe, how little alteration in good Spirits the approaches of Death make. For they appear to be the same Men till the last Augustus Casar died in a complement; Livia, Conjugii noftri memor, vive, & vale. Tiberius in Diffimulation, as Tacitus faith of him; fam Tiberium Vires, & Corpus, non Dissimulatio deserbant. Vespasian in a jest, sitting upon the stool; Ut puto, Deus fio. Galba with a Sentence; Feri, si ex re sit populi Romani, holding forth his neck. Septimius Severus in dispatch; Adefte, si quid mibi restat agendum. And the like. Comainly the Stoicks beflowed too much cost upon Death, and by their great preparations made it appear more fearful. Better, faith he, Qui finem vita extremum inter munera ponat Natura.

4

F

tl

A

V

22

B

W

a

22

B

ie,

1-3, od

h ts

o e ty

o

S

774

A

i-

ò

N

b ft

7, ju

g

is

hi

It.

h

It is as natural to die, as to be born; and to a little infant perhaps the one is as painful as the other. He that dies in an earnest pursuit, is like one that is wounded in hot blood, who for the time scarce feels the hurt; and therefore a Mind fixt, and bent upon somewhat that is good, doth avert the dolours of Death. But above all, believe it, the sweetest Canticle is, Nune dimittis, when a Man hath obtained worthy ends and expectations. Death hath this also; that it openeth the Gate to good Fame, and extinguisheth Envy.

Extinctus amabitur idem.

III.

Of Unity in Religion.

R Eligion being the chief band of Humane Society, it is a happy thing when it felf is well contained within the true band of Unity. The Quarrels and Divisions about Religion were Evils unknown to the Heathen. The reason was, because the Religion of the Heathen consisted rather in Rites and Ceremonies, than in any constant belief. For you may imagine what kind of Faith theirs was, when the chief Doctors and Fathers of their Church were Poets. But the true God hath this Attribute, that he is a fealous God, and therefore his Worship and Religion will endure no mixture or Partner. We shall therefore speak a few words concerning the Unity of the Church; What are the Fruits thereof, what the Bonds, and what the Means.

The Fruits of Unity (next unto the well-pleasing of God, which is All in All) are two; the one towards those that are without the Church, the other towards those that are within. For the former, It is certain, that Heresies and Schisms are of all others the greatest Scandals, yea, more than corruption of Manners. For as in the Natural Body, a Wound or Solution of continuity, is worse than a corrupt

B 3

a corrupt Humour; fo in the Spiritual. So that nothing doth so much keep Men out of the Church, and drive men out of the Church as a breach of Unity: And therefore whenfoever it cometh to that pass, that one faith, Ecce in deserto, another faith, Ecce in penetralibus; that is, when some Men seek Christ in the Conventicles of Hereticks, and others in an outward face of a Church, that Voice had need continually to found in Mens Ears, Nolite exire, Go not out. The Doctor of the Gentiles (the propriety of whose vocation drew him to have a special care of those without) faith, If an Heathen come in and bear you speak with several Tongues, will be not say that you are mad? and certainly it is little better, when Atheifts and prophane persons do hear of so many discordant and contrary Opinions in Religion; it doth avert them from the Church, and maketh them to fit down in the Chair of the Scorners. It is but a light thing to be vouched in fo ferious a matter, but yet it expresseth well the deformity. There is a Master of Scoffing, that in his Catalogue of Books of a feigned Library, fets down this Title of a Book, The Morrice-dance of Hereticks. For indeed every Sect of them hath a diverse posture, or cringe by themfelves; which cannot but move derision in Worldings, and depraved Politicks who are apt to contemn holy things.

As for the Fruit toward those that are within. It is Peace, where containeth infinite Bleffings; it established Faith; it kindleth Charity; the outward peace of the Church distilleth into peace of Conscience; and it turneth the Labours of Writing and Reading of Controversies, into Treatifes of Mortification and Devotion.

Concerning the Bonds of Unity, the true placing of them importeth exceedingly. There appear to be two extreams. For to certain Zelots all speech of pacification is odious. Is it peace, Jehu? What hast thou to do with peace? turn thee behind me. Peace is not the matter, but following a party. Contrariwise certain Laodiceans, and luke-warm persons, think they may accommodate points of Religion by middle ways, and taking part of both, and witty reconcilements, as if they would make an arbitrement between God and Man. But these extreams are to be avoided; which will be done, if the league of Christians, penned by our Saviour himself, were in the two cross clauses thereof, soundly and plainly expounded. He that is not with us, is against us: And again, He that is not against us, is with us: That is, if the points Fundamental, and of Substance in Religion, were truly discerned and distinguished from points not meerly of Faith, but of Opinion, Order, or good Intention. This is a thing may seem to many a matter trivial, and done already; but if it were done less partially, it would be embraced more generally.

ng

reth,

is, le-

ite

0-

re

d?

0n-

he

be i-

y. of 1-

y

2, 1-

f

Of this I may give only this advice, according to my fmall model: Men ought to take heed of rendring God's Church by two kinds of controversies: The one is, when the matter of the point controverted is too small and light, not worth the heat and strife about it, kindled only by contradiction. For, as it is noted by one of the Fathers, Christ's Coat indeed had no feam, but the Churches Vesture was of divers colours; whereupon he faith, In weste varietas sit, scissura non sit; they be two things, Unity and Uniformity. The other is, when the matter of the point controverted is great, but it is driven to an overgreat fubtilty and obscurity, so that it becometh a thing rather ingenious than fubftantial. A Man that is of judgment and understanding, shall sometimes hear ignorant Men differ, and know well within himself, that those which so differ, mean one thing, and yet they themselves would never agree. And if it come so to pass, in that distance of judgment which is between Man and Man, shall we not think, that God above, that knows the heart, doth not difcern that frail Men in fome of their contradictions intend the fame thing, and accepteth of both? The nature of fuch controversies is excellently expressed by St. Paul, in the warning and precept that he giveth concerning the fame, Devita pro-

B 4

fanas

At

be

fo

the

tif

th

it

in

A

de

Pi

an ly

C

Sa

b

al

MF

2

C

W

n

fanas vocum novitates, & oppositiones falsi nominis scientia; Men create oppositions which are not, and put them into new terms so fixed, as whereas the meaning ought to govern the term, the term in effect governeth the meaning. There be also two salse Peaces, or Unities; the one, when the Peace is grounded but upon an implicite ignorance; for all Colours will agree in the dark: the other when it is pieced up upon a direct admission of contraries in Fundamental points. For Truth and Falshood in such things, are like the Iron and Clay in the toes of Nebuchadnezzar's Image, they may cleave, but they will not incorporate.

Concerning the Means of procuring Unity; Men must beware, that in the procuring or muniting of Religious Unity, they do not dissolve and deface the Laws of Charity, and of Humane Society. There be two Swords amongst Christians, the Spiritual and Temporal; and both have their due office and place in the maintenance of Religion. But we may not take up the third Sword, which is Mahomet's Sword, or like unto it; that is, to propagate Religion by Wars, or by fanguinary Perfecutions to force Consciences, except it be in cases of overt Scandal, blasphemy or intermixture of practice against the State; much less to nourish Seditions, to authorize Conspiracies and Rebellions, to put the Sword into the peoples hands, and the like, tending to the subversion of all Government, which is the Ordinance of God. For this is but to dash the First Table against the Second, and fo to confider Men as Christians, as we forget that they are Men. Lucretius the Poet, when he beheld the Act of Agamemnon, that could endure the facrificing of his own Daughter, exclaimed; Tantum Religio potuit susdere malorum.

what would he have faid, if he had known of the Maffacre in France, or the Powder-Treason of England? He would have been seven times more Epicure and Atheist ito

to

in-

ite

he

of

nd

the

ey

ıft

us

ads

nd ce

d,

0

1-rt

e

e

n

Atheist than he was: For as the Temporal Sword is to be drawn with great circumspection in cases of Religion; fo it is a thing monstrous, to put it into the hands of the common people. Let that be left unto the Anabaptifts, and other Furies. It was great blasphemy, when the Devil faid, I will ascend and be like the highest; but it is greater blasphemy to personate God, and bring him in, faying, I will descend and be like the Prince of Darkness: And what is it better, to make the cause of Religion to descend to the cruel and execrable actions of Murthering Princes, Butchery of People, and Subversion of States and Governments? Surely this is to bring down the Holy Ghoft, inflead of the likeness of a Dove, in the shape of a Vulture or Raven; and to fet out of the Bark of a Christian Church, a Flag of a Bark of Pyrates and Asfassins. Therefore it is most necessary, that the Church by Doctrine and decree, Princes by their Sword, and all Learnings both Christian and Moral, as by their Mercury Rod, do damn and fend to Hell for ever those Facts and Opinions, tending to the support of the same, as hath been already in good part done. Surely in Councils concerning Religion, that Counsel of the Apostle would be prefixed, Ira hominis non implet justitiam Dei. And it was a notable observation of a wife Father, and no less ingeniously confessed, That those which held and perswaded pressure of Consciences, were commonly interessed therein themselves for their own ends.

IV.

Of Revenge.

Revenge is a kind of wild Justice; which the more Man's Nature runs to, the more ought Law to weed it out. For as to the first wrong, it doth but offend the Law, but the Revenge of that wrong putteth the Law out of Office. Certainly in taking Revenge, a Man is but

W

m

is

h fi da

i

f

t

but even with his Enemy; but in passing it over he is fuperiour: for it is a Princes part to pardon. And Sa lomon, I am fure, faith, It is the Glory of a Man to pals by an offence. That which is past, is gone, and irrecoverable; and wife Men have enough to do with things prefent, and to come: therefore they do but trifle with themselves, that labour in past matters. There is no Man doth a wrong for the wrongs fake, but thereby to purchase himself profit, or pleasure, or honour, or the like. Therefore why should I be angry with a Man for loving himself better than me? And if any Man should do wrong meerly out of ill nature why? yet it is but like the Thorn or Bryar, which prick and scratch, because they can do no other. The most tolerable fort of Revenge, is for those wrongs which there is no Law to remedy: But then let a man take heed, that the Revenge be fuch, as there is no Law to punish; else a Man's Enemy is still before-hand, and it is two for one. Some when they take Revenge, are defirous the Party should know whence it cometh: this is the more generous. For the delight feemeth to be not fo much in doing the hurt, as in making the party repent. But base and crafty Cowards are like the Arrow that flieth in the dark. Cofmus Duke of Florence had a desperate saying against perfidious or neglecting Friends, as if those wrongs were unpardonable: You Iball read (faith he) that we are commanded to forgive our Enemies; but you never read, that we are commanded to forgive our Friends. But yet the Spirit of Fob was in a better tune ; shall we (faith he) take good at God's hand, and not be content to take evil also? And fo of Friends in a proportion. This is certain, that a Manthat studieth Revenge, keeps his own wounds green, which otherwise would heal, and do well: Publick Revenges are for the most part Fortunate, as that for the death of Cafar, for the death of Pertinax, for the death of Henry the Third of France, and many more. But in private Revenges it is not fo. Nay, rather vindicative persons live the life of Witches; who as they are mischievous, fo end they unfortunate.

V

he is d So

pre-

with no

y to

for ould

but bet of

to nge E-

me

or

he

of-

re re

13.

it

d o

n.

,

Of Advertity.

IT was an high Speech of Seneca, (after the manner of the Stoicks) That the good things which belong to prosperity are to be wished, but the good things that belong to adverfity are to be admired : Bona rerum secundarum optabilia, adversarum mirabilia. Certainly, if Miracles be the command over Nature, they appear most in Adversity. It is yet a higher Speech of his, than the other, (much too high for a Heathen) It is true greatness to have in the the frailty of a Man, and the security of a God; Vere mag im habere fragilitatem bominis, securitatem Dei. This would have done better in Poesie, where transcendencies at more allowed. And the Poets indeed have been busie with it; for it is in effect the thing, which is figured in that ftrange Fiction of the ancient Poets, which feemeth not to be without mystery; nay, and to have some approach to the State of a Christian : That Hercules, when be went to unbind Prometheus) by whom Humane Nature is represented) failed the length of the great Ocean in an Earthen Pot or Pitcher; Lively describing Christian resolution, that faileth in the frail Bark of the Flesh, through the waves of the World. But to speak in a mean ? The Vertue of Prosperity is Temperance, the Vertue of Adverfity is Fortitude, which in Morals is the more heroical Prosperity is the Bleffing of the Old Testament, Vertue. Adversity is the Bleffing of the New, which carrieth the greater Benediction, and the clearer Revelation of God's favour. Yet even in the Old Testament, if you listen to David's Harp, you shall hear as many Hearse-like Airs, as Carols. And the Pencil of the Holy Ghoft hath laboured more in describing the Afflictions of Fob, than the Felicities of Solomon. Prosperity is not without many fears and distastes; and Adversity is not without comforts and hopes. We fee in Needle-works and Embroyderies, broyderies, it is more pleasing to have a lively work upon a fad and folemn ground, than to have a dark and we melancholy Work upon a lightfome ground. Judge part therefore of the pleasure of the Heart, by the pleasure of wh the Eye. Certainly Vertue is like precious Odours, most fragrant when they are incensed or crushed: For Or Prosperity doth best discover Vice, but Adversity doth best of discover Vertue.

Of Simulation and Dissimulation.

D Minulation is but a faint kind of Policy or Wisdom; for it asketh a strong Wit and a strong Heart, to know when to tell truth, and to do it. Therefore it is the weaker fort of Politicks, that are the great Diffemblers.

Tacitus faith, Livia forted well with the Arts of her Husband and Dissimulation of ber Son; attributing Arts or Policy to Augustus, and Dissimulation to Tiberius. And again, when Mucianus encourageth Vespasian to take Arms against Vitellises, he faith, We rife not against the piercing fudgment of Augustus, nor the extream Caution or Closeness of Tiberius. These properties of Arts, or Policy and Dissimulation, or Closeness, are indeed habits and faculties, feveral, and to be diffinguished. For if a man have that penetration of Judgment, as he can discern, what things are to be laid open, and what to be fecreted, and what to be shewed at half lights, and to whom, and when (which indeed are Arts of State, and Arts of Life, as Tacitus well calleth them) to him; a habit of Diffimulation is a hindrance, and a poornels. But if a Man cannot attain to that Judgment, then it is left to him generally to be Clofe, and a Diffembler. For where a man cannot chuse or vary in Particulars, there it is good to take the fafeft and weariest way in general; like the going fostly by one that cannot well fee. Certainly the ablest Men that ever

and

wl

wi ma A

an

of

m

OI di

O

cr

P

S

r

were, have had all an openness and frankness of dealing, ork and a Name of Certainty and Veracity: but then they and were like Hories, well managed; for they could tell dge paffing well, when to ftop or turn; And at fuch times, e of when they thought the case indeed required Distinulation urs on if then they used it, it came to pass, that the former For Opinion spread abroad of their good faith, and clearness belt of dealing, made them almost invisible.

w k-

us-

icy

en

1-nt i.

71,

d

n d

d

đ

,

t

There are three degrees of this hiding and veiling of Mans felf. The first Closeness, Reservation, and Secrecy; when a Man leaveth himself without observation, or without hold to be taken what he is. The Second Diffimulation in the Negative, when a Man lets fall Signs and Arguments, that he is not that he is. And the third Simulation in the Affirmative, when a Man industriously and expresly feigns and pretends to be that he is not.

For the first of these, Secrecy: It is indeed the vertue of a Confessor; and assuredly the Secret Man heareth many Confessions: For who will open himself to a Blab, or a Babler? But if a man be thought Secret, it inviteth discovery, as the more close Air sucketh in the more open; And as in confession, the revealing is not for worldly use, but for the ease of a Mans heart; so Secret, Men come to the knowledge of many things in that kind, while Men rather discharge their minds, than impart their minds. In few words, Mysteries are due to Secrecy. · Besides (to say truth) Nakedness is uncomely, as well in mind as in body; and it addeth no fmall reverence to Mens manners and actions, if they be not altogether open. As for Talkers, and Futile persons, they are commonly vain, and credulous withal. For he that talketh what he knoweth, will also talk what he knoweth not. Therefore fet it down, that an habit of Secrecy is both politick and moral. And in this part it is good, that a Mans face give his tongue leave to speak. For the difcovery of Mans felf, by the tracts of his countenance, is a great weakness and betraying, by how much it is many times more marked and believed, than a Mans words.

For the fecond, which is Diffimulation: It followed many times upon Secrecy by a necessity; fo that he the will be Secret, must be a Diffembler in some degree. For men are too cunning, to suffer a man to keep an india ferent carriage between both, and to be Secret without The fwaying the ballance on either fide. They will fo bek of a Man with questions, and draw him on, and pick it of of him, that without an abfurd filence, he must shew a inclination one way; or if he do not, they will gathe as much by his Silence, as by his Speech: As for Equivoris cations, or Oraculous Speeches, they cannot hold ou long: fo that no man can be Secret, except he give him fin felf a little scope of Diffimulation, which is, as it were, but be the skirts or train of Secrecy.

But for the third degree, which is Simulation, and falls profession: That I hold more culpable, and less politick except it be in great and rare matters. And therefore a general custom of Simulation (which is this last degree is a Vice, rising either of a natural falseness or fearful ness, or of a mind that hath some main faults; which because a man must needs disguise, it maketh him practife Simulation in other things, left his hand should be out of use.

The great advantages of Simulation and Dissimulation are three. First, To lay asleep opposition, and to furprife: For where a Mans intentions are published, it is an alarm to call up all that are against them. The second is, to referve to a Mans self a fair retreat: For it a man engage himself by a manifest Declaration, he must go through, or take a fall. The third is, the better to discover the mind of another: For to him that opens himself, Men will hardly shew themselves averse, but will (fair) let him go on, and turn their freedom of fpeech to freedom of thought. And therefore it is a good shrewd Proverb of the Spaniard, Tell a Lye, and find a Truth; as if there were no way of discovery, but by Si mulation.

There

fir

wi do

hi

en

of

to

W

th

Ca D

B

to

ar W

W

p th

g ti

f

th

Fo

di ou

efe

-

the ou

but

alf

ee

Ful. ich

rabe

TON

ur is

fe-

Fif

he ter

ns

out

of

od

Sil

70

There be also three disadvantages to fet it even. The first, That Simulation and Dissimulation commonly carry with them a thew of fearfulness, which in any bufiness doth spoil the feathers of round flying up to the mark. The fecond, That it puzzleth and perplexeth the conceits of many, that perhaps would otherwise co-operate with or him, and makes a man walk almost alone to his own ends. The third and greatest is, That it depriveth a man of one of the most principal instruments for action, which is Trust and Belief. The composition and temperature is, to have Openness in fame and opinion, Secrecy in habit, Difim simulation in seasonable use, and a power to seign, if there be no remedy.

VII.

Of Parents and Children.

THE joys of Parents are fecret, and so are their griefs and fears; they cannot utter the one, nor they will not utter the other. Children fweeten labours, but they make misfortunes more bitter: they increase the cares of Life, but they mitigate the remembrance of Death. The perpetuity by generation is common to Beafts; but memory, merit, and noble works are proper to Men: and furely a man shall see the noblest Works and Foundations have proceeded from Childless Men. which have fought to express the Images of their minds, where those of their bodies have failed: So the care of posterity is most in them that have no posterity. They that are the first raisers of their Houses, are most indulgent towards their Children; beholding them as the continuance, not only of their kind, but of their work, and To both Children and Creatures.

The difference in affection of Parents towards their feval Children, is many times unequal, and fometimes unworthy, especially in the Mother; as Solomon faith, A wife Son rejoyceth the Father, but an ungracious Son shames the Mother. A man shall see, where there is a House full of Children, one or two of the eldest respected, and the youngest made wantons; but in the midst, some that are as it were forgotten, who many times nevertheless prove the best. The illiberality of Parents in allowance towards their Children, is an harmful error, makes them bafe, acquaints them with shifts, makes them fort with mean company, and makes them furfeit more when they come to plenty: and therefore the proof is best, when men keep their authority towards their Children, but not their purfe. Men have a foolish manner (both Parents, and School-Masters, and Servants) in creating and breeding an emulation between Brothers, during Childhood, which many times forteth to difcord when they are men, and disturbeth Families. The Italians make little difference between Children and Nephews, or near Kinsfolks; but fo they be of the lump they care not, though they pels not through their own body. And to fay truth, in Nature it is much alike matter, infomuch that we fee a New phew fometimes refembleth an Uncle, or a Kinfman. more than his own Parent, as the blood happens. Let Parents chuse betimes the vocations and courses they mean their Children should take, for then they are most flexible; and let them not too much apply themselves to the disposition of their Children, as thinking they will take best to that which they have most mind to. It is true, that if the affection or aptness of the Children be extraordinary, then it is good not to cross it: but generally the precept is good, Optimum elige, suave & facile illud fait consuetudo, younger Brothers are commonly fortunate, but seldom or never where the elder are difinherited.

ħ

VIII.

the

ove

ac-

ean

me

nen

neir

ind ing ich

ind nce

out

la-

ve

in,

et

ey es

ill

15

be

e le

1-

Of Marriage and Single Life.

TE that hath Wife and Children, hath given hoftages To Fortune, for they are impediments to great enterprises, either of Vertue or Mischief. Certainly the best works, and of greatest merit for the publick, have proceeded from the unmarried or Childless Men, which both in affection and means have married and endowed the publick. Yet it were great reason, that those that have Children, should have greatest care of future times, unto which they know they must transmit their dearest pledges. Some there are, who though they lead a Single Life, yet their thoughts do end with themselves, and account future times impertinencies. Nay, there are some other, that account Wife and Ghildren but as Bills of Charges. Nay, more, there are fome foolish rich covetous men, that take pride in having no Children, because they may be thought so much the richer. For perhaps they have heard fome talk, Such an one is a great rich Man; and another except to it, Yea, but be bath a great charge of Children; as if it were an abatement to his riches. But the most ordinary cause of a Single Life is Liberty, especially in certain self-pleafing and humorous minds, which are fo fenfible of every reftraint, as they will go near to think their Girdles and Garters to be Bonds and Shackles. Unmarried men' are best Friends, best Masters, best Servants, but not always best Subjects; for they are light to run away, and almost all Fugitives are of that condition. A single life doth well with Church-men: for Charity will hard y water the Ground, where it must first fill a Pool. It is indifferent for Judges and Magistrates; for if they be facile and corrupt, you shall have a Servant five times worle than a Wife. For Souldiers, I find the Generals common y

to vf Pel

commonly in their hortatives put men in mind of their Wives and Children. And I think the despising of Marriage amongst the Turks, making the vulgar Souldier more base. Certainly Wife and Children are a kind of humanity; and Single men, though they be many times more charitable, because their means are less exhaust: yet on the other fide, they are more cruel and hard hearted, (good to make fevere Inquifitors) because their tenderness is not so oft called upon. Grave natures, led by cuftom, and therefore conffant, are commonly loving Husbands; as was faid of Ulyffes, Vetulam fuam pratulit immortalitati. Chast Women are often proud and froward, as prefuming upon the merit of their chaftity. It is one of the best bonds both of chastity and obedience in the Wife, if the thinks her Husband wife, which she will never do, if she find him jealous. Wives are young mens Miftriffes, Companions for middle Age, and old mens Nurses; so as a man may have a quarrel to marry when he will. But yet he was reputed one of the wife men, that made answer to the question; When a man should marry? A young man not yet, an elder man not at all. It is often feen, that bad Husbands have very good Wives; whether it be, that it raiseth the price of their Husbands kindness when it comes, or that the Wives take a pride in their patience. But this never fails, if the bad Husbands were of their own chusing, against their Friends consent; for then they will be sure to make good their own folly.

IX.

Of Envy.

THERE be none of the Affections, which have been noted to facinate or bewitch, but Love and Envy. They both have vehement wishes, they frame themselves felves readily into imaginations and fuggestions; and they come easily into the eye, especially upon the presence of the objects, which are the points that conduce to fastination, if any such thing there be. We see likewise the Scripture calleth Envy, an evil eye; and the Association of the Stars, Evil Association; so that still there seemeth to be acknowledged in the act of Envy, an ejaculation or irradiation of the Eye. Nay, some have been so curious, as to note, that the times, when the stroke or percussion of an Environs Eye doth most hurt, are, when the Party envised is beheld in Glory or Triumph; for that sets an edge upon Envy: And besides, at such times the spirits of the Person envised do come forth most into the outward parts, and so meet the blow.

But leaving these curiosities, (though not unworthy to be thought on in fit place) we will handle, What Persons are apt to envy others, what Persons are most subject to be envised themselves, and what is the difference between publick and private Erroy.

cir

nes ft:

rd

eig

ed

0-eid

y. ih

A man that hath no virtue in himself, ever evolute virtue in others. For mens minds will either feed upon their own good, or upon others evil; and who wanteth the one, will pray upon the other; and who so is out of hope to attain to anothers vertue, will seek to come at even-hand by depressing anothers Fortune.

A man that is busie and inquisitive, is commonly Envious: for to know much of other mens matters cannot be, because all that ado may concern his estate; therefore it must needs be, that he taketh a kind of playpleasure in looking upon the fortunes of others; neither can he that mindeth but his own business, find much matter for Envy: For Envy is a gadding passion, and walketh the Streets, and doth not keep home, Non assert curiosus, quin idem sit malevolus.

Men of noble Birth are noted to be excious towards new Men when they rife; For the diffance is altered; and it is like a deceit of the eye, that when others come on, they think themselves go back.

C 2

Deformed persons, and Eunuchs, and old Men, and Bastards are envious: for he that cannot possibly mend his own case, will do what he can to impair anothers, except these defects light upon a very brave and heroical nature, which thinketh to make his natural wants part of his honour; in that it should be said, that an Eunuch, or lame man, did such great matters, affecting the honour of a miracle, as it was in Narses the Eunuch, and Agesilaus, and Tamberlanes, that were lame men.

The same is the case of men that rise after calamities and missortunes; for they are as men sallen out with the times, and think other mens harms a Redemption of their own fufferings.

They that defire to excel in too many matters, out of levity and vain glory, are ever Envious; For they cannot want work, it being impossible but many in some one of those things should surpass them; which was the character of Adrian the Emperour, that mortally envied Poets and Painters, and Artificers in works wherein he had a vein to excel.

Lastly, near Kinsfolks and Fellows in Office, and those that have been bred together, are more apt to Ency their equals, when they are raised: For it doth upbraid unto them their own fortunes, and pointeth at them, and cometh oftner into their remembrance, and incurreth likewise more into the note of others; and Ency ever redoubleth from Speech and Fame. Cain's Ency was the more vile and malignant towards his Brother Abel, because when his Sacrifice was better accepted, there was no body to look on. Thus much for those that are apt to Ency.

Concerning those that are more or less subject to Envy: First, Persons of eminent virtue, when they are advanced are less envied: For their fortune seemeth but due unto them; and no man enverth the payment of a Debt.

bu

VE

W

to

th te

21

E

it

fo

th E

0 16

P

1

i

but Rewards and Liberality rather. Again, Envy is ever loyned with the comparing of a man's felf; and where there is no comparison, no Envy; and therefore Kings are not envied, but by Kings. Nevertheless it is to be noted, that unworthy persons are most envied at their first coming in, and afterwards overcome it better; whereas contrariwise, Persons of worth and merit are most envied, when their fortune continueth long. For by that time, though their virtue be the same, yet it hath not the same Lustre; for fresh men grow up that darken it.

Perfons of noble blood are less envied in their rising; for it seemeth but right done to their Birth. Besides, there seemeth not much added to their fortune; and Envy is as the Sun-beams, that beat hotter upon a Bank or steep rising Ground, than upon a Flat. And for the same reasons, those that are advanced by degrees are less envied, than those that are advanced suddenly, and per Caltum.

ne.

bn

nd

rs,

ni-

its

in tune

es h

of

of

1-C.

d

e

1

Those that have joyned with their Honour great Travels, Cares or Perils, are less subject to Envy: For men think that they earn their Honours hardly, and pity them fometimes; and Pity ever healeth Envy: Wherefore you shall observe, that the more deep and fober fort of politick Persons in their greatness, are ever bemoaning themselves, what a life they lead, chanting Quanta patimur. Not that they feel it fo, but only to abate the edge of Envy. But this is to be understood of business that is laid upon men, and not such as they call unto themselves. For nothing increaseth Envy more than an unnecessary and ambitious engrossing of bufines; and nothing doth extinguish Envy more, than for a great Person to preserve all other inferior Officers in their full rights and preheminencies of their places: for by that means there be fo many Skreens between him and Envy.

Above all, those are most subject to Envy which carry the greatness of their fortunes in an infolent and from the manner, being never well but while they are shewing how great they are, either by outward pompor by triumphing over all opposition or competition whereas wife men will rather do Sacrifice to Evry, in suffering themselves sometimes of purpose to be cross and over-born of things that do not much concern them. Notwithstanding so much is true, That the carriage of greatness in a plain and open manner (so it be without arrogancy and vain-glory) doth draw less Evry, than if it be in a more crasty and cunning fashion. For in that course a man doth but disavow fortune, and seemeth to be conscious of his own want in worth, and doth but teach others to Envy him.

C'3

Lastly, To conclude this part; As we said in the beginning, that the Act of Envy had somewhat in it of witchcrast, so there is no other cure of Envy but the cure of witchcrast; and that is, to remove the Lot (at they call it) and to lay it upon another. For which purpose, the wiser sort of great Persons, bring in ever upon the Stage some body upon whom to drive the Envy that would come upon themselves; sometimes upon Ministers and Servants, sometimes upon Colleagues and Associates, and the like; and for that turn there are never wanting some Persons of violent and undertaking Natures, who, so they may have Power and Business, will take it at any cost.

Now to speak of publick Envy. There is yet some good in publick Envy; whereas in private there is none. For publick Envy is an Ostracism, that eclipseth men when they grow too great. And therefore it is a bridle also to great ones, to keep them within bounds.

This Envy being in the Latine word Invidia, goeth in the modern Languages by the name of Discontentment, of which we shall speak in handling Sedition. It is a disease in a State like to insection; for as insection spreadeth upon that which is sound, and tainteth it; so when Envy is gotten once in a State, it traduceth even the best actions thereof, and turneth them into an ill

OUCH!

odour. And therefore there is little won by intermingling of plausible actions. For that doth argue but a weakness and fear of Envy, which hurteth fo much the more, as it is likewise usual in infections; which if you fear them, you call them upon you.

This publick Envy seemeth to bear chiefly upon principal Officers or Ministers, rather than upon Kings and Estates themselves. But this is a sure rule, that if the Envy upon the Ministers be great, when the cause of it in him is small; or if the Envy be general, in a manner, upon all the Ministers of an Estate, then the Envy (though hidden) is truly upon the State it self. And so much of publick Envy or Discontentment, and the difference thereof from private Envy, which was handled in the first place.

omp

r, in cem

car.

En

ion.

and

be-

of ich

ver

En-

on

nd

re

ng

ß,

ne ic.

en lo

1-

le n We will add this in general, touching the Affection of Envy; that, of all other Affections, it is the most importune and continual. For of other Affections there is occasion given but now and then. And therefore it was well said, Invidia festos dies non agis. For it is ever working upon some or other. And it is also noted, that Love and Envy do make a man pine, which other Affections do not; because they are not so continual. It is also the vilest Affection, and the most depraved: for which cause it is the proper Attribute of the Devil, who is called the envious Man, that soweth Tares amongst the Wheat by night: as it always cometh to pass, that Envy worketh subtilly, and in the dark, and to the prejudice of good things, such as is the Wheat.

X.

Of Love.

THE Stage is more beholding to Love than the Life of Man. For, as to the Stage, Love is even matter of Comedies, and now and then of Traggdies: but in C 4 oh

d

1

1 1

t

.

Life it doth much mischief; sometimes like a Syra fometimes like a Fury. You may observe, that among all the great and worthy persons (whereof the Memo ry remaineth, either Ancient or Recent) there is not one that hath been transported to the mad degree of Love: which shew, that great Spirits, and great Businels, do keep out this weak Passion. You must except nevertheless, Marcus Antonius, the half Partner of the Empire of Rome; and Appins Claudius the Decemvir, the Law-giver: whereof the former was indeed a Voluptuous Man, and Inordinate: but the Latter was an Auftere and Wife Man. And therefore it feems, (though rarely) that Love can find entrance, not only into an open Heart, but also into a Heart well fortified, if watch be not well kept. It is a poor faying of Epicurus, Satis magnum Alter Alteri Theatrum sumus. As if Man. made for the contemplation of Heaven, and all noble Objects, should do nothing but kneel before a little Idol, and make himself a Subject, though not of the Mouth (as Beafts are) yet of the Eye, which was given him for higher purposes. It is a strange thing to note the Excess of this passion; and how it braves the Nature and value of things by this, that the speaking in a perpetual Hyperbole is comely in nothing but in Love. Neither is it meerly in the Phrase: for, whereas it had been well faid, that the Arch-flatterer, with whom all the petry flatterers have intelligence, is a Man's felf; certainly, the Love is more. For there was never a proud Man thought fo abfurdly well of himfelf, as the Lover doth of the Person Loved: and therefore it was well said, that it is impossible to Love, and to be wife. Neither doth this weakness appear to others only, and not to the Party Loved: but to the Loved most of all; except the Love be reciproque: for it is a true rule, that Love is ever rewarded, either with the reciproque, or with an inward and fecret Contempt. By how much the more men ought to beware of this Passion, which loseth not only other things, but it felf. As for the other loffes, ngl

mo not e qi

cepe

the

the up-

Au-

ıgh

an

if

us,

an.

ble

L

he

en

ote

re

ereien

r-er U

e

b

t

the Poets Relation doth well figure them; that he that preferreth Helena, quitterh the gifts of Juno and Pallas. For whofoever effeemeth too much of amorous affection, quirteth both Riches and Wisdom. This Passion hath his Floods in the very times of weakness: which are great Prosperity, and great Adversity; though this latter hath been less observed. Both which times kindle Love, and make it more frequent, and therefore shew it to be the Child of Folly. They do best, who, if they cannot but admit Love; yet make it keep Quarter, and fever it wholly from their ferious Affairs and Actions of Life: for if it check once with Business, it troubleth mens Fortunes, and maketh men that they can no ways he true to their own Ends. I know not how, but marrial men are given to Love; I think it is but as they are given to Wine; for Perils commonly ask to be paid in Pleasures. There is in a mans Nature a fecret Inclination and Motion towards Love of others; which if it be not fpent upon fome one, or a few, doth naturally foread it felf towards many, and maketh nien become Humane and Charitable; as it is feen fometime in Friars. Nuptial Love maketh Mankind; Friendly Love perfecteth it; but wanton Love corrupteth and embaseth it.

XI.

Of Great Place.

MEN in Great Place are thrice Servants: Servants of the Soveraign or State; Servants of Fame; and Servants of Rusiness. So as they have no Freedom, either in their Persons, nor in their Actions, nor in their Times. It is a strange desire to seek Power, and to lose Liberty; or to seek Power over others, and to lose Power over a Mans self. The Rising unto Place is laborious; and by Pains men come to greater Pains: and it is sometimes

to 21

Ы

£

k

ti

M

I

t

1

1

1

times base; and by Indignities men come to Dignit The Standing is Slippery, and the Regress is either Downfall, or at leaft an Eclipse, which is a melanch ly thing. Cum non fis, qui fueris, non effe, cur velis vi ve. Nay, retire men cannot when they would: n ther will they, when it were Reason: but are impa ent of Privateness, even in Age and Sickness, which require the Shadow: Like old Townsmen; that w be still string at their Street Door, though thereby th offer Age to Scorn. Certainly Great Persons had nee to borrow other mens Opinions, to think themsely happy; for if they judge by their own feeling, the cannot find it: but if they think with themselves wh other men think of them, and that other men wou fain be as they are, then they are happy, as it were h report; when perhaps they find the contrary within For they are the first that find their own griefs; thou they be the last that find their own fault. Certains Men, in great Fortunes are firangers to themselves, an while they are in the puzzle of Bufiness, they have n time to tend their Health, either of body or mind. I Mors gravis incubat, qui notus nimis omnibus, ignotus mor tur fibi. In Place, there is licence to do Good and Evil whereof the latter is a curse; for in Evil, the best con dition is not to Will, the second not to Can. But Power to do good, is the true and lawful end of afpiring for good thoughts (though God accept them,) yet towards Men are little better than good dreams, except they be put in Act; and that cannot be without Power and Place, as the Vantage and Commanding Ground Merit and good Works is the end of mans motion; and Conscience of the same is the accomplishment of man rest: for if a man can be partaker of God's Theaters he shall likewise be partaker of God's Rest. Et converfus Deus, ut aspiceret opera, que fecerunt manus sue, vidit quod omnia effent bona nimis; And then the Sabbath. In the Discharge of thy Place, set before thee the best Examples; for Imitation is a Globe of Precepts. And a er a time fet before thee thine own Example; and examine thy felf frietly whether thou didft not best at first. Neglect not also the Examples of those that have carried themselves ill in the same Place: not to fet off thy felf by taxing their memory; but to direct thy falf what to avoid. Reform therefore without bravery or foundal of former Times and Persons; but yet let it down to thy felf, as well to create good precedents as to follow them. Reduce things to the first Institution, and observe wherein, and how they have degenerated: but yet ask Counfel of both Times, of the Ancienter Time what is best, and of the Latter Time what is fitreft. Seek to make thy Courfe Regular, that men may know before hand what they may expect, but be not too positive and peremptory; and express thy self well when thou digreffest from thy Rule. Preferve the right of thy Place, but ftir not questions of Jurisdiction; and rather affume thy Right in Silence and de facto, than voice it with Claims and Challenges. Preferve likewife the Right of Inferior Places; and think it more Honour to direct in chief, than to be busie in all. Embrace and invite Helps and Advices, touching the Execution of thy Place: and do not drive away fuch as bring Information, as medlers, but accept of them in good part. The Vices of Authority are chiefly four: Delays, Corruption, Roughness and Faction. For Delays, Give easie access, Keep Times appointed, Go through with that which is in hand, and interlace not business but of necessity. For Corruption, Not only bind thine own hands, or thy Servents hands from taking, but bind the hands of Suitors also from offering: For integrity used, down the one; but Integrity professed, and with a manifest dereflation of Bribery, doth the other; and avoid not on-ly the Pault, but the Suspicion. Whosoever is found variable, and changeth manifestly, without manifest Caufe, giveth fuspicion of Corruption. Therefore always when thou changest thine opinion or course, profess it lainly, and declare it, together with the Reasons that move parties the parties of the parties o ig to SP wind in

CM C;

H

MAN PER

move thee to change, and do not think to fleal it. Servant, or a Favourite, if he be inward, and no other apparent Cause of Esteem, is commonly thought but a By-way to close Corruption. For Roughness, It is a need less cause of Discontent; Severity breedeth Fear, but Roughness breedeth Hate. Even Reproofs from Autho rity ought to be grave, and not taunting. As for Fa cility, It is worse than Bribery: for Bribes come but now and then; but if Importunity, or idle Respects lead a Man, he shall never be without, as Solomon faith, To respect Persons is not good; for such a Man will transgress for a piece of bread. It is most true that was ancily spoken; A Place sheweth the Man: and it sheweth fome to the better, and some to the worse: Omnium consensu; capax Imperii, nisi imperasset; faith Tacitus of Galba: but of Vefpasian he faith, Solus imperantium Vespasianus mutatus in melius. Though the one was meant of Sufficiency, the other of Manners and Affection. It is an affured Sign of a worthy and merous Spirit, whom Honour amends: for Honour is, or should be, the place of Vertue; and as in Nature things move violently to their place, and calmly in their place: fo Vertue in Ambition is violent, in Authority fettled and calm. All rising to Great Place, is by a winding Stair; and if there be Factions, it is good to side a Mans self, whilst he is in the Rifing; and to balance himself when he is placed. Use the memory of thy Predecessor fairly and tenderly; for if thou doft not, it is a debt will fure be paid when thou art gone. If thou have Colleagues, respect them, and rather call them when they look not for it, than exclude them when they have reason to look to be called. Be not too fensible, or too remembring. of thy Place in Conversation, and private Answers to Suitors; But let it rather be faid, When he fits in Place he is another Man.

Design

gair nat

tra

号思

ion E V

S a W

he

W

Ar

in ha

he

he:

n

an n

er

N.

Bo

ha

XII.

Of Boldness.

出がらせるる ol is

m œ

o.

1-11 re

is

d

e .

E

k.

2

0

TI is a trivial Grammar-School Text, but yet worthy a wife Mans confideration. Question was asked of Demostbenes, What was the chief part of an Orator? He answered, Action; What next? Action; What next again? Action; He faid it that knew it best, and had by hature himself no advantage in that he commended. A trange thing, that that part of an Orator which is but uperficial, and rather the vertue of a Player, should be blaced to high above those other noble parts of Invenion, Elecution, and the reft: Nay, almost alone; as if were All in All. But the reason is plain. There is n Humane Nature generally more of the Fool than of the Wife; and therefore those faculties, by which he foolish part of mens minds is taken are most potent. Wonderful like is the case of Boldness in civil business: What first? Boldness; What second and third? Boldness. And yet Boldness is a Child of Ignorance and Baseness, ar inferior to other parts. But nevertheless it doth fat-tinate and bind hand and foot, those that are either hallow in judgment, or weak in courage, which are he greatest part; yea, and prevaileth with wife men it weak times. Therefore we fee it hath done Wonders n popular States, but with Senates and Princes less; and more, ever upon the first entrance of Bold Persons nto action, than foon after: for Boldness is an ill Keeper of Promise. Surely, as there are Mountebanks for the Natural Body, so are there Mountebanks for the Politick Body: Men that undertake great Cures, and perhaps have been lucky in two or three Experiments, but want the grounds of Science, and therefore cannot hold out. Nay, you shall see a Bold Fellow many times do Mabenet's miracle: Mahomet made the People believe, that he would call an Hill to him; and from the top of offer up his Prayers for the observers of his Law. T people affembled, Mahomet called the Hill to him aga and again; and when the Hill flood still, he was n ver a whit abashed, but said, If the Hill will not come Mahomet, Mahomet will go to the Hill. So these me when they have promifed great matters, and failed me flamefully, yet (if they have the perfection of Boldman they will but flight it over, and make a turn, and more ado. Certainly to men of great judgment, Bo perfors are a fport to behold; nay, and to the Vulg alfo, Boldnefs hath fomewhat of the Ridiculous. For absurdicy be the subject of laughter, doubt you no but great Boldness is feldom without some absurding Especially it is a sport to see, when a Bold Fellow is of of countenance; for that puts his face into a mo flaunken and wooden posture, as needs it must: for bathfulness the Spirits do a little go and come, but wi Bold men, upon like occasion, they stand at a stay, lil a Stale or Chefs, where it is no Mate, but yet the Gam cannot ffir. But this last were fitter for a Satyr tha for a ferious Observation. This is well to be weigher That Boldness is ever blind; for it feeth not dange and inconveniencies; therefore it is ill in Counfe good in Execution: fo that the right use of Bold per fors in that they never command in Chief, but be S conds, and under the direction of others. For in Coun fel it is good to fee Dangers, and in Execution not to fe them, except they be very great.

is

With

an In

C in

D'S TE

de

it

is

N

T

XIII.

Of Goodness, and Goodness of Nature.

Take Goodness in this sence, the affecting of the we of Men, which is that the Grecians call Philanthropis and the Word Humanity (as it is used) is a little too high

Of Goodness, and Goodness of Nature. 31

to express it. Goodness I call the Habit, and Goodness of Nature the Inclination. This of all Vertues and Dignities of the mind is the greatest, being the Character of the Deity; and without it man is a busie, mischievous wretched thing, no better than a kind of Vermine. Gudness answers to the Theological Vertue, Chariny, and admits no excess, but error. The defire of power in troefs caused the Angels to fall; the defire of knowledge in excels caused Man to fall; but in Charity there is no excess, neither can Angel or Man come in danger by it. The inclination of Goodness is imprinted deeply in the nature of man; infomuch, that if it iffue not towards men, it will take unto other living Creatures; as is seen in the Turks, a cruel people, who nevertheless are kind to Beafts, and give Alms to Dogs and Birds: Infornuch as Busbeebius reporteth, a Christian Boy in Confirmtinople had like to have been stoned for gagging. in a waggifnness, a long-billed Fowl. Errors indeed, in this Vertue, in Goodne's or Charity may be committed. The Italians have an ungracious Proverb, Tanto buon che val niente; So good that he is good for nothing. And one of the Doctors of Italy, Nicholas Macchiavel, had the conidence to put in writing, almost in plain terms, The the Christian Faith had given up good men in prey to those that are tyrannical and unjust: which he spake, because indeed there was never Law, or Sect, or Opinion, did to much magnific Goodness as the Christian Religion doth: therefore, to avoid the fcandal, and danger both, it is good to take knowledge of the errors of an Habit fo excellent. Seek the good of other men, but be not in bondage to their faces or fancies; for that is but facility or foftness, which taketh an honest mind prisoner. Neither give the Afop's Cock a Gem, who would be better pleased and happier if he had had a Barly Corn. The Example of God teacheth the Lesson truly: He Souderb bis Rain, and maketh his Sun to shine upon the Just Unjust; but he doth not rain Wealth, nor shine Henour and Virtues upon Men equally. Common Be-

i

F

Itt

1

f

t

• 1

j

t

nefits are to be communicated with all; but peculiar be nefits with choice. And beware, how in making the Portraiture, thou breakest the Pattern; for Divinity maketh the love of our felves the Pattern; the love of our Neighbours but the Portraiture. Sell all thou bat and give it to the poor, and follow me: but fell not a thou haft, except thou come and follow me; that is, except thou have a Vocation, wherein thou mayft do a much good with little means as with great: for otherwife, in feeding the Streams thou drieft the Fountain. Neither is there only a Habit of Goodness directed by right Reason: but there is in some Men, even in Nature, a disposition towards it; as on the other side, there is a natural malignity. For there be that in their Nature do not affect the good of others. The lighter fort of malignity turneth but to crossness, or frowardnels, or aptnels to oppose, or difficileness, or the like: but the deeper fort to envy and meer mischief. Such men in other mens calamities, are as it were in feafon, and are ever on the loading part; not fo good as the Dogs that licked Lazarus's fores, but like Flies, that are fill buzzing upon any thing that is raw; Mifantbrop, that make it their practice to bring men to the Bough, and yet have never a Tree for the purpose in their Gardens, as Timon had. Such dispositions are the very errors of Humane Nature; and yet they are the fittelf Timber to make great Politicks of: like to knee-Timber, that is good for Ships that are ordained to be toffed, but not for building Houses, that shall stand firm. The parts and figns of Goodness are many. If a Man be gracious and courteous to Strangers, it shews he is a Citizen of the world; and that his heart is no Island cut off from other Lands, but a Continent that joyns to them. If he be compassionate towards the afflictions of others, it shews that his heart is like the noble Tree, that is wounded it felf, when it gives the Balm. If he eafily pardons and remits offences, it shews that his mind is planted above Injuries, fo that he cannot be shot. If he be thankful for small benefits, it shews that he weighs mens minds, and not their trash. But above all, if he have Saint Paul's perfection, that he would wish to be an Anathema from Christ, for the Salvation of his Brethren, it shews much of a Divine Nature, and a kind of conformity with Christ himself.

XIV.

Of Nobility.

er in by la le it er d

e;

252

時的主文社とは、日

N/E will fpeak of Nobility, First as a Portion of an Estate, then as a Condition of Particular Persons. A Monarchy, where there is no Nobility at all, is ever a pure and absolute Tyramy, as that of the Turks, for Nobility attempers Soveraignty, and draws the eyes of the People somewhat aside from the Line Royal. But for Democracies they need it not: and they are commonly more quiet, and less subject to Sedition, than where there are Stirps of Nobles. For mens eyes are upon the business, and not upon the persons; or if upon the perfons, it is for business sake, as the fittelt, and not for flags and pedigree. We see the Switzers last well, notwithflanding their diversity of Religion, and of Cantons: for Utility is their Bond, and not Respects. The United Provinces of the Low-Countries in their Government excel: for where there is an equality, the Confultations are more indifferent, and the payments and tributes more chearful. A great and potent Nobility addeth Majesty to a Monarch, but diminisheth Power; and putteth Life and Spirit into the People, but preffeth their Fortune. It is well when Nobles are not too great for Soveraignty, nor for justice; and yet maintained in that height, as the Infolency of Inferiours may be broken upon them, before it come on too fast upon the Majesty of Kings. 'A numerous Nobility causeth Poverty and inconvenience in a State: for it is a furcharge of expence; and belides, it being of necessity that many of the Nobility fall in time to be weak in Fortune, it maketh a kind of Disproportion between Honour and Means.

As for Nobility in particular Persons, It is a reverend thing to fee an ancient Castle or Building not in decay; or to fee a fair Timber Tree found and perfect : how much more to behold an Ancient Noble Family, which hath flood against the Waves and Weathers of Time. For New Nobility is but the Act of Power; but Ancient Nobility is the Act of Time. Those that are first raifed to Nebility are commonly more virtuous, but less innocent than their Descendents; for there is rarely any Rifing, but by a commixture of good and evil Arts. But it is reason the memory of their Vertues remain to their Posterity; and their faults die with themselves. Nubility of Birth commonly abateth industry; and he that is not industrious, envieth him that is. Belides, Noble Ressons cannot go much higher; and he that standeth at a flay when others rife, can hardly avoid motions of Envy. On the other fide, Nobility extinguisheth the Passive. Envy from others towards them; because they are in possession of Honour. Certainly Kings that have able Men of their Nobility, shall find ease in employing them, and a better flide into their business: for people naturally bend to them, as born in some fort to command.

XV.

Of Seditions and Iroubles.

Shepherds of People had need know the Kalenders of Tempests in State; which are commonly greatest when things grow to equality; as natural Tempests are greatest about the Aquimettic. And as the to are certain rain hollow blafts of Wind, and fecret swellings of Seas before a Tempest, so are there in States.

Sape monet, Fraudesque & operta tumescere Bella.

d

d

h

e

Libels and Licentious Discourses against the State, when they are frequent and open; and in like sort, false News often running up and down to the disadvantage of the State, and hastily embraced; are amongst the Signs of Troubles. Virgil giving the pedigree of Fame, saith, She was Sifter to the Gyants.

Illam Terra Parens ira irritata Deorum, Extremam (ut perbibent) Cæo Enceladoque sororem Pregenuit, minora sur re As if Fames were the Relicks of Seditions past; but they are no less indeed, the Preludes of Seditions to come. Howfoever he noteth it right, That Seditious Tumults, and Sedition Fames, differ no more but as Brother and Sifter, Masculine and Ferninine; especially if it come to that, that the best Actions of a State, and the most plaufible, and which ought to give greatest contentment, are taken in ill fence, and traduced: for that shews the envy great, as Tackus faith, Conflata magna Invidia, fem bene, feu male, gefta premunt. Neither doth it follow, that because these Fames are a sign of Troubles, that the suppressing of them with too much severity, should be a Remedy of Troubles: for the despising of them many times checks them best; and the going about to stop them, doth but make a Wonderlong-

Also that kind of obedience which Tacitus speaketh of is to be held suspected; Erant in officio, sed tamen qui mallini mandata Imperantium interpretari, quam exequi; Disputing, Excusing, Cavilling upon Mandates and Directions, is a kind of shaking off the yoak, and essay of disobedience; especially, if in those Disputings, they which are for the direction, speak fearfully and tenderly; and those that are against it audaciously.

D 2

Alfo, as Machiavel noteth well; when Princes, that ought to be common Parents, make themselves as a Party, and lean to a fide, it is a Boat that is overthrown by uneaven weight on the one fide; as was well feen in the time of Hemy the third of France : for first himfelf entred League for the extirpation of the Protestants, and prefently after the fame League was turned upon himself: for when the Authority of Princes is made but an Accessary to a Cause, and that there are other Bands that tie faster than the Band of Soveraignty, Kings begin to be almost put out of possession.

Alfo, when Difcords, and Quarrels, and Factions are carried openly and audaciously, it is a figh the Reverence of Government is loft. For the Motions of the greatest Persons in a Government, ought to be as the motions of the Planets under Primum Mobile (according to the old Opinion:) which is, that every of them is carried fwiftly by the highest Motion, and foftly in their own Motion. And therefore when great Ones in their own particular Motion move violently; and as Tacitus expresseth it well, Liberius quam ut Imperantium meminissent, it is a fign the Orbs are out of Frame: for Reverence is that wherewith Princes are girt from God, who threatneth the diffolving thereof; Solvan cingula Regum.

So when any of the four Pillars of Government are mainly shaken or weakned, (which are Religion, Justice, Counsel, and Treasure) Men had need to pray for fair weather.

But let us pass from this part of Predictions (concerning which, nevertheless, more light may be taken from that which followeth) and let us speak first of the Materials of Seditions; then of the Motives of them; and thirdly, of the Remedies.

er-

at

n

in n-

ts,

nut

e-

15 as

Cal

of

d

et!

7-

f

e

e,

,

r

e

Concerning the Materials of Seditions; It is a thing well to be confidered: For the furest way to prevent Seditions (if the times do bear it) is to take away the matter of them. For if there be fuel prepared, it is hard to tell whence the spark shall come that shall fet it on fire. The Matter of Seditions is of two kinds; much Poverty and much Discontentment. It is certain, so many Overthrown Estates, so many votes for Troubles. Lucap noteth well the State of Rome before the Civil War.

Hinc Usura vorax, rapidumque in tempore Fanus, Hinc concussa Fides, & multis utile Bellum.

This same multis utile Bellum is an affured and infallible fign of a State disposed to Seditions and Troubles. And if this Poverty and broken Estate in the better fort. be joyned with a want and necessity in the mean People, the danger is eminent and great; for the Rebellions of the Belly are the worst. As for Discontentments, they are in the Politick Body like to Humours in the Natural, which are apt to gather pre-natural Heat, and to enflame. And let no Prince measure the danger of them by this, whether they be just or unjust: for that were to imagine People to be too reasonable, who do often fourn at their own good: nor yet by this, whether the griefs whereupon they rife, be in fact great or small: for they are the most dangerous Discontentments, where the fear is greater than the feeling. Dolendi modus, Timendi non item. Besides, in great Oppresfions, the same things that provoke the Patience, do withal make the courage; but in fears it is not fo. Neither let any Prince or State be fecure concerning Discontentments because they have been often, or have been long, and yet no Peril hath enfued; for as it is true, that every Vapour or Fume doth not turn into a Storm: So it is nevertheless true, that Storms though they blow over divers times, yet may fall at last: and as the Spanish Proverb noteth well; The Cord breaketh at the last by the weakest pull. The The Causes and Motions of Seditions are, Innovation in Religion, Taxes, Alteration of Laws and Customs, breaking of Privileges, General Oppression, Advancement of unworthy Persons, Strangers, Dearths, Disbanded Souldiers, Factions grown desperate. And whatsoever in offending People, joyneth and knitteth them in a Common Cause.

For the Remedies; there may be some general Prefervatives whereof we will speak; as for the just Cure, it must answer to the particular Disease, and so be lest to Counsel rather than Rule.

The first Remedy or Prevention is, to remove by all means possible that Material Cause of Sedition, whereof we speak; which is Want and Poverty in the Estate. To which purpole ferveth the Opening and well Ballancing of Trade, the Cherishing of Manufactures, the Banishing of Idleness, the Repressing of Waste and Excess by Sumptuary Laws, the Improvement and Husbanding of the Soyl, the Regulating of Prices of Things vendible, the Moderating of Taxes and Tributes, and the like. Generally it is to be forefeen, that the Population of a Kingdom (especially if it be not mowen down by Wars) do not exceed the Stock of the Kingdom, which should maintain them. Neither is the Population to be reckoned only by number; for a imaller number that fpend more, and earn less, do wear out an Estate sooner than a greater number that live lower, and gather more. Therefore the multiplying of Nobility, and other Degrees of Quality, in an over Proportion to the Common People, doth fpeedily bring a State to Necessity: and so doth likewise an overgrown Clergy, for they bring nothing to the Stock. And in like manner, when more are bred Scholars than Preferments can take off:

It is likewise to be remembred, that for a since has the increase of any Estate must be upon the Foreigners; (for whatsoever is somewhere gotten, is somewhere lost.) There be but three things which one Nation selleth unto another; the Commodity as Nature yielderh it;

the

the Manufacture and the Vecture or Carriage: So that if these three Wheels go, Wealth will flow as in a Springtide. And it cometh many times to pass, that Materiam superabit Opus; that the Work and Carriage is more worth than the Materials, and inricheth a State more: as is notably seen in the Low Country-men, who have the best Mines above Ground in the World.

Above all things good Policy is to be used, that the Treasure and Moneys in a State be not gathered into sew Hands. For otherwise a State may have a great Stock, and yet starve. And Money is like Muck, not good except it be spread. This is done chiefly by suppressing, or at the least keeping a straight hand upon the Devouring Trades of Usury, Ingressing, great Passure-ges, and the like.

ing

ons

le,

e-

re,

f all

of

o

ng h-

y

ig line

1-

n.

i-

ln

For removing Discontentments, or at least the danger of them, there is in every State (as we know) two portions of Subjects, the Nobless and the Commonalty. When one of these is Discontent, the danger is not great: for common people are of flow motion, if they be not excited by the greater fort; and the greater fort are of fmall firength, except the multitude be apt and ready to move of themselves. Then this is the danger, when the greater fort do but wait for the troubling of the Waters amongst the meaner, that then they may declare themselves. The Poets seign, that the rest of the Gods would have bound Jupiter; which he hearing of, by the Counfel of Pallas, fent for Briareus with his hundred hands, to come in to his aid. An Emblem no doubt, to flew how fafe it is for Monarchs to make fure of the good will of common people.

To give moderate liberty for Griefs and Discontentments to evaporate (so it be without too great Infolency or bravery) is a safe way. For he that turnerh the Humours back, and maketh the Wound bleed inwards, endangereth malign Uteers, and perhicious Imposthumations.

The part of Epimetheus might well become Prometheus in the case of Discontentments; for there is not a better provision against them. Epimetheus, when griess and evils slew abroad, at last shut the Lid, and kept Hope in the bottom of the Vessel. Certainly the politick and artificial nourishing and entertaining of Hopes, and carrying men from Hopes to Hopes, is one of the best Antidotes against the Poyson of Discontentments. And it is a certain sign of a wise Government and Proceeding, when it can hold mens hearts by Hopes when it cannot by satisfaction; and when it can handle things in such manner, as no evil shall appear so peremptory but that it hath some out-let of Hope: which is the less hard to do, because both particular Persons and Factions art apt enough to flatter themselves, or at least to brave that which they believe not.

Also the fore-fight and prevention, that there be no likely or fit Head, whereunto Discontented Persons may refort, and under whom they may joyn, is a known, but an excellent point of caution. I understand a fit Head to be one that hath Greatness and Reputation, that hath Confidence with the Discontented Party, and upon whom they turn their eyes; and that is thought Discontented in his own particular; which kind of Perfons are either to be won, and reconciled to the State. and that in a fast and true manner; or to be fronted with some other of the same Party that may oppose them, and fo divide the Reputation. Generally the dividing and breaking of all Factions and Combinations that are adverse to the State, and fetting them at distance, or at least distrust among themselves, is not one of the worst Remedies. For it is a desperate case, if those that hold with the proceeding of the State, be full of Discord and Faction; and those that are against it, be entire and United.

I have noted, that some witty and sharp Speeches, which have fallen from Princes, have given fire to Seditions. Casar did himself infinite hurt in that Speech,

Sylla

f

1

i

0 tl

7

f

Sylla nescript literas, non potuit dictare: for it did utterly cut off that Hope which men had entertained, that he would at one time or other give over his Dictatorship. Galba undid himself by that Speech, Legi à se militem non emi, for it put the Soldiers out of Hope of the Donative. Probus likewise by that speech, Si vixero, non opuserit amplius Romano Imperio militibus: A Speech of great despair for the Soldiers: And many the like. Surely Princes had need, in tender matters, and ticklish times, to beware what they say; especially in these short Speeches, which say abroad like Darts, and are thought to be shot out of their secret Intentions. For as for large Discourses, they are slat things, and not so much noted.

Lastly, Let Princes against all Events not be without some great Person, one, or rather more, of Military Valour near unto them, for the repressing of Seditions in their beginnings. For without that, there useth to be more trepidation in Court, upon the first breaking out of Troubles, than were sit. And the State runneth the danger of that, which Tacitus saith; Atque is babitus animorum suit, ut pessimum facinus auderent pauci, plures vellent, omnes paterentur. But let such Military Persons be assured, and well reputed of, rather than Factious and Popular, holding also good correspondence with the other great Men in the State, or else the Remedy is worse than the Disease.

44

ter nd pe ck

nd

ft

nd

d.

it

gs y fs

ist

Q

l,

d

t

XVI.

Of Atheism.

I Had rather believe all the Fables in the Legend, and the Talmud, and the Alcoran, that this Universal Frame is without a Mind. And therefore God never wrought

F

100

d

t

1

b

t

t

N

000

1

V

1 n

anv

V

ė

a.

Ŕ

f

v

A

'n

(

ra wh

wrought a Miracle to convince Atheism, because his ordinary Works convince it. It is true, that a little Philosophy inclineth Mans mind to Atheism, but depth in Philosophy bringeth Mens minds about to Religion. for while the mind of man lookern upon fecond Caule scattered, it may sometimes rest in them, and go no further: but when it beholdeth the Chain of them Confederate and Linked rogether, it must needs fly to Providence and Deity. Nay, even that School which is most accused of Arbeifm, doth most demonstrate Religion: That is, the School of Leucippus and Democritus, and Epicurus. For it is a thousand times more credible, that four mutable Elements, and one immutable fifth Ef fence, duly and eternally placed, need no God, that that an Army of infinite finall Portions, or Seeds unplaced, should have produced this order and beauty without a Divine Marshal. The Scripture faith, The Poll bath faid in his heart, there is no God : it is not faid, The fool bath thought in his heart: So as he rather faith it by rote to himself, as that he would have, than that he can throughly believe it, or be perswaded of it. For none deny there is a God, but those for whom it maketh that there were no God. It appeareth in nothing more, that Atheism is rather in the Tip, than in the Heart of Man, than by this; That Atheifts will ever be talking of that their Opinion, as if they fainted in it within themselves, and would be glad to be strengthned by the consent of others. Nay more, you shall have Atheifts strive to get Disciples, as it fareth with other Sects. And, which is most of all, you shall have of them that will suffer for Atheism and not recant; whereas if they did truly think, that there were no fuch thing as God, why should they trouble themselves? Epicurus is charged, that he did but diffemble for his credits fake, when he affirmed, there were Bleffed Natures, but fuch as enjoyed themfelves, without having respect to the Government of the World: wherein, they fay, he did temporize; though in fecret he thought there was no God. But certainly hig his

ch

ch.

les no

m

to

is gi-rat F

an n, ty

犯 by

an ne

at

at п,

of et

or

ly

ne

d,

1-di n

10 rage

he is traduced; for his Words are Noble and Divine; Non Deos valgi negare profanum, fed vulgi Opiniones Diis applicare profamum, Plato could have faid no more, And although he had the confidence to deny the Administration, he had not the power to deny the Nature. The Indians of the West have names for their particular gods, though they have no name for God; as if the Heathers should have had the names of Jupiter, Apollo, Mars, &c. but not the word Deus: which shews, that even those barbarous People have the notion, hough they have not the laritude and extent of it. So that against the Atbeist the very Savages take part with the very subtilest Philosophers: The Contemplative Atheist is rare: A Diagoras, a Rion, a Lucian perhaps, and fome others; and yet they feem to be more than they are: For that all that impugn a received Religion or Superstition, are by the adverse part branded with the name of Atheists. But the great Atheists indeed are Hypocrites, which are ever handling Holy things, but without feeling; fo as they must needs be cauterized in the end. The Causes of Atheism are Divisions in Religion, if they be many: for any one main Division addeth Zeal to both sides, but many Divisions introduce Atheism. Another is, Scandal of Priests, when it is come to that which Saint Bernard faith, Non est jam dicere, ut populus, sic sacerdos: quia nec sic populus, at Sacerdas. A third is, Custom of Prophane Scoffing in Holy Matters, which doth by little and little deface the Reverence of Religion. And lastly, Learned Times, especially with peace and prosperity: for troubles and adverfities do more bow Mens minds to Religion. They that deny a God, destroy Mans Nobility: for certainly Man is of kin to the Bealts by his Body; and if he be not of kin to God by his Spirit; he is a base and ignoble Creature. It destroys likewise Magnanimity, and the railing Humane Nature: for take an example of a Dog, and mark what a generosity and courage he will put on, when he finds himself maintained by a Man, who to him is instead of a God. or Melior natura: Which cou-

1 п

W

n

2 g

W

0

g

21 9

21

7

(

0

Volist Vii

rage is manifeftly fuch, as that Creature without the confidence of a better Nature than his own, could never attain. So Man, when he refteth and affureth himself upon Divine protection and favour, gathereth a force and faith, which Humane Nature in it felf could not obtain, Therefore as Atheism is in all respects hateful, so in this, that it depriveth Humane Nature of the means to exalt it felf above Humane Frailty. As it is in particular Perfons, so it is in Nations. Never was there such a State for Magnanimity, as Rome. Of this State hear what Cicero faith, Quam volumus, licet, Patres Conscripti, nos amemus, tamen nec numero Hispanos, nec robore Gallos, nec calliditate Pænos, nec artibus Gracos; nec denique boc ipfo buju Gentis & Terræ domestico nativoque sensu Italos ipsos & Latinos; sed Pietate ac Religione, atque bac una Sapientia, quo Deorum Immortalium Numine, omnia regi gubernarique perspeximus, omnes Gentes Nationesque superavimus.

XVII.

Of Superstition,

I T were better to have no opinion of God at all, than fuch an opinion as is unworthy of him: For the one is Unbelief, the other is Contumely; and certainly Superstition is the reproach of the Deity. Plutarch saith well to that purpose: Surely (saith he) I bad rather a great deal men should say, there was no such man at all as Plutarch, than that they should say, that there was one Plutarch, that would eat his Children as soon as they were born; as the Poets speak of Saturn. And as the Contumely is greater towards God, so the Danger is greater towards Men. Atheism leaves a man to Sense, to Philosophy, to Natural Piety, to Laws, to Reputation; all which may be guides to an outward Moral Vertue, though Religion were not; But Superstition dismounts all these, and erecteth er eff

nis,

ak

erate Ci-

meal-

ijm La-

HOD DET-

an inith

4 as Ue

is ds

y, ch

Re-

th

erecteth an absolute Monarchy in the minds of Men. Therefore Atheism did never perturb States; for it makes men weary of themselves, as looking no further: And we fee the times inclined to Atheifm (as the time of Augustus Cæsar) were civil times. But Superstition hath been the Confusion of many States, and bringeth in a new Primum Mobile, that ravisheth all the Spheres of Government. The Master of Superstition is the People: and in all Superstition, Wise men follow Fools, and Arguments are fitted to Practice in a reverted order. It. was gravely faid by some of the Prelates in the Council of Trent, where the Doctrine of the School-men bare great fway, That the School-men were like Astronomers, which did feign Eccentricks, and Epicycles, and such engines of Orbs, to fave the Phanomena; though they knew there were no fuch things. And in like manner, that the Schoolmen had framed a number of fubrile and intricate Axioms and Theorems, to fave the practice of the Church. The Causes of Superstitions are, pleasing and sensual Rites and Ceremonies: Excess of Outward and Pharifaical Holinels: Over-great Reverence of Traditions, which cannot but load the Church: the Stratagems of Prelates for their own Ambition and Lucre: the favouring too much of good Intentions, which openeth the Gate to Conceits and Novelties: the taking an Aim at Divine Matters by Humane, which cannot but breed mixture of Imaginations: And laftly, Barbarous Times, especially joyned with Calamities and Difasters. Superstition without a veil is a deformed thing; for, as it addeth deformity to an Ape to be so like a Man: so the similitude of Superstition to Religion makes it the more deformed. And as wholfome Meat corrupteth to little Worms: fo good Forms and Orders corrupt into a Number of petry Observances. There is a Superstition in avoiding Superstition, when men think to do best, if they go furthest from the Superstition formerly received. Therefore Care would be had, that (as it fareth in ill Purgings) the good be not taken away with the had, which men weary of themselves, as looking to a wollotrom Shi M. seingrom I in mentollow

e

a o

C

is w er E

n

to hí

th

h T

er

w

tr

hi

fta

Pl

in fr

is

hi

di

N

fre

to che thi br

qu 15 4

COL

Tr

of

in.

which commonly is done, when the Reople is the Reformer. The could distribute out his miles a stoler II we fee the state of the state of beating companies of collection where Compress cylind XVIII were lined been the Confinence of the TRAVEL, in the younger Sort, is a part of Education; in the elder, a part of Experience. He that Travelleth into a Countrey before he hath some Entrance into the Language, goeth to School and not to Travel. That young men Travel under some Turon or grave Servant, I allow well, fo that he be fuch a one that hath the Language, and hath been in the Country before, whereby he may be able to tell them, what things are worthy to be feen in the Countrey where they go, what Acquaintances they are to feek, what Exercises or Discipline the Place yieldeth. For else young men shall go hooded, and look abroad little. It is a ftrange thing, that in Sea-voyages, where there is nothing to be feen but Sky and Seavemen should make Diaries; but in Land-Travel, wherein so much is to be observed, for the most part they omit it as if Chance were fitter to be registred than Observation. Let Dia ries therefore be brought in ufe. The things to be feen and observed are the Courts of Princes, especially when they give Audience to Embaffadors: The Courts of Justice, while they fit and hear Causes; and so of Com fiftories Ecclefiaftick: the Churches and Monasteries with the Monuments which are therein extant: the Walls and Fortifications of Cities and Towns; and fo the Havens and Harbors: Antiquities and Ruins: 11 braries, Colleges, Disputations and Lectures, where any are: Shipping and Natives: Houses and Gardens of State and Pleafure near great Cities: Armories, Arte nals, Magazines, Exchanges, Burles, Ware-houses Brercifes lu-

00

He

n

to or ne ry

120 ere

at lfe

k

ke

be ce

M

en

en

60 ho

14

194

0

eroiles of Horimanship, Fencing, Training of Souldiers, and the like: Comedies, fuch whereunto the better fort. of Persons do resort. Treasures of Jewels and Robes: Cabinets and Rarities. And to conclude, whatfoever is memorable in the Places where they go. After all which the Tutors or Servants ought to make diligent enquiry. As for Triumphs, Masques, Feasts, Weddings, Funerals, Capital Executions, and fuch Shews; Men need not to be put in mind of them; yet are they not to be neglected. If you will have a young man to put his Travel into a little room, and in short time to gather much, this you must do. First, as we said, he must have fome entrance into the Language before he goeth. Then he must have such a Servant or Tutor as knowern the Countrey, as was likewife faid. Let him carry with him also some Chard or Book, describing the Countrey where he Travelleth, which will be a good key to his Enquiry. Let him keep also a Diary. Let him not flay long in one City or Town, more or less, as the Place deferveth, but not long! Nay, when he flayeth in one City or Town, let him change his Lodging from one end and part of the Town to another, which is a great Adamant of Acquaintance. Let him fequester himself from the Company of his Countrey-men, and diet in fuch Places where there is good Company of the Nation where he Travelletb. Ler him upon his Removes from one Place to another, procure recommendation to some Person of Quality, residing in the Place whither he removeth, that he may use his Favour in those things he defireth to fee or know. Thus he may abridge his Travels with much profit. As for the Acquaintance which is to be fought in Travel, that which is most of all profitable, is Acquaintance with the Secretaries and employed Men of Embassadors; for so in Travelling in one Country, he shall fuck the experience of many. Let him also see and visit eminent Persons, in all kinds, which are of great Name abroad; that he may be able to tell how the Life agreeth with the Fame.

For Quarrels, they are with Care and Discretion to be avoided: They are commonly for Mistresses, Healths. Place, and Words. And let a Man beware how he keepeth Company with Cholerick and Quarrelfome Persons, for they will engage him into their own Quarrels. When a Traveller returneth home, let him not leave the Countries where he hath Travelled, altogether behind him, but maintain a Correspondency by Letter with those of his Acquaintance which are of mol worth. And let his Travel appear rather in his Difcourse, than in his Apparel or Gesture; and in his Difcourse let him be rather advised in his Answers, than forward to tell Stories: And let it appear, that he dock not change his Countrey Manners for those of Foreign Parts; but only prick in some Flowers of that he had learned abroad, into the Customs of his own Countrey.

XIX.

Of Empire.

IT is a miserable State of Mind, to have few thing to desire, and many things to fear, and yet that commonly is the Case of Kings, who being at the highest, want matter of desire, which makes their mind more languishing, and have many Representations of Perils and Shadows, which makes their minds the lesclear. And this is one reason also of that effect which the Scripture speaketh of; That the King's beart is infertable. For, multitude of Jealousies, and lack of some predominant desire that should marshal and put in order all the rest, maketh any Mans heart hard to find or sound. Hence it comes likewise, that Princes many times make themselves Desire, and set their Hearts upon Toys: sometimes upon a Building, sometimes upon erecting of an Order, sometimes upon the advancing of a Person, sometimes upon obtaining excellency in some Ast or Fear of the Hand; as New for playing on the Harp. Demition for Certainty of the Hand with the Arrow, Commedus for playing at Fence, Caracalla for driving Chariots, and the like. This seemeth incredible unto those that know not she principal; That the usual Man is more chared and refreshed by profiting in small things, than by standing at a star in great. We see also that the Kings that have been fortunate Conquerous in their first years, it being not possible for them to go forward infinitely, but that they must have have their action to arrest in their Fortunes, turn in their latter years to be smershitious and Melancholy: as did Alexander in Great, Dioclesson; and in our memory. Charles the Fish, and others: For he that is used to go forward, and sind-the a stop, falleth out of his own savour, and is not the thing he was.

To freak now of the true Temper of Empire; It is a ching rare, and hard to keep; for both Temper and Distemper consist of Contraries. But it is one thing to mingle Contraries, another to interchange them. The Answer of Apollonias to Vespasion is full of excellent Instruction; Vespasion asked him, What was Nero a view throw? He answered, Nero could touch and name the Harp well, but in Government sometimes be used to wind the plast to high sometimes to be them down too low. And certain it is, that nothing destroyeth Authority so much, as the unequal and untimely interchange of Power Pressed too.

far, and Released too much.

hs,

me

ar-

not har

of

)if

of.

nan

od

ign

ath

ey.

hat gh-

nd

did

idi F

OF-

or

iny

up

O

ing

This is true, that the Wildom of all thefe latter Times in Trimes Affairs, is rather fine Deliveries, and Stiffies of Dangers and Milchiefs, when they are near, than folid and grounded Couries to keep them alook. But this is but to my Masteries with Forume: and let men beware how they neglect and fuffer matter of Trouble to be prepared: for no man can forbid the park, not rell whence it may come. The difficulties in Princes Business are many and great; but she greateft difficulty woften in their own mind. For it is common with Princes (lath Tecitus) to will Contradictories San planuague Regum voluntates vubementes, & mer fourteurs. For it is the Solection of Power, to think a Command the end, and yet not endure the means.

their Children, their Prelates or Clergie, their Wever, their Children, their Prelates or Clergie, their Nobles, their Common, and their Men of War. And from all these arise Dangers, if Care and Circumspection be not used.

First, For their Neighbours: There can no general Rule be given (the occasions are to variable) fave one which ever holdeth, which is, that Prince do keep du Centiael, that none of their Neighbours do over grow to, by increaling of Territory by imbracing of Trade by Approaches, or the like) as they become more able to annoy them, than they were. This is generally the work of flanding Counsels to forelee, and to hinder in During that Triumphate of King i, King Henry the Sthol England, Francis the 1st King of France, and Charles the 5th Emarcor, there was such a Watch kept, that mone of the Three could win a Palm of Ground, but the other Two would ffraight-ways balance it, either by Confederation, or if need were, by a War, and would not in any wife take up Peace at Interest. And the like was done by that League, (which Gricciar line faith, was the Security of Italy) made between Perdinando King of Naples, Lorenzius Medicer, and Ludovicus Sforza, Potentate, the one of Florence, the other of Milain. Neither is the opinion of forms of the school-men to be received. That a War cannot justly be made but upon a precedent Inc. respection. For there is no question, but a fell feat of an imminent Danger, though there be no Blow syon, is a lawful Caule of a War.

For their Wives: There are cruel examples of them Linus is infamed for the poyloning of her Husband Rolessana, Selyman's Wife, was the deliruction of that removated Prince, Sultan Multapha, and otherwise troubled his House, and Succession: Edward the Second of England, his Queen had the principal hand in the depo-ing and murther of her Husband. This kind of dener is then to be feared, chiefly when the Wive have loss for the raising of their own Children, or elfe that they be Advoutrelles.

The Tragedies likewife of danis from them have been many. And generally the tring of Fathers into intoicion of their Condress, bath been ever unfortunate. The destruction of Mustapha that we named before) was to fatal to Solyman's Line, the Succession of the Turks from Solyman until this day, suspected to be untrue, and of itrange blood; for that Selmus the second was chought to be supposititious. The destruction of Crifous, a young Prince of rare towardness, by Confranting the Great, his Father, was in like manner fatal to his House; for both Constantinus and Confiance his Son died violent Deaths; and Confianhis other son did little better, who died indeed of sickness, but after that Julianus had taken Arms as him. The destruction of Demetrus, Son to Philip the Second of Macedon, turned upon the Father, who died of Repentance. And many like Examples there are but few or none where the Fathers had good by fuch diffrust except it were where the Sons were up in open Arms against them ; as was Selymus the first against Beieter, and the three Sons of Henry the Second, King of England.

For their Prelates: When they are proud and great, is also danger from them; as it was in the times Anselmus and Thomas Becket, Arch-Bishops of Cantery, who with their Croffers did almost try it with the houghty Kings; William Rufus, Henry the First, and Henry the Second. The danger is not from the State, st where is hath a dependance of Foreign Authority; or where the Church-men come in, and are elected, by the colletion of the King, or particular Patrons, aby the People.

For their Nobles: To keep them at a diffrance it is not amils, but to deprels them may make a King more abfolute, but less safe, and less able to perform any thin that he delires: I have noted it in my History of King Henry the Seventh, of England, who depressed his Noblity; whereupon it came to pass, that his times were full of Difficulties and Troubles; for the Nobility, though they continued loyal unto him, yet did they not co-operate with him in his business; so that in effect he was fain to do all things himself.

For their Second Nobles: There is not much danger from them, being a Body disperied. They may formetimes discourse high, but that doth little hurt. Besides they are a counterpoize to the higher Nobility, that they grow not too potent: and lastly, being the most immediate in Authority with the Common People, they do best temper popular Commotions.

For their Merchants: They are Vena perts; and a they flourish not, a Kingdom may have good Limbs, but will have empty Veins, and nourish little. Taxes and Imposts upon them, do seldom good to the Kings Revenue; for that he wins in the Hundred, he looseth in the Shire; the particular Rates being increased, but the total bulk of Trading rather decreased.

For their Commons: There is little danger from them, except it be where they have great and potent Heads, or where you meddle with the point of Religion, or their Customs, or means of Life.

For their Men of War: It is a dangerous State, where they live and remain in a Body, and are used to Donatives, whereof we see examples in the fanizaries and Pretorian Bands of Rome: But Trainings of Men, and Arming them in several places, and under several Commanders, and without Donatives, are things of Defence, and no danger.

Princes are like to Heavenly Bodies, which cause good or evil times; and which have much Veneration, but no Rest. All Precepts concerning Kings, are in effect com-prehended

Pagade

1

1

3

1

presented in those two Remembrances, Memento quod es Hemo, and Memento quod es Deus, or Vice Dei; the one bridleth their Power, and the other their Will.

XX.

Of Counfel.

HE greatest trust between Man and Man is the trust of Giving Countil: For in other confidences Men commit the parts of Life, their Lands, their-Goods, their Children, their Credit, some particular Affair: but to fuch as they make their Comfellors, they commit the whole, by how much the more they are obliged to all faith and integrity. The wifest Princes need not think it any diminution to their Greatness, or derogation to their Sufficiency, to rely upon Counfel. God himfelf is not without, but hath made it one of the great Names of his bleffed Son: The Counfellor. Solomon hath pronounced, that in Counfel is Stability. Things will have their first or second agitation; if they be not toffed upon the arguments of Counfel, they will be toffed upon the waves of Fortune, and be full of inconstancy, doing and undoing, like the reeling of a drunken man. s Son found the force of Counfel, as his Father faw the necessity of it. For the beloved Kingdom of God was first rent and broken by ill Counsel; upon which Corofel there are fet for instruction the two marks. whereby Bad Counsel is for ever best discerned, that it was young Comfel for the Persons, and winter Counsel for the Matter.

h

The incient times do let forth in figure, both the incorporation, and infeparable conjunction of Counfel with Kings, and the wife and politick use of Counfel by Kings; the one in that they lay, Jupiter did marry, Meris, which fignifieth Counfel, whereby they intend that

3 Soveraignty

Sovereignty is married to Counfel; the other in that which followeth, which was thus: They fay, after Jupiter was married to Meris, file conceived by him, and was with Child: but Jupiter suffered her not to flay till she brought forth, but eat her up; whereby he became himself with Chad, and was delivered of Pallas Armed out of his Head; which monstrous Fable containeth a fecre of Empire, how Kings are to make use of their Council of State. That first they ought to refer matters unto them, which is the first begetting or impregnation; but when they are elaborate, moul-ed, and shaped in the Wothib of their Council, and grow ripe, and ready to be brought forth, that then they fuffer not their Commeil to go through with the resolution and direction, as if it depended on them but take the matter back into their own hands, and make it appear to the World, that the Decrees and final Directions (which, because they come forth with Prudence and Power, are refembled to Pallas Armed). proceeded from themselves: And not only from their dutbority, but (the more to add reputation to themselves) from their Head and Device.

Let us now freak of the Inconveniencies of Counsel, and of the Remedies. The Inconveniences that have been noted in calling and using Counsel, as three: First, the revealing of Affairs, whereby they become tels fecret. Secondly, the weakning of the Authority of Princes, as if they were less of themselves. Thirdly, the danger of being unfaithfully Counselled, and more for the good of them that Counsel, than of him that is Counsel. felled. For which Inconveniencies, the Doctrine of Italy and practice of France in some Kings times, hath introduced Cabinet Councils , a Remedy worle than the Disease.

As to Secrecy: Princes are not bound to communicate all matters with all Councilors, but extract and feled Neither is it necessary, that he that consulteth what to hould do, mould declare what he will do. But let

Princes

Primes beware, that the unsecreting of their Affairs comes not from themselves. And as for Cabinet Counsels, it may be their Motto; Plenus rimarum sum: One futile Person, that maketh it his glory to tell, will do more hurt, then many that know it their duty to conceal, It is true, there be some Affairs which require extream Secrety, which will hardly go beyond one or two Porfons belide the King : Neither are those Counfels un prosperous; for belides the Secreey, they commonly go on conflanely in one Spirit of Direction without di-Maction. But then it must be a prudent King, such as s able to grind with a Hand-will; and those Inward Comfellors had need also be wife Men, and especially, true and trufty to the King's ends; as it was with King Henry the Seventh, of England, who in his greatest bufinels imparted himself to none, except it were to Morton and Fex.

For weaking of Authority: The Fable sheweth the Remedy. Nay, the Majesty of King's is rather exalted than diminished, when they are in the Chair of Coursel. Neither was there ever Prince bereaved of his dependencies by his Counsel, except where there hath been either an over-greatness in one Counsellor, or an over-strict combination in divers, which are things soon found and holpen.

to y of

a-

to

O H D L

For the last Inconvenience, that Men will Counsel with the Eye to themselves: Certainly, Non invenies sidem support of all particular Persons. There be, that are in nature, suithful and sincere, and plain, and direct, not crastly and involved: Let Princes above all draw to themselves such nature. Besides Counsellors are not commonly so united, but that one Counsellor keepeth Centinel over another; so that if any do Counsel, out of saction, or private ends, it commonly comes to the King's Ear. But the best Remedy is, if Princes know their Counsellors as well as their Counsellors know them;

Principis eft virtus maxima noffe suos.

And on the other fide, Comfellors should not be too specularive Into their Soveraigns Person. The true composition of a Comfeller, is rather to be skill'd in their Mafters business, than in his Nature ; for then he is like to advise him, and not to feed his humour. It is of fingular use to Princes, if they take the Opinions of their Counfel, both separately and together. For pris vate opinion is more free, but opinion before others is more reverend. In private, Men are more bold in their own humours; and in confort, Men are more obnoxious to others humours: therefore it is good to take both. And of the inferiour fort, rather in private, to preferve freedom; of the greater, rather in confort, to preferve respect. It is vain for Princes to take Counfel, concerning Matters, if they take no Counfel likewife concerning Perfou : for all Matters are as dead Images: and the life of the execution of Affairs refleth In the good choice of Perfont. Neither is it enough to confult concerning Persons, secundum genera, as in an Idea or Mathematical Description, what the kind and character of the Perfon should be; for the greatest errors are committed, and the most judgment is shown in the choice of Individuals. It was truly faid, Optimi Confiliarii mortui; Books will speak plain when Counfellow blanch. Therefore it is good to be converfant in them. especially the Books of such as themselves have been Actors upon the Stage.

The Councils at this day in most places are but familiar meetings, where matters are rather talked on than debated. And they run too fwift to the Order or Act of Counfel. It were better, that in Causes of weight, the Matter were propounded one day, and not spoken fill the next day, In notice Consilium. So was it done in the Commission of Union between England and Sandard, which was a grave and orderly Assembly. I commend

a City of the

1

L

1

•

commend for days for Petitions ; for it gives both the Suitors more certainty for their attendance, and it frees the meetings for matters of Effate, that they may His In choice of Committees for ripening Bufinels for the Cancil, this better to chuse indifferent Persons, then to make an Indifferency, by putting in those that are firong on both fides. I commend also standing Commissions; as for Trade, for Treasure, for War, for Sains, for some Provinces: For where there be divers particular Councils, and but one Council of State; (as it in Spain) they are in effect no more than standing tomosfions; fave that they have greater Authority.

Let fuch as are to inform Councils out of their particular. Professions (as Lawyers, Sou-men, Mint-men, and the like) be first heard before Committees, and then as occasion ferves, before the Council. And let them not come in multirudes, or in a Tribunicious manner; for that is to clamour Councils, not to inform them. A long Table, and a fquare Table, or Seas about the Walls, feem things of Form, but are things of Subflance; for at a long Table, a few at the upper end in effect fway all the business; but in the other Form, there is more use of the Counfellers Opinions that sit lower. A King, when he presides in Council, let him beware how he opens his own inclination too much in that which he propoundeth; for else Comfellors will but rake the wind of him, and instead of giving Free Comfel, fing him a Song of Placeho.

in it is is in a co

d

П

XXI. Of Delays.

I ORTUNE is like the Marker, where many times if you can flay a little, the Price will fall. And win, it is fornetimes like Sibylla's Offer, which at first feath the Commodity at full, then consumeth part and

and part, and fill holdeth up the Price . Horaco for (as it is in the Common Verlo) warnesh a hald No ale, after flie hath prefented ber Locks in Front, and no b saken; or at least numeth the handle of the Bottle fir to be received, and after the Belly, which is hard-clash a There is furely no greater Wildom, than w countries the Beginnings and Onless of Things. Dan gardere no more light of riley once feem light, an more Dangers have deserved Man, than forced then Nay, is were better to meet fidms Dangers half was thought they come mothing near, than re been soo los watch upon their Approaches; for it a Man too long, it is odds he will fall afleep. On the fide, to be deceived with two long shadows (as for have been, when the Moon was low, and shone of their Enemies back, and fo to shoot off before the time or to teach Dangers to come on, by over-early Buck line towards them; is another extream. The Ripene or Unripenels of the Occasion, (as we faid) must eve be well weighed and generally it is good to comm the Beginnings of all great Actions to Argue with hi hundred eyes, and the Ends to Briaren with his hun dred hands thirlt to Watch, and then to speed. For the Helmer of Pluco, which maketh the Politick Ma go invitible, is Storey in the Counfel, and Celerity in the Execution. For when things are once come to the Execution, there is no Secrety comparable to Go lerity; like the motion of a Bullet in the air, which flyeth fo fwift, as it out-runs the Eye.

XXII. Of Cunning.

De take Coming for a Sinister or Grooked Widom. And certainly there is great different between a Coloning Man and a Wife Map, not only poin point of Honefly, but in point of Ability. There be that can pack the Cards, and yet cannot play well. To there are forme that are good in Canvaffes and Factions, that are otherwise Weak Men. Again, it is one thing to understand Persons, and another thing to understand Matters; for many are persect in Mens Humours, that are not greatly capable of the real part of Burnels, which is the Constitution of one that hash fluided Men more than Books. Such Men are fitter for ractice than for Counsel: and they are good but in their own Alley, turn them to new men, and they have lost their Aim: so as the old Rule to know a roo from a Wise man; Mitte tember studies and ignored, or making Men are like Haberdashers of finall Wares, it increasing Men are like Haberdashers of finall Wares, it increases

It is a point of Coming to wait upon him, with whom you fpeak, with your eye, as the Jeluits give it in precept: For there may be many wife men that have fecret Hearts and transparent Countenances. Yet this would be done with a demure Abasing of your eye fometimes, as the Jesuits also do use.

Another is, that when you have any thing to obtain of prefent dipatch, you entertain and amule the party with whom you deal, with some other Discourse, that he be not too much awake to make Objections. I knew a Confeller and Secretary, that never came to Queen E-make of England with Bills to sign, but he would always first put her into some Discourse of Estate, that the might the less mind the Bills.

the might the lefs mind the Bills.

The like furprize may be made by moving things, when the party is in half, and cannot flay to confider advitedly of that is moved.

If a Man would cross a Buliness, that he doubts some other would namiomely and effectually move, let him recent to with it well, and move it himself in such as may foyl it. The breaking off in the midft of that one was a bout to fay, as if he took himself up, breeds a greater Appetite in him with whom you confer to know more.

And because it works better, when any thing seemeth to be gotten from you by Question, than if you offer it of your self; you may lay a Bait for a Question, by shewing another Visage and Countenance that you are wont; to the end, to give occasion for the party to ask, what the matter is of the Change, as Nehrmied did; And I had not before that time been sad before the King.

In things that are tender and unpleafing, it is good break the Ice by some whose words are of less weight and to reserve the more weighty voice to come in a by chance, so that he may be asked the Question upon the other Speech; as Narcissa did in relating to Glaudia.

the marriage of Melfaline and Silius.

In things that a Man would not be seen in himself, it is a point of Carming to borrow the name of the World as to say; The World says, or, There is a Speech abroad.

I knew one, that when he wrote a Letter, he would put that which was most material in the Post-Script, as if it had been a By-matter.

I knew another, that when he came to have speech he would pass over that he intended most, and go forth, and come back again and speak of it, as a thing that he had almost forgot.

Some procure themselves to be surprized at such times, as it is like the parry that they work upon will suddenly come upon them, and to be found with a Letter in their hand, or doing somewhat which they are not accustomed; to the end they may be opposed of those things, which of themselves they are desirous to utter.

It is a point of Cunning, to let fall those Words in mans own Name, which he would have another man learn

S

term and use, and thereupon take advantage. I knew two that were Comperitors for the Secretaries Place, in Queen Elizabeth's time, and we kept good Quarter between themselves, and would confer one with another upon the Business; and one of them said, That to be a Secretary in the Declination of a Manarchy, was a tick-lish thing, and that he did not affect it: the other that caught up those Words, and discoursed with divers of his Friends. That he had no reason to desire to be a Secretary in the Declining of a Manarchy. The first cam took hold of it, and found means it was fold the Pans, Who hearing of a Declination of a Monarchy, took is faill, as she would never after hear of the other's

There is a Cuming, which we in England call, The turning of the Cat in Pan; which is, when that which a man lays to another, he lays it as if another had faid it to him; and to fay truth, it is not easie, when such a matter passed between two, to make it appear from which of them it first moved and began.

It is a way that some men have to glance and dart at others, by justifying themselves by Negatives; as to say, This I did not: As Tirellinus did towards Burrhus; Senon diversas spes, sed incolumntation Imperatoris simpliciter.

Spectare.

Some have in readiness so many Tales and Stories, as there is nothing they would infinuate, but they can wrap it into a Tale, which serveth both to keep them selves more in Guard, and carry it with more Pleasure. It is a good point of Curming, for a man to shape the Answer he would have in his own Words and Propositions; for it makes the other party stick the less.

It is ftrange, how long fome men will lie in wait to speak fornewhat they defire to say, and how far about they will fetch, and how many other matters bey will bear over to come near it; it is a thing of Parience, but yet of much Use.

A finden, bold, and inexpected Question, doth me ny times surprize a man and lay him open: Like to him that being changed his Mame, and walked in Paul's, nother surdenly came behind him, and called him his true Name, whereat streight-ways be looked back

Due these small Wares, and perty points of Carriere infinite; and it were a good deed to make a List ethems for that nothing doth more hart in a State, the

that Coming Men pals for Wife and I whom I de

But certainly some there are, that know the Resonand Halls of Business, that cannot fink into the Main it. Like a House that hath convenient Stairs and Etries, but never a fair Room. Therefore you shall them find out pretty Looses in the Conclusion, but no ways able to examine or debate Matters: and y commonly they take advantage of their Inability, as would be thought Wits of direction. Some built rath upon the abusing of others, and (as we now say) Puting tracks upon them; than upon the soundness of the own proceedings. But Salomen saith, Prudens advertit grafits saot, Stidius diversit ad dolors.

XXIII.

Of Wildom for a Mans felf.

A Note is a wife occurre for it self, but it is a shrow thing in an Orchard or Garden. And certainly men that are great Louve of Themselves, waste the Publick. Divide with reason between Self-low and Seciety, and be se true to the Self, as thou be not false to others, especially to the King and Country. It is a poor Center of a mane Actions, Handelf. It is right Earth; she that only stands fast upon its own Genter; whereas a things that have assume with the Hannes, move upon the Center of another which they benefit. The reference ing of all so a Man off, is more obtained in a line of the public but their Good and Evil is a the peril of the public Formula. But it is a deflector Evil in a Servine so rince, or a Citizen in a Republick. For whatfor or Affairs pass flich a mans hands, he crooketh them this own ends, which must needs be often Eccentrick o his own ends, which must needs be often Eccentrick to the ends of his Master or State: Therefore let Princes or States chuse such Servants as have not this mark; copy they mean their Service should be made but the constant. That which makes the effect more pernicuses is that all proportion is lost; it were disproportion is lost; it were disproportion disproportion is a greater extream, men a further good of the Servant shall carry things about the great good of the Masters. And yet that is take of bad Officers, Treasurers, Ambastadours, Generals, and other state and corrupt Servants, which set Byals upon their Brayl, of their own perty ends and other state and corrupt servants, which set Byals upon their Brayl, of their own perty ends and others, to the overthrow of their Masters great and imenvis, to the overthrow of their Maffers great and imwhich Servants receive, is after the model of their own fernine; but the Hurt they fell for that Good, is after the model of their Maffers Fortune. And certainly it is the nature of extream Self-Lover, as they will be an House on fire, if it were but to roust their eggs. And yet chele men many times hold credit with their Marers became their fludy is but to pleafe them, and to in Themselver; and for either respect they will abandon the good of their Affairs.

Wildow for a Man's self is in many branches thereof a denayed thing. It is the Wildow of Rate, that will be fine to leave the House sometime before it falls. It is the Wildow of the Fox, that thrush out the Badger, who diged and made room for him. It is the Wildow of consider, that shed tears when they would devour. But the which is specially to be noted, is, that those which is cicero says of Pompey) are, Sall amanter sine rivalis, are many times unfortunate. And whereas they have all their time faculted to Themfolous, they become in the end themfolous begriftes to the Inconfrancy of Fortune, whose wings they thought by their Self-William there pinnioned.

f

hi

ve

PIG

A

37

is

n

hi

kem

tr

fe co

XXIV.

Of Innovation.

S the births of living Creatures at first are ill a pen, to are all lawroations, which are the bir of Time. Yet notwichtlanding, as those that first bring Honour into their Family, are commonly more wor thy than most that succeed: So the first Precedent (if) be good) is feldom amained by impraion. For Ill to Mans nature, as it flands perverted, both a natural motion, strongest in continuance: But Good as a forced motion, strongest at first. Surely every Medicine is an innovation; and he that will not apply new Remedies, mult expect new Evils: for Time is the greatest Imovetor. And if Time of course alter things to the world and Wildom and Countel shall not alter them to the better, what shall be the end? It is true, that what is is fit. And those things which have long gone together are as it were confederate within themselves, where new things piece ner to well: But though they help by their utility, yet, they trouble by their Inconformity. Belides, they are like propert, more admired, and let Belides, they are like the period time admired, and less favoured. All this is true, if Time flood fill, which contrariwile moverh to round, that a froward retenti-on of cultom is as turbulent a thing, as an Imovation: and they that reverence too much old times, are but a florn to the new. It were good therefore, that me in their Involutions would follow the example of Tim it felf; which indeed Innovateth greatly, but quietly, and by degrees, scarce to be perceived: for otherwise whatfoever is new, is unlooked for; and ever it mends fome, and pairs other: And he that is holpen, takes it for a Fortune, and thanks the Time; and he that is hurt, for a Wrong, and imputeth it to the Author. is good also, not to try experiments in States, except the necessity be urgent, or the utility be evident; and well to beware, that it be the Reformation that draweth on the Change, and not the defire of Change that pretendeth the Reformation. And lastly, that the Novelty, though it be not rejected, yet be held for a suspect: And as the Scripture faith, That we make a Rand upon the ancient way, and then look about us, and difcover what is the streight and right way, and so to walk in it.

XXV.

Of Dispatch.

A Ffeeled Dispatch is one of the most dangerous things to business that can be. It is like that which the Physicians call Pre-digestion, or Hasty Digestion, which is sure to fill the Body sull of Crudities, and secret seeds of Diseases. Therefore measure not dispatch by the times of sitting, but by the advancement of the business. And as in Races, it is not the large Stride, or high List that makes the Speed; so in business, the keeping close to the matter, and not taking of it too much at once, procureth Dispatch. It is the care of some only to come off speedily for the time, or to contrive some false periods of business, because they may seem Men of Dispatch. But it is one thing to abbreviate by contracting, another by cutting off; and business so handled at several sittings or meetings, goeth commonly backward or forward in an unsteady mannet. I knew a Wise Man, that had it for a by-word, when he saw men hasten to a Conclusion; Stay a little, that we may make an end the fooner.

On the other fide, True Dispatch is a rich thing. For Time is the measure of Business, as Money is of Wares, and business is bought at a dear hand, where there is small Dispatch. The Spartans and Spaniards have been noted to be of small Dispatch, Mivenga la Muerte de Spagna, Let my death come from Spain, for then it will be fure to be long in coming.

Give good hearing to those that give the first Information in Business; and rather direct them in the beginning, than interrupt them in the continuance of their Speeches: for he that is put out of his own order, will go forward and backward, and more tedious while he waits upon his memory, than he could have been, if he had gone on in his own course. But sometimes it is seen, that the Moderator is more trouble-some than the Actor.

Iterations are commonly loss of time; but there is no fuch gain of time, as to iterate often the State of the Question; for it chaseth away many a frivolous Speech as it is coming forth. Long and curious Speeches are as fit for Dispatch, as a Robe or Mantle with a long train is for a Race.

Prefaces, and Passages, and Excusations, and other Speeches of reference to the Person, are great waster of time; and though they seem to proceed of modelly, they are bravery. Yet beware of being too material, when there is any impediment or obstruction in mens Wills; for pre-occupation of mind ever requireth preface of Speech, like a somentation to make the unguent enter.

Above all things, Order, and Distribution, and Singling out of Parts, is the life of Dispatch: so as the Distribution be not too subtle; for he that doth not divide, will never enter well into business: and he that divided

deth

B

à

8 C C C

Ė

ta po

of

ye ch

fe

fp de w

fee

kn

no

aw pay

or es; is en de

orof of er,

ve

le-

no

he ch er y, l, m

n

deth too much will never come out of it clearly. To chuse time, is to save time, and an unseasonable motion is but beating the Air. There be three parts of Business; the Preparation, the Debate or Examination, and the Perfection; whereof if you look for Dispatch, let the middle only be the work of many, and the first and last the work of sew. The proceeding upon somewhat conceived in writing, doth for the most part facilitate Dispatch: for though it should be wholly rejected, yet that Negative is more pregnant of direction, than an Indefinite; as Ashes are more generative than Dust.

XXVI.

Of seeming Wise.

TT hath been an opinion, that the French are wifer I than they feem, and the Spaniards feem wifer than they are. But howfoever it be between Nations, certainly it is so between Man and Man. For as the Apostle faith of Godliness, Having a shew of Godliness, but denying the power thereof; so certainly there are in points of wildom and fufficiency, that to do nothing or little very folemnly; Magno conatu nugas. It is a ridiculous thing, and fit for a Satyr, to persons of judgment, to fee what shifts these Formalists have, and what prospectives to make Superficies to seem Body, that hath depth and bulk. Some are fo' close referved, as they will not flew their Wares, but by a dark light; and feem always to keep back fomewhat: And when they know within themselves, they speak of that they do not well know, would nevertheless feem to others, to know of that which they may not well speak. Some help themselves with countenance and gesture, and are wife by Signs; as Cicero faith of Pifo, that when he answered him, he fetched one of his Brows up to his Forehead, and bent the other down to his Chin: Re-Spondes, altero ad Frontem Sublato, altero ad Mentum depresso supercilio, crudelitatem tibi non placere. Some think to bear it, by speaking a great word, and being pertemptory; and go on, and take by admittance that which they cannot make good. Some, whatfoever is beyond their reach, will feem to despife or make light of it, as impertinent or curious, and fo will have their ignorance feem Judgment. Some are never without a difference, and commonly by amufing men with a fub tilty, blanch the matter; of whom A. Gellius faith, He minem delirum qui verborum minutiis rerum frangit pondera. Of which kind also Plato in his Protagoras bringeth in Prodicus in scorn, and maketh him make a Speech, that confifteth of distinctions from the beginning to the end Generally fuch men in all deliberations find eafe to be of the Negative fide, and affect a credit to object and foretel difficulties: For when Propositions are denied there is an end of them; but if they be allowed, it re quireth a new work; which false point of wisdom is the bane of business. To conclude, there is no decaying Merchant, or inward Beggar, hath fo many tricks to uphold the credit of their Wealth, as these empty Persons have to maintain the credit of their sufficiency. Seeming Wife Men may make shift to get opinion, but let no man chuse them for employment; for certainly you were better take for business a man somewhat abfurd, than over-formal.

135

in

tu

in

it

all

fee

25 th

ma

an

an pe

G

w wi

in no

N

me wa ne ve for Hi ch Pa

XXVIL

nis

20-nk

at

is but a

b-10-

ra. in nat nd. be

A PAN A PAN

y.

ut

ly b-

Of Friendship.

IT had been hard for him that spake it, to have put more truth and untruth together in few words, than in that Speech, Whofoever is delighted in solitude, is either a wild Beaft, or a God. For it is most true, that a natural and fecret hatred, and averfation towards Society in any Man, hath somewhat of the savage Beaft; but it is most untrue, that it should have any character at all of the Divine Nature, except it proceed not out of a pleasure in Solitude, but out of a love and desire to fequester a mans felf for a higher conversation; such as is found to have been falfly and feignedly in some of the Heathen, as Epimenides the Candian, Numa the Roman, Empedocles the Sicilian, and Apollonius of Tyana; and truly and really in divers of the ancient Hermits and Holy Fathers of the Church. But little do men perceive what Solitude is, and how far it extendeth: for a Crown is not Company, and Faces are but a Gallery of Pictures, and Talk but a Thinking Cymbal, where there is no Love. The Latine Adage meeteth with it a little, Magna Civitas, magna solitudo; because in a great Town Friends are scattered, so that there is not that fellowship, for the most part, which is in less Neighbourhoods. But we may go further, and affirm most truly, that is a meer and miserable solitude to want Friends, without which the World is but a Wilderness: and even in this Sense also of Solitude, whosoever in the Frame of his Nature and Affections is unfit for Friendship, he taketh it of the Beast, and not from Humanity.

A Principal Fruit of Friendship is, the Ease and Discharge of the Fulness and Swellings of the Heart, which Passions of all kinds do cause and induce. We know

Diseases of Stoppings and Suffocations are the most dangerous in the Body, and it is not much otherwise in Mind: You may take Sarza to open the Liver, Stat to open the Spleen, Flower of Sulphur for the Lung, Castoreum for the Brain; but no Receipt openeth the Heart, but a true Friend, to whom you may impass Griefs, Joys, Fears, Hopes, Suspicions, Counsels, and whatsoever lieth upon the Heart to oppress it, in a

2

C

f

(

S

it

t

9

te

2

to

C

24 te

D

m ti

to

th lo

2 ha

bu

M

W

01 kind of Civil Shrift or Confession.

It is a strange thing to observe, how high a Rate great Kings and Monarchs do fet upon this Fruit of Friendship whereof we speak; so great, as they purchase it many times at the hazard of their own Safety and Greatness. For Princes, in regard of the distance d their Fortune from that of their Subjects and Servant cannot gather this Fruit, except (to make themselve capable thereof) they raife fome Persons to be, as were, Companions, and almost Equals to themselve which many times forteth to Inconvenience. The mo dern Languages give unto fuch Persons the name of Favourites or Privadoes, as if it were matter of Grace of Conversation. But the Roman name attaineth the true Use and Cause thereof, naming them Participes Cure rum; for it is that which tyeth the knot. And we fe plainly that this hath been done, not by weak and pal fionate Princes only, but by the Wifelt, and most Po litick that, ever reigned; who have oftentimes joyne to themselves some of their Servants, whom both them felves have called Friends, and allowed others likewill to call them in the fame manner, using the word which is received between private men.

L. Sylla, when he commanded Rome, raised Pomps (after surnamed the Great) to that Height, that Pomps vaunted himself for Sylla's Over-match: for when had carried the Comfulphip for a friend of his against the pursuit of Sylla, and that Sylla did a little refer thereat, and began to speak great, Tampey turned upon him again, and in effect bad him be quiet; For the lan-

the name

more men adored the Sun-rifing than the Sun-fetting. With Julius, Decius Brutus had obtained that Interest, as he fet him down in his Testament, for Heir in Remainder after his Nepbew. And this was the man that had power with him, to draw him forth to his Death. For when Cafar would have discharged the Senate, in regard of fome ill presages, and especially a Dream of Calpurnia; This man lifted him gently by the Arm out of his Chair, telling him, he hoped he would not difmifs the Senate, till his Wife had dreamed a better Dream. And it feemeth his favour was fo great, as Antonius in a Letter which is recited verbatim in one of Cicero's Philippiques, called him Venefica, Witch; as if he had enchanted Cafar. Augustus raised Agrippa (though of mean Birth) to that Heighth, as when he confulted with Macenas about the Marriage of his Daughter Julia, Macenas took the Liberty to tell him, That he must either marry his Daughter to Agrippa, or take away his Life; there was no third way, he had made him so great. With Tiberius Cafar, Sejanus had ascended to that Heighth, as they two were termed and reckoned as a pair of Friends. Tiberius in a Letter to him, faith, Hac pro Amicitia nostra non occultavi; and the whole Senate dedicated an Altar to Friendship, as to a Goddess, in respect of the great Dearness of Friendship between them two. The like or more was between Septimius Severus and Plantianus; for he forced his eldest Son to marry the Daughter of Plantianus, and would maintain Plantianus in doing affronts to his Son, and did write also in a Letter to the Senate thele words; I love the man fo well, as I wish he may over love me. Now if these Princes had been as a Trajan, or a Marcus Aurelius, a Man might have thought, that this had proceeded of an abundant Goodness of Nature; but being men fo Wife, of fuch ftrength and severity of Mind, and so extream Lovers of themselves, as all these were; it proveth most plainly, that they found their own Felicity (though as great as ever happened to mortal man) but as an half Piece, except they might have a Friend to make it Entire; and yet, which is more, they were Princes that had Wives, Sons, Nephews, and yet all these could not supply the Comfort of Friendship.

It is not to be forgotten, what Commines observeth of his Mafter, Duke Charles the Hardy; namely, That he would communicate his Secrets with none; and least of all those Secrets which troubled him most. Whereupon he goeth on, and faith, that towards his latter time; That closeness did impair, and a little perish bis understanding. Surely, Commines might have made the fame Judgment also, if it had pleased him, of his fecond Master, Lewis the Eleventh, whose Closeness was indeed his Tormentor. The Parable of Pythagoras is dark, but true, Cor ne edito, Eat not the Heart. Certainly if a man would give it a hard Phrase, those that want Friends to open themselves unto, are Cannibals of their own Hearts. But one thing is most admirable, (wherewith I will conclude this first Fruit of Friend-(hip,) which is, That this Communicating of a Man's Self to a Friend, works two contrary effects; for it redoubleth Foys, and cutteth Griefs in Halfs; for there is no man that imparteth his Joys to his Friend, but he Foyeth the more; and no man that imparteth his Griefs to his Friend, but he grieveth the less. So that it is in truth an Operation upon a Man's mind of like virtue, as the Alchymists use to attribute to their Stone for Man's Body, that it worketh all contrary effects, but fill to the Good and Benefit of Nature; but yet without bringing in the Aid of Alchymifts, there is a manifest Image of this in the ordinary course of Nature: For in Bodies Union strengthneth and cherisheth any natural Action; and on the other fide, weakneth and dulleth any violent Imperssion; and even so it is of Minds.

The second fruit of Friendship is Healthful and Soveraign for the Understanding, as the first is for the Affections: for Friendship maketh indeed a fair Day in the Affections from Storm and Tempests; but it maketh Daylight in the Affections from Tempests; but it maketh Daylight in the Affections from Tempests;

light

i

2

1

b

0 t

t

Ç

1 ŧ

1

f til

of

he aft

e-

er

70

e-

s

as

r-

at

e,

1-dls

ne!

n e,

0

f

5

-

1

.

light in the Understanding out of Darkness and Confusion. of Thoughts. Neither is this to be understood only of Faithful Counfel which a man receiveth from his Friend: but before you come to that, certain it is, that whofoever hath his Mind fraught with many Thoughts, his Wits and Understanding do clarifie and break up in the Communicating and Discoursing with another; he toffeth his Thoughts more easily, he marshalleth them more orderly, he feeth how they look when they are turned into words. Finally, he waxeth wifer than Himfelf; and that more by an hours Discourse, than by a days Meditation. It was well faid by Themistocles to the King of Persia, That Speech was like Cloth of Arras. opened and put abroad; whereby the Imagery doth appear in Figure, whereas in Thoughts they lie but as in Packs. Neither is this fecond Fruit of Friendship, in opening the Understanding, restrained only to such Friends as are able to give a Man Counfel; (they indeed are best) but even without that a Man learneth of himself, and bringeth his own Thoughts to Light, and whetteth his Wits as against a Stone, which its felf cuts not. In a word, a Man were better relate himself to a Statue or Picture, than to fuffer his Thoughts to pass in smother.

And now, to make this second Fruit of Friendship compleat, that other Point which lieth open, and falleth within Vulgar Observation, which is Faithful Counsel from a Friend. Heraclitus saith well in one of his Anigma's; Dry Light is ever the best. And certain it is, that the Light that a Man receiveth by Counsel from another, is drier and purer than that which cometh from his own Understanding and Judgment, which is ever infused and drenched in his Affections and Customs, so as there is as much difference between the Counsel that a Friend giveth, and that a man giveth himself, as there is between the Counsel of a Friend, and of a Flatterer; for there is no such Flatterer as in a Man's Self; and there is no such remedy against Flattery of a man's self, as the liberty of a Friend. Counsel is of two sorts; the one concerning Manners, the other concerning Bufinefs, For the first; the best preservative to keep the Mind in Health, is the faithful Admonition of a Friend. The calling of a Man's felf to a ffrict account is a Medicine fometime too piercing and Corrofive. Reading good Books of Morality, is a little Flat and Dead. Observing our Faults in others, is fometimes unproper for our case. But the best Receipt (best, I say) to work, and best to take, is the Admonition of a Friend. It is a ffrange thing to behold, what gross Errors, and extream absurdities many (especially of the greater sort) do commit, for want of a Friend to tell them of them, to the great damage both of their Fame and Fortune: for, as St. Fames faith, they were as Men that look sometimes into a Glass, and presently forget their own shape and favour. As for Business, a man may think, if he will, that two Eyes fee no more than one; or that a Gamefler feeth always more than a Looker on; or that a Man in Anger is as wife as he that hath faid over the four and twenty Letters; or that a Musket may be shot off as well upon the Arm, as upon a Reft; and fuch other fond and high Imaginations, to think himfelf All in All. But when all is done, the help of good Counfel is that which fetteth Bufiness streight; and if any man think that he will take Counfel, but it shall be by pieces, asking Counfel in one business of one man, and in another business of another man; it is well, (that is to say, better perhaps than if he asked none at all) but he runneth two dangers; one, that he shall not faithfully be Counfelled; for it is a rare thing, except it be from a perfect and entire Friend, to have Counfel given, but fuch as shall be bowed and crooked to some ends, which he hath that giveth it. The other, that he shall have Counfel given, hurtful and unfafe, (though with good meaning) and mixt; partly of mischief, and partly of remedy: even as if you would call a Physician, that is thought good for the Cure of the Disease you complain of, but is unach quainted with your Body; and therefore may put you

nd

he

ne

bo

or

k,

is

X-

t)

n,

0:

10-

11,

e-

10

30

h

11 el

n

s,

1-

h

.

1

1

in a way for prefent Cure, but overthroweth your Health in some other kind, and so cure the Disease, and kill the Patient. But a Friend that is wholly acquainted with a Man's Estate, will beware by surthering any present Business, how he dasheth upon other Inconvenience; and therefore rests not upon scattered Counsels, for they will rather distract and missead, than settle and direct.

After these two noble Fruits of Friendship, (Peace in the Affections, and Support of the Judgment) followeth the last Fruit which is like the Pomegranate, full of many kernels; I mean Aid, and Bearing a part in all Actions and Occasions. Here the best way to represent to the lifethemanifold use of Friendship, is to cast and see, how many things there are, which a man cannot do himfelf; and then it will appear, that it was a sparing Speech of the Ancients, to fay, That a Friend is another bimself; for that a Friend is far more than bimself. Men have their time, and die many times in desire of fomethings, which they principally take to beart; The bestowing of a Child, the finishing of a work, or the like. If a Man have a true Friend, he may rest almost fecure, that the care of those things will continue after him: fo that a Man hath as it were two Lives in his defires. A Man hath a Body, and that Body is confined to a place; but where Friendship is, all Offices of Life are as it were granted to him and his Deputy; for he may exercise them by his Friend. How many things are there, which a Man cannot, with any face or comliness, say or do himself? A man can scarce alledge his own merits with modesty, much less extol them: A man cannot fometimes brook to supplicate or beg; and a number of the like. But all these things are graceful in a Friend's mouth, which are blushing in a man's own. So again, a man's Person hath many proper Relations, which he cannot put off. A man cannot speak to his Son, but as a Father; to his Wife but as a Husband; to his Enemy, but upon terms. Whereas a Friend Friend may speak as the case requires and not as it sorteth with the Person: But to enumerate these things were endless: I have given the Rule, where a man cannot fitly play his own part: If he have not a Friend, he may quit the Stage.

XXVIII.

Of Expence.

DICHES are for spending, and spending for Honour and good Actions: Therefore Extraordinary Expence must be limited by the worth of the occasion. For Voluntary Undoing may be as well for a man's Country, as for the Kingdom of Heaven, but Ordinary Expence ought to be limited by a Man's Estate, and governed with fuch regard, as it be within his compass, and not fubject to deceit and abuse of Servants, and ordered to the best shew, that the Bills may be less than the Estimation abroad. Certainly, if a man will keep but of even hand, his Ordinary Expences ought to be but to the half of his Receipts: And if he think to wax Rich, but to the third part. It is no baseness for the greatest to descend and look into their own Estate. Some forbear it, not upon negligence alone, but doubting to bring themselves into melancholy, in respect they shall find it broken; but Wounds cannot be cured without fearching. He that cannot look into his own Estate at all, had need both chuse well those whom he employeth, and change them oftner; for new are more timorous, and less subtle. He that can look into his Estate but feldom, it behoveth him to turn all to certainty. A man had need, if he be plentiful in some kind of Expence, to be as faving again in some other: as if he be plentiful in Diet, to be faving in Apparel: If he be plentiful in the Hall, to be faving in the Stable, and the like. For he that is plentiful in Expences of all kinds, will hardly be preferved from decay. In clearing of a man's Estate, he may as well hurt himself, in being too sudden, as in letting it run on too long. For hastly Selling is commonly as disadvantageous as Interest. Besides, he that clears at once will relapse; for sinding himself out of streights, he will revert to his customs: But he that cleareth by degrees, induceth a habit of frugality, and gaineth as well upon his mind as upon his Estate. Certainly, who hath a State to repair, may not despise small things: and commonly it is less dishonourable to abridge petty Charges, than to stoop to petty Gettings. A man ought warily to begin Charges, which once begun will continue; but in matters that return not, he may be more magnificent.

XXIX

d

Of the true Greatness of Kingdoms and Estates.

THE Speech of Themistocles the Athenian, which was haughty and arrogant, in taking so much to himfelf, had been a grave and wise observation and censure, applyed at large to others, Desired at a Feast to touch a Lute, he said, He could not siddle, but yet be could make a small Town a great City. These words, (holpen a little with a Metaphor) may express two differing abilities in those that deal in business of Estate. For if a true Survey be taken of Counsellors and Statesmen, there may be found (though rarely) those which can make a small State great, and yet cannot siddle: As on the other side, there will be found a great many that can fiddle very cunningly, but yet are so far from being able to make a small State great, as their Gift lieth

0

(

0 0

a

2

f

I

h

A

B

h

e

fe

0 li

16

G

o

21 fi

ni

H

E

the other way, to bring a great and flourishing Estate to ruine and decay. And certainly those degenerate Arts and Shifts, whereby many Counfellors and Governours gain both favour with their Masters, and estimation with the Vulgar, deferve no better name than Fidling, being things rather pleasing for the time, and graceful to themselves only, than tending to the weal and advancement to the State which they ferve. There are also (no doubt) Counsellors and Governous which may be held sufficient (Negotiis pares) able to manage Affairs, and to keep them from Precipices, and manifest inconveniences, which nevertheless are far from the ability to raife and amplifie an Estate in power, means, and fortune. But be the Workmen what they may be, let us speak of the Work; That is, the true Greatness of Kingdoms and Estates, and the Means thereof. An Argument fit for Great and Mighty Princes to have in their hand, to the end, that neither by overmeasuring their Forces, they leese themselves in vain Enterprises; nor on the other fide, by undervaluing them, they descend to fearful and pusillanimous Counfels.

The Greatness of an Estate in Bulk and Territory, doth fall under measure; and the Greatness of Finances and Revenue, doth fall under computation. The Population may appear by Musters, and the Number and Greatness of Cities and Towns by Cards and Maps. But yet there is not any thing among Civil Affairs, more subject to error, than the right valuation, and true judgment, concerning the Power and Forces of an Estate.

The Kingdom of Heaven is compared not to any great Kernel or Nut, but to a Grain of Muffard-feed, which is one of the least Grains, but hath in it a property and Spirit hastily to get up and spread. So are their States great in Territory, and yet not apt to Enlarge or Command; and some that have but a small dimension of Stem, and yet apt to be the Foundations of great Monarchies.

ate

ate

ofti-

an nd

eal.

urs

to

nd

m

er,

ey

"HE

of.

to

T-

in ng

us

y, es

24

d

15.

S,

IC.

ŋ

ZĖ,

h

d

.

Walled Towns, Stored Arfenals and Armouries, Goodly Races of Horfe, Chariots of War, Elephants, Ordnance, Artillery, and the like: All this is but a Sheep in a Lions skin, except the breed and disposition of the People be stout and warlike. Nay, Number it self) in Armies importeth not much, where the People is of weak courage: For, (as Virgil faith) It never troubles a Wolf, how many the sheep he. The Army of the Persians, in the Plains of Arbela, was such a valt Sea of People, as it did somewhat astonish the Commanders in Alexander's Army; who came to him therefore, and wished him to set upon them by night; but he answered, He would not pilfer the Victory: And the defeat was easie.

When Tigranes the Armenian, being encamped upon a Hill with 400000 Men, discovered the Army of the Romans, being not above 14000 marching towards him, he made himself merry with it, and said, Yonder Men are too many for an Ambassage, and too few for a Fight: But before the Sun fet, he found them enough to give him the Chafe with infinite flaughter. Many are the examples of great odds between Number and Courage; fo that a man may truly make a judgment, That the principal point of Greatness in any State, is, to have a Race of Military men. Neither is Money the Sinews of War, (as it is rrivially faid) where the Sinews of Mens Arms in Base and Effeminative People are failing. For Solon faid well to Craffus, (when in oftentation he shewed him his Gold) Sir, If any other come, that bath better Iron than you, be will be Master of all this Gold. Therefore let any Prince or State think foberly of his Forces, except his Militia of Natives be of good and valiant Soldiers. And let Princes on the other fide, that have Subjects of Martial disposition, know their own strength, unless they be otherwise wanting unto themselves. As for Mercenary Forces, (which is the Help in this Cafe) all examples shew, that what soever Estate or Prince doth rest upon them, He may spread his Feathers for a time, but he will mew them soon after.

The Bleffing of Judas and Islachar will never mean That the same People of Nation should be both the Lian subelp, and As between Burthens: Neither will it be, that a People over-laid with Taxes, should ever become Valiant and Martial. It is true, that Taxes levied by Consent of the State, do abate mens Courage less, a it hath been seen notably in the Excises of the Low Countries; and in some degree, in the Subsidies of Englands for you must note, that we speak now of the Hean, and not of the Purse. So that although the same Tribute and Tax, laid by Consent, or by Imposing, be all one to the Purse, yet it works diversly upon the Courage: so that you may conclude, That no People, own

*

- 1

1

-

1

1

J

1

1

t

1

1

t

1

C

I

t

2

(

charged with Tribute, is fit for Empire.

Let States that aim at Greatness take heed how their Nobility and Gentlemen do multiply too fast: For that maketh the Common Subject grow to be a Peafant, and a base Swain, driven out of Heart, and in effect but a Gentlemans Laborour: even as you may fee in Coppice Woods. If you leave your Stadles too thick, you shall never have clean Underwood, but Shrubs and Bushes. So in Countries, if the Gentlemen be too many, the Commons will be base: and you will bring it to that, that not the hundredth Poll will be fit for an Helmet; especially as to the Infantry, which is the Nerve of an Army; and so there will be great Population and little Strength. This which I speak of, hath been no where better feen, than by comparing of England and France: whereof England, though far less in Territory and Population hath been nevertheless an Over-match; in regard the Middle People of England make good Soldiers, which the Pealants of France do not. And herein the device of King Henry the Seventh (whereof I have spoken largely in the History of his Life) was Profound and Admirable in making Farms and Houses of Husbandry, of a Standard: that is, maintained with such a Proportion of Land unto them, as may breed a subject to live live in Convenient Plenty, and no Servile Condition and to keep the Plough in the hands of the Owners and not meer Hirelings. And thus indeed you shall attain to Virgil's Character which he gives to Ancient Italy

- Terra potens armisque atque ubere Gleba.

Neither is that State (which for any thing I know, is almost peculiar to England, and hardly to be found any where else, except it be perhaps in Poland) to be passed over; I mean the State of Free Servants and Attendants upon Noblemen and Gentlemen, which are no ways inferiour to the reomanny for Arms: and therefore, out of all Question, the Spendor and Magnificence, and great Retinues, and Hospitality of Noblemen and Gentlemen received into custom, doth much conduce unto Martial Greatness: Whereas contrariwise, the close and reserving Living of Noblemen and Gentlemen, causeth a Penury of Military Forces.

ion hat Va-

B 8 4

nd;

an, Tri

all

OU-

ver-

reir

hat

int,

fea

in you hes.

OM-

har pe-Ar-

ttle

ere sce:

Po-

TO-

ers, de-

can

Ad-

гу, го-

ive

By all means it is to be procured, that the Trunk of Nebuchadnezzar's Tree of Monarchy, be great enough to bear the Branches, and the Boughs; that is, That the Natural Subjects of the Crown or State, bear a sufficient Proportion to the Stranger Subjects that they govern. Therefore all States that are liberal of Naturalization towards Strangers are fit for Empire. For to think that an Handful of People can with the greatest Courage and Policy in the World, embrace too large extent of Dominion, it may hold for a time, but it will fail fuddenly. The Spartans were a nice People in point of Naturalization; whereby, while they kept their compass they stood firm; but when they did spread, and their Boughs were become too great for their Stem, they became a Wind-fall upon the fudden. Never any State was in this Point so open to receive Strangers into their Body, as were the Romans, therefore it forted with them accordingly: for they grew to the greatest Monarchy. Their manner was to grant Naturalization, (which they called Jus Civitatis) and to grant it in the highest highest Degree; that is, not only Jus Commercii, Jus Comubii, Jus Hareditatis, but also Jus suffragii, and Jus Honorum. And this, not to fingular Persons alone, but likewife to whole Families; yea, to Cities, and fometimes to Nations. Add to this their Custom of Plantation of Colonies, whereby the Roman Plant was removed into the Soyl of other Nations; and putting both Constitutions together, you will fay, that it was not the Romans that spread upon the World, but it was the World that spread upon the Romans; and that was the fure Way of Greatness. I have marvelled fometimes at Spain, how they clasp and contain fo large Dominions with fo few natural Spaniards: but fure the whole Compass of Spain is a very great Body of a Tree, far above Rome and Sparta at the first : and befides, though they have not had that usage to Naturalize liberally, yet they have that which is next to it; that is, To employ, almost indifferently, all Nations in their Militia of ordinary Soldiers: yea, and fometimes in their Higheft Commands. Nay, it feemeth at this inftant, they are sensible of this want of Natives, as by the Pragmatical Sanction, now published, appeareth.

It is certain, that Sedentary and Within-door Arts, and delicate Manufactures, (that require rather the Finger, than the Arm) have in their Nature a Contrariety to a Military disposition. And generally all Warlike People are a little idle, and love Danger better than Travel: neither must they be too much broken of it, if they shall be preferved in vigour. Therefore it was great Advantage in the Ancient States of Sparta, Athens, Rome, and others, that they had the use of Slaves, which commonly did rid those Manufactures: but that is abolished in greatest part by the Christian Law. That which cometh nearest to it, is to leave those Arts chiefly to Strangers (which for that purpose are the more easily to be received) and to contain the principal Bulk of the vulgar Natives within those three kinds; Tillers of the Ground, Free Servants, and Handicrafts Men of frong

1

t

and manly Arts; as Smiths, Masons, Carpenters, &c.

not rekoning professed Soldiers.

Fus

us

tit

18-

re-

ng

125

it

nat

ed

fo

out

dy

nd

u-

it;

en

eir

ey

cal

nd

er,

) 2

ple

el:

all

nd

ily

ch

nbe

he

he

ng nd

But above all, for Empire and Greatness it importeth most, that a Nation do profess Arms as their principal Honour: Study and Occupation: for the things which we formerly have fpoken of, are but Habilitations towards Arms; and what is Habilitation, without Intention and Act? Romulus after his death (as they report or feign) fent a present to the Romans, that above all they should intend Arms, and then they should prove the greatest Empire of the world. The fabrick of the State of Sparta was wholly (though not wifely) framed and composed to that Scope and End. The Persians and Macedonians had it for a flash. The Galls, Germans, Goths, Saxons, Normans, and others had it for a time. Turks have it at this day, though in great Declination. Of Christian Europe, they that have it, are in effect only the Spaniards. But it is so plain, That every Man profiteth in that be most intendeth, that it needeth not to be stood upon. It is enough to point at it, that no Nation which doth not directly profess Arms, may look to have Greatness fall into their mouths. And on the other fide, it is a most certain Oracle of Time, that those States that continue long in that profession (as the Romans and Turks principally have done) do wonders; and those that have professed Arms but for an Age, have notwithstanding commonly attained that Greatness in that Age, which maintained them long atter, when their Profession and exercise of Arms are grown to decay.

Incident to this Point is, for a State to have those Laws or Customs which may reach forth unto them just Occasions (as may be pretended) of War: for there is that justice imprinted in the Nature of Men, that they enter not upon Wars (whereof so many Calamities do ensue) but upon some, or at least specious Grounds and Quarrels. The Turk hath at hand, for cause of War, the Propagation of his Law or Sect, a Quarrel that he may always command. The Romans, though they esteemed the extending the Limits of their Empire to be great Honour to their Generals, when it was done; yet they never rested upon that alone to begin a War. First therefore, let Nations that pretend to Greatness, have this; that they be sensible of wrongs, either upon Borders, Merchants, or Politick Ministers, and that they fit not too long upon a Provocation. Secondly, let them be preft, and ready to give Aids and Succours to their Confederates; as it ever was with the Romans: Infomuch as if the Confederate had Leagues defensive with divers others States, and upon Invation offered, did deplore their Aids feverally; yet the Romans would ever be the foremost, and leave it to none other to have the Honour. As for the Wars which were anciently made on the behalf of a kind of Party, or tacit Conformity of Estate, I do not well say, how they may be well justified: As when the Romans made a War for the Liberty of Gracia; or when the Landles monians and Athenians made Wars to fet up or pull down Democracies and Oligarchies; or when Wars were made by Foreigners, under the pretence of Juffice or Protection, to deliver the Subjects of others from Tyranny and Oppression, and the like. Let it suffice, That no Estate expect to be Great, that is not awake, upon any just Occasion of Arming.

G 2

No Pody can be Healthful without Exercise, Neither Natural Body, nor Politick; and certainly to a Kingdom or Estate, a just and Honourable War is the true Exercise. A Civil War indeed is like the Heat of a Fever; but a Foreign War is like the Heat of Exercife, and ferveth to keep the Body in health: for in a flothful Peace both Courages will effeminate, and Manners corrupt. But howfoever it be for Happiness without all Question; for Greatness, it maketh to be still, for the most part in Arms; and the strength of a Veterane Army (though it be a chargeable Business) always on Foot, is that which commonly giveth the Law.

Law, or at least the Reputation amongst all Neighbour-States; as may well be seen in Spain, which hath had in one part or other a Veterane Army, almost continually, now by the space of sixscore years.

ms,

eir

1 it

-sc

to ei-

nd id-

1C-

Roles.

on Ro-

ne

y,

de la=

vn

de

0-ny

no

ny.

ei-

he

of

er-

a nh-

11, a

(5)

he

W,

To be Malter of the Sea, in an Abridgment of a Monarchy. Cicero writing to Atticus, of Pompey his Preparation against Cafar, faith, Confilium Pompeii plane Themistocleum est; Putat enim qui Mari potitur, eum Rerum potiri. And without doubt Pompey had tired out Cæsar, if upon vain Confidence he had not left that Way. We see the great effects of Battels by Sea. The Battel of Actium decided the Empire of the World. The Battel of Lepanto arrested the Greatness of the Turk. There be many examples, where Sea Fights have been Final to the War: but this is when Princes or States have feruptheir Rest upon the Battels. But thus much is certain, that he that commands the Sea, is at great liberty, and may take as much, and as little of the War, as he will; whereas those that be strongest by Land, are many times nevertheless in great streights. Surely at this day, with us of Europe, the Vantage of strength at Sea (which is one of the principal Dowries of this Kingdom of Great Britain) is great: both because most of the Kingdoms of Europe are not meerly In-land, but girt with the Sea, most part of their Compass; and because the Wealth of both Indies seem in great part but an Accessary to the Command of the Seas.

The Wars of Latter Ages feem to be made in the Dark, in respect of the Glory and Honour which reslected upon Men from the Wars in Ancient Time. There be now for Martial Encouragement, some Degrees and Orders of Chivalry, which nevertheless are conferred promiscuously upon Souldiers, and no Souldiers; and some Remembrance perhaps upon the Scutcheon; and some Hospitals for maimed Soldiers, and such like things. But in Ancient Times, the Trophies erected upon the place of the Victory; the Funeral Laudatives and Monuments

G3

numents for those that died in the Wars; the Crowns and Garlands personal; the Style of Emperor, which the great King of the World after borrowed; the Triumphs of the Generals upon their Return; the great Donatives and Largesses upon the Disbanding of the Armies, were things able to enflame all mens Courages. But above all, that of the Triumph amongst the Romans, was not Pageant or Gaudary, but one of the Wifeft and Noblest Institutions that ever was: for it contained three things: Honour to the General; Riches to the Treasury out of the Spoil; and Donatives to the Army. Bur that Honour perhaps were not fit for Monarchies, except it be in the Person of the Monarch himself, or his Sons; as it came to pass in the times of the Roman Emperors, who did impropriate the Actual Triumphs to themselves, and their Sons, for such Wars as they did atchieve in Persons; and left only for Wars atchieved by Subjects, some Triumphal Garments and Ensigns to the General.

To conclude, No Man can, by Care taking (as the Scripture faith) add a cubit to his Stature, in this little Model of a Mans Body; but in the great Frame of Kingdoms and Common-wealths, it is in the power of Princes or Estates to add Amplitude and Greatness to their Kingdoms. For by introducing fuch Ordinances, Constitutions and Customs, as we have now touched, they may fow Greatness to their Posterity and Succession. But these things are commonly not observed, but left to take their chance.

XXX.

Of Regiment of Health.

HERE is a Wisdom in this beyond the Rules of Physick: A Mans own observation what he finds good of, and what he finds hurt of, is the best Physick

Vns

ich

ri-

eat

the

ges.

eft

ned

he

ıy.

ies, his

771-

to

ed

to

he

tle

ig-

g-Uey

ut

se

to preserve Health. But it is a faser conclusion to fay, This agreet not well with me, therefore I will not continue it, than this, I find no offence of this, therefore I may use it. For strength of Nature in Youth pasieth over many Excesses which are owing by a Man till his Age. Difcern of the coming on of years, and think not to do the fame things still; for Age will not be defied. ware of fudden change in any great point of Diet; and if necessity inforce it, fit the rest to it: For it is a fecret both in Nature and State, that it is fafer to change many things than one. Examine thy Customs of Diet, Sleep, Exercise, Apparel, and the like: And try in any thing thou shalt judge hurtful, to discontinue it by little and little; but fo, as if thou doft find any inconvenience by the change, thou come back to it again: For it is hard to diffinguish that which is generally held good and wholesome, from that which is good particularly, and fit for a mans own Body. To befree minded, and chearfully disposed at hours of Meat, and of Sleep, and of Exercise, is one of the best precepts for long Life. Asfor the Passions and Studies of the Mind; avoid envy, anxious Fears, Anger fretting inwards, fubril and knotty Inquificions, Joys, and Exhilarations in Excess, Sadness not communicated; entertain Hopes, Mirth rather than Joy, variety of Delights, rather than Surfeit of them, Wonder and Admiration, and therefore Novelties, Studies that fill the mind with fplendid and illustrious Objects, as Histories, Fables, and Contemplations of Nature. If you fly Phyfick in Health altogether, it will be too strange for your Body when you shall need it. If you make it too familiar, it will work no extraordinary effect when Sickness cometh. I commend rather some Diet for certain Seasons, than frequent use of Physick, except it be grown into a cufrom: For those Diets after the Body more, and trouble it less. Despise no new accident in your Body, but ask opinion of it. In Sickn & respect Health Principally, and in Health, Action: For those that put their Bodies

to

f

k

Pvt

It

to endure in Healths may in most Sicknesses, which are not very sharp, be cured only with Diet and tending. Cellus could never have spoken it as a Physician, had he not been a wife Man withal, when he giveth it for one of the great Precepts of Health and Lasting, That a Man do vary, and enterchange contraries, but with an inclination to the more benign extream. Use Fasting and full Eating, but rather full Eating; Watching and Sleep, but rather Sleep; Sitting and Exercise, but rather Exercife, and the like: So shall Nature be cherished, and yet taught Masteries. Physicians are some of them fo pleasing, and conformable to the humour of the Patient, as they press not the true cure of the Disease; and fome other are fo regular, in proceeding according to Art for the Disease, as they respect not sufficiently the condition of the Patient. Take one of a middle temper, or if it may not be found in one Man, combine two of either fort; and forget not to call as well the best acquainted with your Body, as the best reputed of for his Faculty.

XXXI.

Of Suspicion.

SUSPICIONS amongst thoughts are like Bats amongst Birds, they ever fly by twilight. Certainly they are to be repressed, or at least well guarded; for they cloud the Mind, they leese Friends, that they check with Business, whereby Business cannot go on currant and constantly. They dispose Kings to Tyranny, Husbands to Jealousie, Wise Men to Irresolution and Melancholy. They are desects, not in the Heart, but in the Brain; for they take place in the stoutest Natures: As in the example of Henry the Seventh of England, there was not a more Suspicious Man, nor a more Stout:

re

ıg.

he

ne

a

ari

ng nd

eŕ

d, m

aig

y

1-

d

And in fuch a composition they do small hurt. For commonly they are not admitted, but with examination whether they be likely or no; but in fearful Natures they gain ground too fast. There is nothing makes a Man suspect much, more than to know little; and therefore Men should remedy Suspicion, by procuring to know more, and not to keep their Suspicions in smother. What would Men have? Do they think those they imploy and deal with are Saints? Do they not think they will have their own ends, and be truer to themselves than to them? Therefore there is no better way to moderate Suspicions, than to account upon such Suspicions as true, and yet to bridle them as falfe. For fo far a Man ought to make use of Suspicions, as to provide, as if that should be true that he suspects, yet it may do him no hurt. 'Suspicions that the mind of it felf gathers are but Buzzes, but Suspicions that are artificially nourished, and put into Mens heads by the tales and whispering of others, have Stings Certainly the best means to clear the way in this same Wood of Suspicions, is frankly to communicate them with the Party that he suspects; for thereby he shall be fure to know more of the truth of them than he did before; and withal, shall make that Party more circumfpect, not to give further cause of Suspicion. But this would not be done to Men of bale Natures: For they, if they find themselves once suspected, will never be true. The Italians fay, Sospetto licentia fede; as if Suspicion did give a Passport to Faith: But it ought rather to kindle it, to discharge it self.

XXXII.

Of Discourse.

SOME in their Discourse desire rather commendation of Wit, in being able to hold all Arguments, than of Judgment in discerning what is true: As if it were a praise to know what might be faid, and not what should be thought. Some have certain Common Places, and Themes, wherein they are good, and want variety; which kind of Poverty is for the most part tedious, and when it is once perceived, ridiculous. honourablest part of Talk, is to give the Occasion, again, to moderate and pass to somewhat else; for then a Man leads the Dance. It is good in Discourse and Speech of Conversation, to vary and intermingle Speech of the prefent occasion with Arguments, Tales with Reasons, asking of Questions with telling of Opinions, and Jest with Earnest: For it is a dull thing to Tire, and as we fay now, to Jade any thing too far. As for Jest, there be certain things which ought to be privileged from it; namely, Religion, Matters of State, Great Persons, any Mans present Business of importance, and any Case that deserveth pity. Yet there be some that think their Wits have been asleep, except they dart out somewhat that is piquant, and to the quick: That is a vein which should be bridled.

Parce, Puer, stimulis, & fortius utere loris.

And generally men ought to find the difference between Saltness and Bitterness. Certainly he that hath a Satyrical Vein, as he maketh others afraid of his Wit, so he had need be afraid of others Memory. He that questioneth much, shall learn much, and content much; but especially if he apply his Questions to the skill of the Persons whom he asketh: For he shall give them occasion to please themselves in speaking, and himself shall continually gather knowledge. But let his Questions not be troublesome; for that is fit for a Poser: And let him be fure to leave other Men their turns to speak. Nay, if there be any that would reign, and take up all the time, let him find means to take them off, and to bring others on, as Musicians use to do with those that dance too long Galliards. If you diffemble fometimes your

on

int

te-

he

2 en

nd

ch

ch

ıs,

re, or

vi-

e, r-

be ey k:

h

it,

at

h;

n lf i-d

11

0

your knowledge of that you are thought to know, you shall be thought another time to know that you know Speech of a mans felf ought to be feldom, and well chosen. I knew one was wont to fay in fcorn, He must needs be a Wife Man, be speaks so much of himself: And there is but one case, wherein a Man may commend himself with good Grace, and that is, in commending Vertue in another; especially if it be such a Vertue whereunto himself pretendeth. Speech of touch towards others should be sparingly used: For Discourse ought to be as a Field, without coming home to any Man. I knew two Noblemen of the west part of England, whereof the one was given to Scoff, but kept ever Royal Cheer in his House: The other would ask of those that had been at the others Table, Tell truly, was there never a Flout or dry blow given? To which the Guest would answer, Such and such a thing passed: The Lord would fay, I thought be would mar a good Dinner. Difcretion of Speech is more than Eloquence; and to speak agreeably to him with whom we deal, is more than to speak in good words, or in good order. A good continued Speech, without a good Speech of Interlocution, shews flowness; and a good Reply, or second Speech without a good fettled Speech, sheweth Shallowness and Weakness; as we see in Beasts, that those that are weakest in the Course, are yet nimblest in the Turn; as it is betwixt the Greyhound and the Hare. To use too many Circumstances e're one come to the Matter, is wearifome; to use none at all, is blunt.

XXXIII.

Of Plantations.

1

1

DLANTATIONS are amongst Ancient, Primitive, and Heroical Works. When the World was young, it begat more Children; but now it is old, it begen fewer: for I may justly account new Plantations to be the Children of former Kingdoms. I like a Plantation in a pure Soyl, that is, where People are not Difplamed, to the end, to Plant others; for elfe it is rather an Extirpation, than a Plantation. Planting of Countries is like Planting of Woods; for you must make account to lofe almost Twenty years Profit, and expect your Recompence in the end. For the principal thing that hath been the destruction of most Plantations, hath been the base and hasty drawing of profit in the first years. It is true, Speedy Profit is not to be neglected, as far as may stand with the good of the Plantation, but no further. It is a shameful and unblessed thing, to take the Scum of People, and wicked condemned Men, to be the People with whom you Plant: and not only fo, but it spoileth the Plantation; for they will ever live like Rogues, and not fall to work, but be lazy, and do mischief, and fpend Victuals, and be quickly weary; and then certifie over to their Country to the discredit of the Plantation. The People wherewith you Plant, ought to be Gardners, Plough-men, Labourers, Smiths, Carpenters, Joyners, Fishermen, Fowlers, with some few Apothecaries, Surgeons, Cooks, and Bakers. In a Countrey of Plantation, first look about what kind of Victual the Country yields of it self to Hand; as Chesnuts, Walnuts, Pine-Apples, Olives, Dates, Plumbs, Cherries, Wild-Honey, and the like, and make use of them. Then confider what Victual, or Esculent things there are, which grow speedily, and within the year; as Parsnips, Carrots, ve,

ng,

be tion

ted;

Ex-

15

to

Re-

ath

the

It

as ur-

the

be but

0-ef;

nen

7%-

be

rs,

10-ey

he

ts,

den

re,

05, ts,

and

Carrots, Turnips, Onions, Raddish, Artichoaks of Ferusalem, Maiz, and the like. For Wheat, Barly, and Oats, they ask too much labour: But with Peale and Beans you may begin, both because they ask less labour, and because they serve for Meat as well as for Bread. And of Rice likewise cometh a great encrease, and it is a kind of Meat. Above all, there ought to be brought store of Bisker, Oat-meal Flour, Meal, and the like, in the beginning, till Bread may be had. For Beafts and Birds, take chiefly fuch as are least subject to Difeases, and multiply fastest; as Swine, Goats, Cocks, Hens, Turkeys, Geefe, Houfe Doves, and the The Victual in Plantations ought to be expended, almost as in a befieged Town; that is, with a certain Allowance; and let the main part of the Ground employed to Gardens or Corn, be to a common flock, and to be laid in, and flored up, and then delivered out in Proportion, besides some Spots of ground that any particular Person will manure for his own private use. Consider likewise what Commodities the Soyl, where the Plantation is, doth naturally yield, that they may some way help to defray the charge of the Plantation: So it be not, as was faid, to the untimely Prejudice of the main business; as it hath fared with Tobacco in Virginia. Wood commonly aboundeth but too much, and therefore Timber is fit to be one. If there be Iron Ore, and streams whereupon to set the Mills, Iron is a brave commodity where Wood aboundeth. Making of Bay Salt, if the Climate be proper for it, would be put in experience. Growing Silk likewise if any be, is a likely commodity. Pitch and Tar, where ftore of Firs and Pines are, will not fail. So Drugs, and Sweet Woods, where they are, cannot but yield great profit. Soap Ashes likewise, and other things that may be thought of. But moil not too much under Ground; for the hope of Mines is very uncertain, and ufeth to make the Planters lazy in other things. For Government, let it be in the hands of one affifted with some Counfel; and let their have commission to exercise Martial Laws with some limitation. And above all, Let Men make that Profit of being in the Wilderness, as they have God always, and his fervice before their eyes. Let not the Government of the Plantation depend upon too many Counfellors and undertakers in the Country that Planteth, but upon a temperate number; and let those be rather Noblemen and Gentlemen, than Merchants; for they look ever to the prefent Gain. Let there be Freedoms for Cuftom, till the Plantation be of Strength; and not only Freedom from Cuftom, but Freedom to carry their Commodities, where they may make the best of them, except there be some special cause of Caution. Cram not in People, by fending too fast, Company after Company, but rather hearken how they wafte, and fend supplies proportionably; but so, as the number may live well in the Plantation, and not by furcharge be in penury. It hath been a great endangering to the health of some Plantations, that they have built along the Sea and Rivers in marish and unwholesome Grounds. Therefore, though you begin there to avoid carriage, and other like discommodities, yet build still rather upwards from the Streams, than along. It concerneth likewise the health of the Plantation, that they have good flore of Salt with them, that they may use it in their Victuals, when it shall be necessary. If you Plant where Savages are, do not only entertain them with trifles and gingles, but use them justly and graciously, with fufficient guard nevertheless; and do not win their favour by helping them to invade their Enemies, but for their defence it is not amifs. And fend oft of them over to the Country that Plant, that they may fee a better condition than their own, and commend it when they return. When the Plantation grows to strength, then it is time to Plant with Women as well as with Men, that the Plantation may spread into Generations, and not be ever pieced from without. It is the finfullest thing in the World to forfake or destitute? Plantation

-

-

Ws

ake

not too hat

ofe ts;

be th;

to

the

au-

m-ney

the ur-

ng

2-

me

2-ild

It

nat ay

in nd do

End

ey

nd

to

he-

ea

ion

Plantation once in forwardness; for besides the dishonour, it is guiltiness of Blood of many commiserable Perfons.

XXXIV.

Of Riches.

Cannot call Riches better than the baggage of Vertue. The Roman word is better, Impedimenta; for as the Baggage is to an Army, fo is Riches to Vertue. It cannot be spared, nor left behind, but it hindreth the March: Yea, and the care of it fometimes lofeth or diffurbeth the Victory. Of great Riches there is no real use, except it be in the Distribution, the rest is but conceit: So faith Solomon, Where much is there are many to consume it; and what bath the owner, but the fight of it with his eyes? The personal Fruition in any man cannot reach to feel great Riches: There is a Custody of them, or a power of Dole and Donative of them, or a Fame of them, but no foliduse to the owner. Do you not fee what feigned Prices are fet upon little Stones and Rarities? And what works of Oftentation are undertaken, because there might seem to be some use of great Riches? But then you will fay, they may be of use to buy men out of dangers or troubles: as Solomon faith, Riches are a strong Hold in the Imagination of the Rich Man. But this is excellently expressed, That it is in Imagination, and not always in Fact: For certainly great Riches have fold more Men than they have bought out. Seek not proud Riches, but fuch as thou mayeft ger justly, use soberly, distribute chearfully, and leave contentedly: Yet have no Abstract nor Frierly contempt of them, but diffinguish, as Cicero faith well of Rabirius Postburnus; In studio rei amplificanda apparebat, non Avaritie prædam, sed instrumentum Bonitatis, quæri. Hearken ken also to Solomon, and bewate of hasty gathering of Riches: Qui festinat ad Divitias, non erit infons. The Poets feign, that when Plutus (which is Riches) is fent from Jupiter, he limps and goes flowly; but when he Is fent from Pluto, he runs, and is swift of foot; mean ing, that Riches gotten by good means, and just labour, pace flowly: But when they come by the death of o thers, (as by the course of inheritance, Testaments, and the like) they come tumbling upon a Man. But it might be applied likewise to Pluto, taking him for the Devil; for when Riches come from the Devil (as by Fraud, and Oppression, and unjust means) they come upon Speed. The Ways to inrich are many, and most of them foul; Parsimony is one of the best, and yet is not innocent; for it withholdeth Men from works of Liberality and Charity. The Improvement of the ground is the most natural obtaining of Riches; for it is our Great Mothers Bleffing, the Earths, but it is flow; and yet where the Men of great wealth do ftoop to Husbandry, it multiplieth Riches exceedingly. I knew a Noble man of England, that had the greatest Audits of any Man in my time: A great Grafier, a great Sheep-Mafter, a great Timber-Man, a great Collier, a great Com-Master, a great Lead-Man, and so of Iron, and a number of the like points of Husbandry; fo as the Earth feemed a Sea to him in respect of the perpetual Importation. It was truly observed by One, that himself came very hardly to a little Riches, and very eafily to great Riches; for when a Mans stock is come to that, that he can expect the Prime of Markets, and overcome those bargains, which for their greatness are few Mens money, and be Partner in the industries of Younger Men, he cannot but encrease mainly. The Gains of ordinary Trades and Vocations are honest, and furthered by two things, chiefly, by Diligence, and by a good Name, for good and fair dealing. But the Grains of Bargain are of a more doubtful Nature, when Men shall wait upon others Necessity, broke by Servants and Instruments

ŧ

1

t

1 ł

t

i

c

1 ć

1

of

The

ent

he

an-

our,

0

and it

the

by

me

oft

tis

of

und

DUI

ind

an-ole-

ny

er,

rn-

m-rth

or-elf

to

at,

me

ens

en,

ary

VO

ie,

ins

ait

unts

ments to draw them on, put off others cunningly that would be better Chapmen, and the like practifes which are crafty and naught. As for the Chopping of Bargains, when a Man buys, not to hold, but to fell over again, that commonly grinderh double, both upon the Seller and upon the Buyer. Sharings do greatly inrich, if the Hands be well chosen that are trusted. Usury is the certainest means of Gain, though one of the worst; as that whereby a Man doth eat his Bread, In sudore vultus alieni: And besides, doth plow upon Sundays. But yet, certain though it be, it hath Flaws; for that the Scriveners and Brokers do value unfound Men to ferve their own turn. The Fortune, in being the first in an Invention, or in a Privilege, doth cause sometimes a wonderful overgrowth in Riches; asit was with the first Sugar-Manin the Canaries: therefore if a Man can play the true Logician, to have as well Judgment as Invention, he may do great matters, especially if the Times be fit. He that resteth upon Gains Certain, shall hardly grow to great Riches; and he that puts all upon Adventures, doth oftentimes break, and come to Poverty: It is good therefore to guard Adventures with Certainties that may uphold losses. Monopolies and Coemption of Wares for Refale, where they are not restrained, are great means to orrich, especially if the Party have intelligence what things are like to come into request, and to store himfelf before-hand. Riches gotten by Service, though it be of the best Rise, yet when they are gotten by Flattery, feeding Humours, and other fervile Conditions, they may be placed amongst the Worst. As for fishing for Testaments and Executorships, (as Tacitus faith of Soneca, Testamenta & Orbos tanquam Indagine capi) it is yet worfe, by how much men fubmit themselves to meaner persons, than in Service. Believe not much them that feem to despise Riches; for they despise them that despair of them, and none worse when they come to them. Be not Penny-wife; Riches have Wings, and tometimes they fly away of themselves; sometimes they must be set slying to bring in more. Men leave their Riches either to their Kindred, or to the Publick; and moderate Portions prosper best in both. A great State less to an Heir, is as a Lure to all the Birds of prey, round about to seize on him, if he be not the better established in Years and Judgment. Likewise glorious Gifts and Foundations are like Sacrifices without Salt, and but the Painted Sepulchres of Alms, which soon will putresse and corrupt inwardly: Therefore measure not thine advancements by quantity, but frame them by measure; and defer not Charities till death: For certainly if a man weigh it rightly, he that doth so is rather liberal of another mans, than of his own.

XXXV.

Of Prophecies.

MEAN not to speak of Divine Prophecies, nor of Heathen Oracles, nor of Natural Predictions, but only of Prophecies that have been of certain Memory, and from hidden Causes. Saith the Pythonissa to Saul, To morrow thou and thy Son shall be with me. Homer hath these Verses,

At domus Æneæ cunctis dominabitur oris Et nati natorum, & qui nascentur ab illis.

A Prophecy, as it feems, of the Roman Empire. Seneca, the Tragedian, hath these Verses.

Venient Annis Secula seris, quibus Oceanus Vincula rerum laxet, & ingens Pateat Tellus, Tiphysque novos Detegat orbes; nec sic terris Ultima Thule:

A

hPhbV

V

A

0

No

th

he

th

in

M

la an

SpT

an

at of he se

h ane

th

of

y,

th

A Prophecy of the Discovery of America. The Daughter of Polycrates dreamed, that Jupiter bathed her Father, and Apollo anointed him; and it came to pass that he was Crucified in an open Place, where the Sun made his Body run with Sweat, and the Rain washed it. Philip of Macedon dreamed he fealed up his Wife's Belly: whereby he did expound is that his Wife should be barren: But Aristander the South-Sayer told him his Wife was with Child, because Men do not use to seal Vessels that are empty. A Phantasm that appeared to M. Brutus in his Tent, faid to him, Philippis iterum me videbis. Tiberius faid to Galba, Tu quoque, Galba, degustabis Imperium. In Vespasian's time there went a Prophecy in the East, that those that should come forth of Fudea should reign over the World: Which though it may be was meant of our Saviour, yet Tacitus expounds it of Vespasian. Domitian dreamed the night before he was flain, that a Golden Head was growing out of the Nape of his Neck: And indeed the fuccession that followed him for many years made Golden Times. the Sixth of England, faid of Henry the Seventh, when he was a Lad, and gave him Water, This is the Lad that shall enjoy the Crown for which we strive. When I was in France, I heard from one Doctor Pena, that the Queen Mother, who was given to curious Arts, caused the King her Husband's Nativity to be Calculated under a false Name: And the Astrologer gave a Judgment, that he should be killed in a Duel; at which the Queen laughed, thinking her Husband to be above Challenges and Duels: But he was flain upon a Course at Tilt, the Splinters of the Staff of Mongomery going in at his Bever. The trivial Prophecy that I heard when I was a Child, and Queen Elizabeth was in the Flower of her Years, was ;

When Hempe is Spun, England's done.

Whereby it was generally conceived, that after the Princes had Reigned, which had the principal Letters of that Word Hempe, (which were Hemy, Edward, Mary, Philip, and Elizabeth,) England should come to utter Confusion; which thanks be to God is verified in the Change of the Name; for that the King's Styles no more of England, but of Britain. There was also another Prophecy, before the Year of 88. which I do not well understand:

There shall be seen upon a day, Between the Baugh and the May,
The Black Feet of Norway.
When that is come and gone, England build Houses of Lime and Stone, For after Wars shall you have none.

It was generally conceived to be meant of the Spanish Fleet that came in 38. For that the King of Spain's Sirname, as they say, is Norway. The Prediction of Regiomentanus, Octogessimus octavus mirabilis Annus,

Was thought likewise accomplished, in the sending of that great Fleet, being the greatest in strength, though not in number, that ever swam upon the Sea. As for Cleon's Dream, I think it was a Jest; It was, That he was devoured of a long Dragon; and it was expounded of a Maker of Sausages that troubled him exceedingly. There are numbers of the like kind, especially if you include Dreams and Predictions of Astrology. But I have set down these sew only of certain credit for example My judgment is, that they ought all to be despised, and ought

c

C

n a

t

P

t

I

t

n

the

ought to serve but for winter-talk by the fire-fide: Though, when I fay Despised, I mean it as for belief; for otherwise, the spreading or publishing of them is in no fort to be Despised; for they have done much mischief. And I fee many fevere Laws made to suppress That that have given them grace, and fome credit, confifteth in three things : First, That Men mark when they hit, and never mark when they mifs; as they do generally also of Dreams. The second is. That probable Conjectures, or obfcure Traditions, many times turn themselves into Prophecies, while the Nature of Man, which covereth Divination, thinks it no peril to foretell that which indeed they do but collect: As that of Seneca's Verse. For somuch was then subject to Demonstration, that the Globe of the Earth had great Parts beyond the Atlantick; which might be probably conceived not to be all Sea: And adding thereto, the Tradition in Plato's Timeus, and his Atlanticus, it might encourage one to turn it to a Prediction. third and Last (which is the Great one) is. That almost all of them, being infinite in number, have been Impostures, and by idle and crafty Brains meerly contrived and feigned after the Event past.

ard,

to

fied

eis

02-

not gh

he led ly.

ive

ole.

nd

ht

XXXVI.

Of Ambition.

A MBITION is like Choler, which is an Humour that maketh Men Active, Earnest, full of Alacrity, and Stirring, if it be not stopped, but if it be stopped and cannot have its way, it becometh a dust, and thereby Malign and Venomous. So Ambutious Men, if they find the way open for their Rising, and still get forward, they are rather Busie than Dangerous; but if they be theckt in their desires, they become secretly discontent,

H 3

and

and look upon Men and Matters with an Evil Eye, and are best pleased when things go backward, which is the worst property in a Servant of a Prince or State. Thereforeit is good for Princes, if they use Ambitious Men, to handle it fo, as they be still Progressive, and not Retro. grade; which, because it cannot be without inconvenience, it is good not to use such Natures at all. For if they rife not with their Service, they will take order to make their Service fall with them. But fince we have faid, it were good not to use Men of Ambitious Natures, except it be upon necessity, it is fit we speak in what cases they are of necessity. Good Commanders in the Wars must be taken, be they never fo Ambitious; for the use of their Service dispenseth with the rest; and to take a Soldier without Ambition, is to pull off his Spurs. There is also greatuse of Ambitious Men, in being Skreens to Princes in matters of danger and Envy; for no man will take that part, except he be like a feeld Dove, that mounts and mounts, because he cannot see about him. There is use also of Ambitious Men, in pulling down the greatness of any Subject that over-tops; as Tiberius used Macro in pulling down of Sejanus. Since therefore they must be used in such cases, there resteth to speak how they are to be bridled, that they may be less Dangerous. There is less Danger of them, if they be of mean Birth than if they be Noble; and if they be rather harsh of Nature, than Gracious and Popular; and if they be rather new raifed, than grown cunning, and fortified in their Greatness. It is counted by some a weakness in Princes to have Favourites; but it is of all others the best remedy against Ambitious Great Ones. For when the way of pleasuring and displeasuring lieth by the Favorrite, it is impossible any other should be Over-great. nother means to curb them, is to balance them by o thers as proud as they. But then there must be some middle Counfellors to keep things fleady; for without that Ballast the Ship will roul too much. At the least, a Prince may animate and inure fome meaner Persons,

and

ere-

, to tro.

For

rder

We Na-

in 145 :

and

urs.

ens

nan hat

im.

che

fed

ney

th,

be

in

in eft

111-one ut

ıt,

to be as it were Scourges to Ambitious Men. As for the having of them obnoxious to ruine, if they be of fearful Natures, it may do well; but if they be frout and daring, it may precipitate their Defigns, and prove dangerous. As for the pulling of them down, if the Affairs require it, and that it may not be done with fafery fuddenly, the only way is, the enterchange continually of Favours and difgraces; whereby they may not know what to expect, and be as it were in a Wood. Of Ambitions, it is less harmful the Ambition to prevail in great things, than that other to appear in every thing; for that breeds confusion, and mars business. But yet it is less Danger, to have an Ambitious Man stirring in business, than great in dependences. He that feeketh to be eminent amongst able Men, hath a great task; but that is ever good for the Publick; but he that plots to be the only Figure amongst Cyphers, is the decay of an whole Age. Honour hath three things in it: The Vantage Ground to do good, the approach to Kings and Principal Persons, and the raising of a Mans own For-He that hath the best of these Intentions when he aspireth, is an honest Man; and that Prince that can discern of these Intentions in another that aspireth, is a wife Prince. Generally, let Princes and States chuse fuch Ministers as are more sensible of Duty, than of Rifing; and fuch as love Bufiness rather upon Conscience, than upon Bravery; and let them difcern a busie Nature from a willing Mind.

XXXVII.

Of Masks and Triumphs.

THESE Things are but Toys, to come amongst fuch serious Observations. But yet, since Princes will have such things, it is better they should be graced

H 4

with

with Elegancy, than daubed with Cost. Dancing to Song. is a thing of great State and Pleafure. I understand it. that the Song be in Choire, placed aloft, and accompanied with some broken Musick, and the Ditty fitted to the Device. a Eting in Song, especially in Dialogues, hath an extream good Grace: I fay Acting, not Dancing, (for that is a mean and vulgar thing) and the Voices of the Dialogue would be strong and manly, (a Base, and a Tenor, no Treble,) and the Ditty High and Tragical, not Nice or Dainty. Several Choires placed one over against another, and taking the Voice by Catches, Anthem-wife, give great Pleasure. Turning Dances into Figure is a childish curiosity; and generally let it be noted, that those things which I here set down, are such as do naturally take the Senfe, and not respect petty Wonderments. It is true, the Alterations of Scenes, fo it be quietly, and without noise, are things of great Beauty and Pleasure, for they feed and relieve the Eye, before it be full of the same Object. Let the Scenes abound with Light, specially Coloured and Varied; and let the Maskers, or any other that are to come down from the Scene, have fome motions upon the Scene it felf, before their coming down; for it draws the Eye strangely, and makes it with great pleasure to desire to see that it cannot perfectly difcern. Let the Songs be Loud and Chearful, and not Chirpings or Pulings. Let the Musick likewife be Sharp and Loud, and well placed. The Colours that shew best by Candle-light, are White, Carnation, and a kind of Sea-water Green; and Oes or Spangs, as they are of no great Cost, so they are of most Glory. As for Rich Embroidery, it is loft, and not difcerned. Let the Suits of Maskers be graceful, and fuch as become the Person when the Vizars are off, not after examples of known Attires; Turks, Soldiers, Mariners, and the like. Let Anti-masks not be long, they have been commonly of Fools, Satyrs, Baboons, Wild-men, Antiques, Beafts, Spirits, Witches, Ethiops, Pigmies, Turquets, Nymphs, Rufticks, Cupids, Statua's moving, and the

it,

pato

ath

for

he

la

al,

a-

Fi-

do,

er-

ii-

it th

e, ıd

1r-

ers

1, 15

V.

like. As for Angels, it is not Comical enough to put them in Anti-masks; and any thing that is hideous, as Devils, Giants, is on the other fide as unfit. But chiefly, let the Musick of them be Recreative, and with some strange Changes. Some sweet Odours suddenly coming forth, without any drops falling, are in such a Company, as there is Steam and Heat, things of great pleasure and refreshment. Double Masks, one of Men, another of Ladies, addeth State and Variety. But all is nothing, except the Room be kept clear and neat.

For Justs, and Turneys, and Barriers, the Glories of them are chiefly in the Chariots, wherein the Challengers make their Entry, specially if they be drawn with strange Beasts, as Lions, Bears, Camels, and the like; or in the Devices of their Entrance, or in the bravery of their Liveries, or in the goodly Furniture of their Horses and Armour. But enough of these toys.

XXXVIII.

Of Nature in Men.

ATURE is often Hidden, fometimes Overcome, feldom Extinguished. Force maketh Nature more violent in the Return; Doctrine and Discourse maketh Nature less importune: But Custom only doth alter and subdue Nature. He that seeketh Victory over his Nature, let him not set himself too great, nor too small Tasks, for the first will make him dejected, by often Failings; and the second will make him a small Proceeder, though by often Prevailings. And at the first, let him practise with Helps, as Swimmers do with Bladders or Rushes; but after a time let him practise with disadvantages, as Dancers do with thick Shooes: For it breeds great Persection, if the practice be harder than the Use. Where Nature is mighty, and therefore the Victory hard, the Degrees had need be, First, to flay and arrest Nature in time, like to him that would fay over the Four and Twenty Letters when he was Angry, than to go less in quantity; As if one should in forbearing Wine, come from drinking Healths to a Draught at a Meal, and laftly to discontinue altogether; But if a Man have the Fortitude and Resolution to enfranchife himself at once, that is the best;

Optimus ille animi vindex, lædentia pectus Vincula qui rupit, dedoluitque semel.

Neither is the Ancient Rule amiss to bend Nature, as a wand to a contrary Extream, whereby to fet it right, understanding it where the contrary Extream is no Vice Let not a Man force a Habit upon himself with a perpetual Continuance, but with fome Intermission; for both the Paufe re-inforceth the new Onfet: And if a Man that is not perfect be ever in practife, he shall as well practife his Errors, as his Abilities, and induce one Habit of both; and there is no means to help this, but by feafonable Intermission. But let not a Man trust his Victory over his Nature too far; for Nature will lie buried a great time, and yet revive upon the Occasion of Temptation. Like as it was with Afop's Damfel, turned from a Cat to a Woman, who fate very demurely at the Boards end, till a Mouse run before her. Therefore let a Man either avoid the Occasion altogether, or put himself often to it, that he may be little moved with it. A Mans Nature is best perceived in privateness, for there is no Affection in Passion, for that putteth a Man out of his Precepts; and in a new Cafe of Experiment, for their Custom leaveth him. are happy Men whose Natures fort with their Vocations, otherwise they may fay, Multum Incola fuit Anima mea; when they converse in those they do not effect. In Studies whatfoever a man commandest upon himself, let him fet hours for it; but what foever is agreeable to his Nature, let him take no care for any fet Times, for his his thoughts will fly to it of themselves; so as the spaces of other business or Studies will suffice. A mans Nature runs either to Herbs or Weeds; therefore let him feafonably water theone, and deftroy the other.

uld

S.W uld

02 er; en-

ht, ce or fa ce is,

ie n

XXXIX.

Of Custom and Education.

MENS Thoughts are much according to their In-clination, their Difcourfe and Speeches according to their Learning and infused Opinions; but their Deeds are after as they have been accustomed: And therefore as Machiavel well noteth, (though in an ill-favoured Inflance) there is no trufting to the force of Nature nor to the bravery of Words, except it be corroborate by Custom. His instance is, that for the archieving of a desperate Conspiracy, a Man should not rest upon the fierceness of any Mans Nature, or his resolute undertakings; but take fuch an one as hath had his hands formerly in Blood. But Machiaval knew not of a Frier Clement, not a Ravilliac, nor a Jauregy, nor a Baltazer Gerrard; yet this Rule holdeth still, that Nature, nor the Engagement of Words are not fo forcible as Customs. Only Superfition is now fo well advanced, that Men of the first blood are as firm as Butchers by Occupation, and Votary Resolution is made Equipollent to Custom, even in matter of blood. In other things the predominancy of Custom is every where visible, infomuch as a man would wonder to hear men Profess, Protest, Engage, give great Words, and then do just as they have done before, as if they were dead Images, and Engines moved only by the wheels of Custom. We see also the Reign or Tyranny of Custom, what it is. The Indians (I mean the Sect of their Wife Men) lay themselves quietly upon a flack of Wood, and so Sacrifice themfelves felves by fire. Nay, the Wives strive to be burned with the Corps of their Husbands. The Lads of Sparta of ancient time, were wont to be scourged upon the Altar of Diana without fo much as Squeeking. I remember in the beginning of Queen Elizabeth's time, of England, an Irish Rebel condemned, put up a Petition to the Da puty, that he might be hanged in a Wyth, and not in an Halter, because it had been so used with former Rebels. There be Monks in Russia, for Pennance, that will fit a whole night in a Veffel of Water, till they be engaged with hard Ice. Many examples may be put down of the Force of Custom, both upon mind and body. Therefore fince Custom is the Principal Magistrate of Man's life, let Men by all means endeavour to obtain good Customs. Certainly Custom is most perfect when it beginneth in young years: This we call Education, which is in effect but an early Custom. So we see in Languages, the Tongue is more pliant to all Expreffions and Sounds, the Joynts are more fupple to all Feats of Activity and motions in Youth than afterwards. For it is true, the late Learners cannot fo well take the ply, except it be in fome minds that have not fuffered themselves to fix, but have kept themselves open and prepared to receive continual amendment, which is exceeding rare. But if the Force of Custom, Simple and Separate, be great, the Force of Custom Copulate, and Conjoyned, and Collegiate, is far greater. For their Example teacheth, Company comforteth, Emulation quickneth, Glory raifeth: So as in fuch Places the Force of Custom is in his Exaltation. Certainly the great multiplication of Virtues upon humane Nature, resteth upon Societies well ordained and disciplined: for Common-wealths and good Governments do nourish Virtue Grown, but do not much mend the Seeds. mifery is, that the most effectual Means are now apply-ed to the Ends leaft to be defired.

XI

th ar

er id,

اند

in

er

at

be ut

Q-

ate

b-ect

lu-

ee

ef-

all

er-

ell

ot

en

ch

ole

te,

10

u-

he

at

th

nue

he

Of Fortune.

T cannot be denyed, but outward accidents conduce much to Fortune: Favour, Opportunity, Death of others, Occasion fitting Virtue. But chiefly the mould of a Man's Fortune is in his own hands. Faber quisque Fortuna fue, faith the Poet. And the most frequent of External Caules is, that the Folly of one man is the Fortune of another. For no man prospers so suddenly, as by others errors. Serpens nist Serpentem comederit non fit Draco. Overt and Apparent Virtues bring forth Praise; but there be Secret and Hidden Virtues that bring forth Fortune. Certain Deliveries of a Man's felf, which have no Name. The Spanish Name, Desemboltura, partly expresseth them, when there be not Stands nor Restiveness in a Man's Nature, but that the Wheels of his Mind keep way with the Wheels of his Fortune. For fo Livy (after he had described Cato Major, in these words, in illo viro, tantum Robur Corporis & Animi fuit, ut quocunque loco natus effet, Fortunam sibi facturus videretur) falleth upon that, that he had Versatile Ingenium. Therefore if a man look sharply and attentively, he shall fee Fortune: For though she be blind, yet she is not invisible. The way of Fortune is like the Milkie Way in the Skie, which is a Meeting or Knot of a number of small Stars; not seen asunder, but giving Light together: So are there a number of little, and scarce discerned Virtues, or rather Faculties and Customs that make men Fortunate. The Italian note some of them, such as a Man would little think: When they speak of one that cannot do amis, they will through in into his other Conditions that he hath, Poco di Matto. And certainly, there be not two more Fortunate properties, than to have a little of the Fool, and not too much of the Honest. Therefore extream Lovers of their Country, or Masters, were never Fortunate, neither can they be. For when a man placeth placeth his thoughts without himself, he goeth not his own way, and hafty Fortune maketh an Enterprifer and Remover; (the French hath it better. Enterprenant or Remuant) but the exercifed Fortune maketh the able Man. Fortune is to be Honoured and Respected, if it be but for her Daughters, Confidence and Reputation: For those two Felicity breedeth; the first, within a Man's felf, the latter in others towards him. All wife men to decline the Envy of their own Virtues, use to ascribe them to Providence and Fortune; for fo they may the better affure them: And besides, it is Greatness in a Man to be the Care of the Higher Powers. So Cafar faid to the Pilot in the Tempest, Cafarem portas, & Fortunam ejus. So Sylla chose the Name of Felix, and not of Magnus. And it hath been noted, that those that afcribe openly too much to their own Wisdom and Policy, end Unfortunate. It is written, That Timotheus the Athemian, after he had, in the account he gave to the State of his Government, often interlaced his Speech, And in this Fortune had no part, never prospered in any thing he undertook afterwards. Certainly there be, whose Fortunes are like Homer's Verses, that have a Slide and Easiness more than the Verses of other Poets, as Plut arch faith of Timeleon's Fortune, in respect of that of Agesilans, or Epaminondas: And that this should be, no doubt it is much in a Man's felf.

T

do

Bo

25

So

po

It

of

Cofo

fe

U

m

hi

T

fe

th

AT

m

XLL

Of Usury.

A NY have made witty Invectives against Usury. They say, That it is pity the Devil should have God's part, which is the Tithe. That the Usury is the greatest Sabbath-breaker, because his Plough goeth every Sunday. That the Usurer is the Drone that Virgil speaketh of:

le

at of

to

be a

17-ot if-

y, te

in

he

17-fi-

th

70

ne

Ignavum fucus pecus à præsepibus arcent.

That the Usurer breaketh the first Law that was made for Mankind after the Fall; which was, In Sudore vultus to comedes panem tuum, not, In sudore vultus alieni. That Ulivers should have Orainge-tawny Bonnets, because they do Judaize. That it is against Nature, for Money to beget Money, and the like. I fay this only, that Usury is a Concessum propter duritiem cordis : For fince there must be Borrowing and Lending, and Men are so hard of Heart, as they will not lend freely, Usury must be permitted. Some others have made Suspicious and Cunning Propolitions of Banks, discovery of Meri's Estates, and other Inventions, but few have spoken of Usury usefully. It is good to fet before us the Incommodities and Commodities of Ulury, that the good may be either Weighed out, or Called out; and wearily to provide, that while we make forth to that which is better, we meet not with that which is worfe.

The Discommodities of Usury are, First, That it makes fewer Merchants: for were it not for this lazy Trade of Ulury, Money would not lie still, but would in great part be employed upon Merchandifing, which is the Vena Porta of Wealth in a State. The second, That it makes poor Merchants; for as a Farmer cannot husband his Ground so well, if he sit at a great Rent: So the Merchant cannot drive his Trade fo well, if he fit at great Usury. The third is incident to the other two; and that is, The decay of Customs, of Kings, or States, which Ebb or Flow with Merchandizing. The fourth, That it bringeth the Treasure of a Realm or State into a few hands; for the Usurer being at Certainties, and others at Uncertainties, at the end of the Game most of the Money will be in the Box; and ever a State flouritheth, when Wealth is more equally spread. The fifth, That it beats down the price of Land; for the employment of Money is chiefly either Merchandizing or Purchaing and Usury way-lays both. The Sixth, That it doth dull and damp all Industries, Improvements, and new Inventions, wherein Money would be flirring, if it were not for this Slug. The last, That it is the Canker and Ruine of many Men's Estates, which in process of time breeds a publick Poverty.

On the other fide, the Commodities of Usary are: First. That howfoever Usary in some respect hindresh Merchandizing, yet in some other it advanceth it; for it is certain, that the greatest part of Trade is driven by young Merchants, upon borrowing at Interest: So a if the Usurer either call in, or keep back his Money, there will enfue presently a great stand of Trade. The fecond is, That were it not for this easie borrowing upon Interest, Mens necessities would draw upon them a most fudden undoing, in that they would be forced to fell their Means (be it Lands or Goods) far under foot; and so whereas Using doth but gnaw upon them, bad Markets would fwallow them quite up. As for Mortaging or Pawning, it will little mend the matter; for either men will not take Pawns without Ufe, or if they do, they will look precifely for the forfeiture. I remember a cruel Monied Man in the Country, that would fay, The Devil take this Usury, it keeps us from Forfeitures of Mortgages and Bonds. The third and last is, That it is a vanity to conceive, that there would be ordinary borrowing without profit; and it is impofible to conceive, the number of inconveniences that will enfue, if borrowing be cramped: Therefore to speak of the abolishing of Usury is idle. All States have ever had it in one kind, or rate or other: fo as that o pinion must be fent to Utopia.

To speak now of the Reformation and Reiglement of Ufury how the Discommodities of it may be best avoided, and the Commodities retained. It appears by the Ballance of Commodities and Discommodities of Usury, two things are to be reconciled: The one, that the Tooth of Usury be grinded, that it bite not too much: The other, that there

t

I

Tal

t

y

T

V

E

c

t

t

10 m

n

h

th

21

there be lest open a means to invite Monied Men to lend to the Merchants, for the Continuing and Quickning of Trade. This cannot be done, except you introduce two feveral forts of Usury, a less and a greater. For if you reduce Usury to one low rate, it will ease the Common Borrower, but the Merchant will be to seek for Money. And it is to be noted, that the Trade of Merchant dize, being the most Lucrative, may bear Usury at a good rate; other Contracts not fo.

ind

an-ceß

rft, er-

r it by 25

ey,

W-noo

be far

on

As

at-10 hat

om

ind

uld

pohat

to ave

0 Ù-

ed,

ing hat

ere

To ferve both Intentions the way would be chiefly thus: That there be two Rates of Usury, the one Free and General for all, the other under Licence only to certain Persons, and in certain Places of Merchandizing. First therefore, let Usury in general be reduced to Five in the Hundred, and let that Rate be proclaimed to be Free and Currant; and let the Sare shut it self out to take any penalty for the fame. This will preferve Borrowing from any general Stop or Dryness. This will ease infinite Borrowers in the Country. This will in good part raife the price of Land, because Land purchased at Sixteen years purchase, will yield Six in the Huhdred, and somewhat more, whereas this Rate of Interest yields but Five. This by reason will encourage and edge Industrious and Profitable Improvements, because many will rather venture in that kind, than take Five in the Hundred, especially having been used to greater profit. Secondly, Let there be certain Persons Licensed to lend to known Merchants, upon Usury, at a High-Rate; and let it be with the Cautions following. Let the Rate be, even with the Merchant himself, somewhat more easie than that he used formerly to pay: for by that means all Borrowers shall have some ease by this Reformation, be he Merchant or whofoever. Let it be no Bank or Common Stock, but every man be Master of his own Money. Not that I altogether mislike Banks, but they will hardly be brooked, in regard of certain fuspicions. Let the State be answered some small matter for the License, and the rest less to the Lender; for if the abarement be but but fmall, it will no whit discourage the Lender. For he, for example, that took before Ten or time in the Hundred, will sooner descend to Eight in the Hundred, than give over his Trade of Usiny, and go from Certain Gains to Gains of Hazard. Let these Licensed Lenders be in number indefinite, but restrained to certain principal Cities and Towns of Merchandizing, for then they will be hardly able to colour other mens moneys in the Country, so as the License of Nine will not such away the current Rate of Five; for no man will Lend his Moneys far off, nor put them into unknown hands.

114 Sir Francis Bacon's Effays.

If it be objected, That this doth in a fort Authorize Usury, which before was in some places but permissive: The Answer is, that it is better to mitigate Usury by Deelaration, than to fuffer it to rage by Connivence.

XLII.

Of Youth and Age.

fi

n

2

A

ri

7 th

ta

91

M

071 ly

ar

R

ar

A Man that is Young in Years, may be Old in Hours, if he have loft no time, but that happeneth rarely. Generally Youth is like the first Cogitations, not so wile as the fecond; for there is a Touth in Thoughts as well as in Ages: And yet the Invention of Toung Men is more lively than that of Old, and Imaginations stream into their minds better, and, as it were, more Divinely. Natures that have much heat, and great and violent defires and perturbations, are not ripe for Action till they have palied the Meridian of their years; as it was with Julius Cafer, and Septimius Severus, of the latter of whom it is faid, fuventutem egit Erroribus, im Furoribus plenam; and yet he was the ablest Emperor almost of all the List. But reposed Natures may do well in Youth, as it is feen in Augustus Casar, Comus Duke of Florence, Gaston de Fois, and others. On the other fide, Heat and Vivacity in Age, is an excellent Composition

the

ed,

ers

in-

en

eys

ick

end ds.

ize

ve:

urs,

ely.

vife vell

am

ne-

rio-

ion

sit

the

imo

al-vell

ike

her

m-

ion

polition for buliness. Young Men are fitter to invent than to judge, fitter for Execution than for Counfel, and fitter for new projects than for fertled business, for the Experience of Age in things that fall within the compass of it directeth them, but in new things abuseth them. Errors of Young Men are the ruin of Business; but the Errors of Aged Men amount but to this, that more might have been done or fooner. Toung Men in the conduct and manage of Actions embrace more than they can hold, ftir more than they can quiet fly to the end without confideration of the means and degrees, purfue fome few Principles which they have chanced upon abfurdly, care not to innovate, which draws unknown Inconveniencies: Use extream Remedies at first, and that which doubleth all Errors, will not acknowledge or retract them, like an unready Horfe, that will neither Stop nor Men of Age object too much, confult too long, adventure too little, repent too foon, and feldom drive business home to the full period, but content themselves with a mediocrity of Success. Certainly it is good to compound Employments of both; for that will be good for the present, because the vertues of either Age may corred the defects of both, and good for Succession, that Young Men may be Learners, while Men in Age are Actors. And laftly, good for Extern Accidents, because Authonry followeth Old Men, and Favour and Popularity Youth. But for the moral part, perhaps Youth will have the preheminence, as Age hath for the politick. A certain Rabbins upon the Text, Your young Men shall fee visions, and your old Men shall dream dreams, inferreth, that Young Men are admitted nearer to God than Old, because Vision is a clearer Revelation than a Dream. And certainly the more a Man drinketh of the World, the more it intoxicateth; and Age doth profit rather in the powers of Understanding, than in the Vertues of the Will and Affections. There be some have an over-early Ripeness in their years, which fadeth betimes: These are first such as have brittle Wits, the edge whereof is 100n

G

ti

n

2 10

f

it

1

1

I

6

1

(

foon turned; such as was Hermogenes the Rhetorician, whose Books are exceeding subtil, who afterwards waxed stupid. A second fort is of those that have some natural Dispositions which have better grace in Touth than in Age; such as is a stuent and luxuriant Speech, which becomes Youth well, but not Age: So Tully sait of Hortensius, Idem manebat, neque idem decebat. The The third is, of such as take too high a strain at the first, and are magnanimous more than Tract of year can uphold: As was Scipio Africanus, of whom Livy saith in effect, Ultima primis cedebant.

XLIII. Of Beauty.

TERTUE is like a rich Stone, best plain set; and furely, Vertue is best in a Body that is comely, though not of delicate Features, and that hath rather Dignity of Presence, than Beauty of Aspect. Neither is it almost seen that very Beautiful Persons are otherwise of great Vertue, as if Nature were rather busie not to err, than in labour to produce Excellency; and therefore they prove accomplished, but not out of great Spirit, and fludy rather Behaviour than Vertue. But this holds not always, for Augustus Cresar, Titus Vespasianus, Philip de Belle of France, Edward the fourth of England, Alcibiades of Athens, Ismael the Sophy of Persia, were all high and great Spirits, and yet the most Beautiful Men of their times. In Beauty, that of Favour is more than that of Colour; and that of decent and gracious Motion, more than that of Favour. That is the best part of Beauty which a Picture cannot express, no nor the first fight of the Life. There is no excellent Beauty that hath not some strangeness in the proportion. A Man cannot tell, whether Apelles or Albert Durer were the more trifler; whereof the one would make a Personage by Geometrical ian, ax.

me

uth

ch.

rith

The

the ars

ivi

ind

ly,

ner

ore

nd not de

des

gh of

an

on, of

rft

th

n-

re

al

Geometrical Proportions, the other by taking the best Parts out of divers Faces to make one excellent. Such Personages I think would please no body, but the Painter that made them. Not but I think a Painter may make a better Face than ever was, but he must do it by a kind of Felicity, (as a Musician that maketh an excellent Air in Musick) and not by Rule. A Man shall fee Faces, that if you examine them part by part, you shall find never a good, and yet altogether do well. If it be true, that the principal part of Beauty is in decent motion, certainly it is no marvel, though Persons in Years feem many tunes more amiable, Pulchrorum Autumnus pubcher; for no Youth can be comely, but by pardon, and confidering the Youth, as to make up the comelinefs. Beauty is as Summer-Fruits, which are easie to corrupt, and cannot last, and for the most part it makes a dissolute Youth, and an Age, a little out of countenance; but yet certainly again, if it light well, it maketh Vertues shine, and Vices blush.

XLIV.

Of Deformity.

DEFORMED Persons are commonly even with Nature; for as Nature hath done ill by them, so do they by Nature, being for the most part (as the Scripture saith) woid of Natural Affection, and so they have Revenge of Nature. Certainly, there is a consent between the body and the mind, and where Nature erreth in the one, she ventureth in the other; Ubi peccat in uno, periclitatur in altero. But because there is in Man an Election touching the Frame of his mind, and a Necessity in the Frame of his body, the Stars of natural Inclination are sometimes obscured by the Sun of Discipline and Vertue; Therefore it is good to consider of 13

Deformity,

118 Sir Francis Bacon's Esfays.

Deformity, not as a Sign which is more deceivable, but as a Cause which seldom faileth of the Effect. Whoseever hath any thing fixed in his Person that doth induce Contempt, hath also a perpetual Spur in himself to refcue and deliver himfelf from Scorn. Therefore all Deformed Persons are extream bold. First, as in their own Defence, as being exposed to Scorn, but in procels of time, by a general Habit. Also it stirreth in them industry, and especially of this kind, to watch and observe the weakness of others, that they may have fomewhat to repay. Again, in their Superiors, it quencheth Jealousie towards them, as Persons that they think they may at pleasure despise; and it layeth their Competitors and Emulators afleep, as never believing they should be in possibility of Advancement, till they see them in Possession; so that upon the matter in a great Wit, Deformity is an advantage to Rifing. Kings in ancient times (and at this present in some Countries) were wont to put great Trust in Eunuchs; because they that are envious to all, are more obnoxious and officious to wards one. But yet their Trust towards them hath rather been as to good Spials, and good whisperers, than good Magistrates and Officers. And much like is the Reason of Deformed Persons. Still the ground is, they will if they be of Spirit, feek to free themselves from Scorn, which must be either by Vertue or Malice; and therefore let it not be marvelled if fometimes they prove excellent Persons; as was Agesilans, Zanger the Son of Solyman, Afop, Gasca President of Peru, and Secrates may go likewife amongst them, with others.

XLV.

Of Building.

TOUSES are built to live in, and not to look on: Therefore let Use be preferred before Uniformity, except where both may be had. Leave the goodly Fabricks of Houses, for Beauty only, to the Enchanted Palaces of the Poets, who build them with small cost. He that builds a fair House upon an ill Seat, committeth him-Neither do I reckon it an ill Seat only felf to Prison. wherethe Air is unwholesome, but likewise where the Air is unequal; as you shall fee many fine Seats fet upon a knap of Ground, environed with higher Hills round about it, whereby the Heat of the Sun is pent in, and the Wind gathereth as in Troughs; fo as you shall have, and that fuddenly, as great Divertity of Heat and Cold, as if you dwelt in feveral Places. Neither is it ill Air only that maketh an ill Seat, but ill ways, ill Markets; and if you will confult with Momus, ill Neighbours. I speak not of any more: Want of Water, want of Wood, Shade and Shelter, want of Fruitfulness, and mixture of Grounds of feveral Natures, want of Profpect, want of level Grounds, want of Places at fome near Distance for Sports of Hunting, Hawking, and Races; Too near the Sea. too remote, having the Commodity of Navigable Rivers, or the Discommodity of their Overflowing: Too far off from great Cities, which may hinder Business, or too near them which lurcheth all Provisions, and maketh every thing dear: Where a Man hath a great Living laid together, and where he is scanted. All which, as it is impossible perhaps to find together, fo it is good to know them, and think of them, that a Man may take as many as he can; And if have feveral Dwellings, that he fort them fo, that what he wanteth in the one, he may find in the other. Lunosoninnfelf efore

but

proh in and have

nchhink omthey fee reat anvere that to-

rahan the hey

om ind ney the

Se

17.00

7.

cullus answer Pempey well, who when he saw his Stately Galleries and Kooms so large and lightsome in one of his Houses, said. Surely an excellent Place for Summer, but bow do you in Winter? Lucullus answered, Why do you not think me as wise as some Fowl are, that ever change their abode towards the Winter?

To pass from the Seat to the House it self, we will do as Cicero doth in the Orator's Art, who writes Books De Oratore, and a Book he Entitles Orator; whereof the former delivers the Precepts of the Art, and the latter the Perfection. We will therefore describe a Princely Palace, making a brief model thereof. For it is strange to see now in Europe such huge Buildings, as the Various, and Escurial, and some others be, and yet scarce a very fair Room in them.

First therefore, I say, you cannot have a perfect Palace, except you have two feveral Sides; a Side for the Banquet, as is spoken of in the Book of Hester, and a Side for the Housbold; the one for Feasts and Triumphs, and the other for Dwelling. I understand both these Sides to be not only Returns, but Parts of the Front, and to be uniform without, though feverally Partitioned within, and to be on both fides of a great and Stately Tower in the midst of the Front, that as it were joyneth them together on either hand. I would have on the fide of the Banquet in Front one only goodly Room above Stairs, of some forty foot high, and under it a Room for a Dreffing or Preparing Place at times of Triumphs. On the other fide, which is the Houshold fide, I wish it divided at the first into a Hall and a Chappel, (with a Parrition between) both of good state and bigness, and those not to go all the length, but to have at the further end a Winter and a Summer Parlor, both fair; and under these Rooms, a fair and large Cellar funk under Ground; and likewise some Privy Kitchens, with Buteries and Pantries, and the like. As for the Tower, I would have it two Stories, of eighteen foot high apiece above the two Wings, and goodly Leads upon the Top, railed railed with Statua's interposed, and the same Tower to be divided into Rooms as shall be thought sit; the Stairs likewise to the upper Rooms, let them be upon a fair open Newel, and finely railed in with Images of Wood, cast into a Brass colour, and a very fair Landing Place at the Top. But this to be, if you do not point any of the lower Rooms for a Dining Place of Servants, for otherwise you shall have the Servants Dinner after your own; for the steam of it will come up as in a Tunnel. And so much for the Front, only I understand the Heighth of the first Stairs to be sixteen Foot which is the Heighth of the lower Room.

tely

of but not beir

do

oks

eof

atcely ge

ery

04

he

1 8

hs,

fe

nt,

ti-

br

re

2

i-

e,

3at

T

I

Beyond this Front is there to be a fair Court, but three fides of it of a far lower Building than the Front. And in all the four Corners of that Court fair Stair-Cafes, cast into Turrets on the out side, and not within the Row of Buildings themselves. But those Towers are not to be of the height of the Front, but rather proportionable to the lower Building. Let the Court not be Paved, for that striketh up a great Heat in Summer, and much Cold in Winter; but only fome Side-Alleys, with a Crofs, and the Quarters to Graze being kept Shorn, but not too near Shorn. The Row of Return on the Banquet Side, let it be all Stately Galleries, in which Galleries let there be three or five fine Cupola's in the length of it, placed at equal diffance, and fine Coloured Windows of feveral Works. On the Houshold fide, Chambers of Presence and ordinary Entertainment, with fome Bed-Chambers, and let all three Sides be a double House, without thorow Lights on the Sides, that you may have Rooms from the Sun, both for Fore-noon and After-noon. Cast it also, that you may have Rooms both for Summer and Winter, Shady for Summer, and Warm for Winter. You shall have sometimes fair Houses so full of Glass, that one cannot tell where to become to be out of the Sun, or Cold, for Inbowed Windows I hold them of good use; (in Cities indeed Upright do better, in respect of the Uniformity towards the Street) for they be pretty Retiring Places for Conference; and besides, they keep both the Wind and the Sun off: For that which would strike almost through the Room, doth scarce pass the Window. But let them be but few, four in the Court on the Sides only.

Beyond this Court let there be an Imward Court of the same Square and Heighth, which is to be environed with the Garden on all fides; and in the infide Cloiflered upon all fides; upon decent and beautiful Arches. as high as the first Story. On the Under Story towards the Garden, let it beturned to a Grotta, or place of Shade or Effivation; and only have opening and Windows towards the Garden, and be level upon Floor, no whit funk under Ground, to avoid all dampishness: And let there be a Fountary, or some fair Work of Statua's in the midst of this Court, and to be Paved as the other Court was. These Buildings to be for Privy Lodgings on both Sides, and the end for Privy Galleries: whereof you must fore-see that one of them be for an Infirmary, if the Prince or any special person should be Sick, with Chambers, Bed-Chambers, Anticamera, and Recamera, joyning to it: This upon the fecond Story. Upon the Ground Story a fair Gallery, open upon Pillars; and upon the third Story likewise, an open Gallery upon Pillars, to take the Prospect and Freshness of the Garden. At both Corners of the furthest Side, by way of Return, let there betwo delicate or Rich Cabinets, daintily Paved, Richly Hanged, Glazed with Crystalline Glass, and a Rich Capola in the midst, and all other Elegancy that may be thought upon. In the Upper Gallery too I wish that there may be, if the Place will yield it, some Fountains running in divers Places from the Wall, with some fine A. voidances. And thus much for the model of the Palace; fave that you must have, before you come to the Front, three Courts: and a Green Court Plain, with a Wall about it; a Second Court of the same, but more Garnished with little Turrets, or rather Embellishments upon the Wall; and a third Court, to make a Square with the Front, but not to be Built, nor yet Enclosed ind not ler the ned loihes,

1

ade to-hit

nd

her

on ou the

ing and aird

the

or-

के के क

ere in-

A.

he

ore

115

re ed with a Naked Wall, but Enclosed with Taraffes leaded aloft, and fairly Garnished on the three sides; and Cloy-stered on the in-side with Pillars, and not with Arches below. As for Offices, let them stand at distance with some Low-Galleries, to pass from them to the Palace is self.

XLVI.

Of Gardens.

GOD Almighty first Planted a Garden; and indeed it is the purest of Humane pleasures. It is the great seft refreshment to the Spirits of Man; without which, Buildings and Palaces are but gross Handy-works. And a Man shall ever see, that when Ages grow to Civility and Elegancy, Men come to Build Stately, fooner than to Garden Finely: as if Gardening were the greater Per-I do hold it in the Royal Ordering of Gardens, there ought to be Gardens for all the Months in the Year, in which, feverally, things of Beauty may be then in feafon. For December and January, and the latter part of November, you must take such things as are green all. Winter; Holly, Ivy, Bays, Juniper, Cyprefs Trees, Yews, Pine-Apple Trees, Fir Trees, Rofemary, Lavender, Perriwinckle the White, the Purple, and the Blew, Germander, Flags, Orange-Trees, Limon-Trees, and Myrtle, if they be floved, and fweet Marjoram warm fets. There followeth for the latter part of January and February, the Mezerion Tree, which then beoffoms, Crocus Vernus, both the Yellow and the Grey prim-Roses, Anemones, the Early Tulippa, Hyacinthus Orientalis, Chamairis, Frettellaria. For March there comes Violets, specially the Single Blew, which are Earliest, the Yellow Daffadil, the Daizy, the Almond-Tree in Bloffom, the Peach-Tree in Bloffom, the Cornelian-Tree in Blossom, sweet Briar. In April follow the double White Violet, the Wall-Flower, the Stock Gilly-Flower, the

124 Sir Francis Bacon's Effays.

the Cowflip, Flower-de-Lices, and Lilies of all Natures, Rofemary-Flower, the Tulippa, the Double Piony, the Pale Daffadill, the French Honey-Suckle, the Cherry-Tree in Bloffom, the Damascen and Plumb-Trees in Bloffom, the White Thorn in Leaf, the Lelack. Tree. In May and June come Pinks of all Sorts, specially the Blush-Pink, Roses of all kinds, except the Musk, which comes later, Hony Suckles, Strawberries, Bugloß, Columbine, the French Marygold, Flos Africanus, Cherry-Tree in Fruit, Ribes, Figs in Fruit, Rasps, Vine-Flowers, Lavender in Flowers, the Sweet Satyrian with the White Flower, Herba Muscaria, Lilium Convallium, the Apple-Tree in Bossom. In July come Gilly-flowers of all Varieties, Musk-Roses, and the Lime-Tree in Blossom. Early Pears and Plumbs in Fruit, Gennitings, Quodlings. In August come Plumbs of all forts in Fruit, Pears, Apricocks, Barberries, Filbeards, Musk-Melons, Monkshoods of all Colours. In September comes, Grapes, Apples, Poppies of all Colours, Peaches, Melo-Cotones, Nectarines, Cornelians, Wardens, Quinces. In October and the beginning of November, come Servifes, Medlars, Bullifes; Roses Cut or Removed to come late, Hollyoaks, and fuch like. These particulars are for the Climate of London: But my meaning is perceived, that you may have Ver Perpetuum, as the place affords.

And because the Breath of Flowers is far Sweeter in the Air, (where it comes and goes, like the Warbling of Musick) than in the Hand, therefore nothing is more fit for that Delight, than to know what be the Flowers and Plants that do best persume the Air. Roses Damask and Red are Flowers tenacious of their Smells, so that you may walk by a whole Row of them, and find nothing of their Sweetness; yea, though it be in a Morning Dew. Bays likewise yield no Smell as they grow, Rosemary little, nor Sweet-Marjoram. That which above all others yields the Sweetest Smell in the Air, is the Violet, specially the White double Violet, which comes twice a year, about the middle of April, and about

2

t

(

about Bartholomew-tide. Next to that is the Musk Rose, then the Strawberry Leaves dying with a most excellent Cordial Smell. Then the Flower of the Vines, it is a little Duft, like the Duft of a Bent, which grows upon the Cluster in the first coming forth. Then Sweet-Briar, then Wall-Flowers, which are very delightful to be fet under a Parlour, or lower Chamber Window. Then Pinks and Gilly-Flowers. especially the matted Pink, and Clove Gilly-Flower. Then the Flowers of the Lime-Tree. Then the Hony-Suckles, fothey be fomewhat afar off. Of Bean-Flowers I speak not, because they are Field-Flowers. But those which perfume the Air most delightfully, not passed by as the rest, but being Trodden upon and Crushed, are three, that is, Burnet, Wild-Time, and Water-Mints. Therefore you are to fet whole Alleys of them, to have the Pleafure when you walk or tread.

10-

he

b-

k-

Ciſs,

er-

W-

the

he

of

m. od-

ks-

lp-ies, ber

ars,

ly-

Cli

ou

in

ing

ore

ers

ask

nat

10-rn-

W.

ich

is

nd

For Gardens, (speaking of those which are indeed Princelike, as we have done of Buildings) The Contents ought not well to be under Thirty Acres of Ground, and to be devided into three parts; a Green in the entrance, a Heath or Defart in the going forth, and the Main Garden in the midft, besides Alleys on both sides. And I like well, that four Acres of Ground be Affigned to the Green, fix to the Heath, four and four to either Side, and twelve to the Main Garden. The Green hath two pleasures; the one, because nothing is more pleasant to the Eye than Green Grass kept finely shorn; the other, because it will give you a fair Alley in the midft, by which you may go in front upon a Stately Hedge, which is to enclose the Garden. But because the Alley will be long, and in great Heat of the Year or Day, you ought not to buy the shade in the Garden, by going in the Sun through the Green; therefore you are of either Side the Green to plant a Covert Alley upon Carpenters Work, about twelve foot in Heighth, by which you may go in shade into the Garden. As for the making of Knots of Figures, with Divers Coloured Earths, that they may lie under the Windows of the House, on that Side which the Garden Stands they be but toys, you may fee as good fights many itmes in Tarts. The Garden is best to be square, encompassed on all the four Sides with a Stately Arched Hedge; the Arches to be upon Pillars of Carpenters Work, of fome ten foot high, and fix foot broad, and the spaces between of the same Dimension with the Breadth of the Arch. Over the Arches let there be an entire Hedge, of fome four foot high, framed also upon Carpenters Work, and upon the Upper Hedge, over every Arch a little Turrer, with a Belly, enough to receive a Cage of Birds; and over every Space between the Arches some other little Figure, with broad Plates of Round Coloured Glass gilt, for the Sum to play upon. But this Hedge, I intend to be raifed up on a Bank, not steep, but gently slope, of some fix foot, set all with Flowers. Also I understand, that this Square of the Garden, should not be the whole breadth of the Ground, but to leave on the either fide Ground enough for divertity of Side Alleys unto which the two Covert Alleys of the Green may deliver you; but there must be no Alleys with Hedges at either and of this great Inclosure: not at the Higher End, for letting your prospect upon this fair Hedge from the Green; nor at the further End, for letting your prospect from the Hedge through the Archu upon the Heath. For the ordering of the Ground within the Great Hedge, I leave it to Variety of Device. Adviling nevertheless, that whatfoever form you cast it into; first it be not too busie, or full of Work; wherein I, for my part, do not like Images cut out in funiper, or other Garden-Stuff, they for Children. Outle low Hedge, Round like Welts, with fome pretty Pyramids, I like well: And in some places Fair Collums upon Frames of Carpenters Work. I would also have the Alleys spacious and fair. You may have closer Alleys upon the Sid Grounds, but none in the Main Garden. I wish also in the very middle a fair Mount, with three Ascents and Alleys, enough for four to walk a breaft, which I would have to be perfect Circles, without any Bulwarks or Imboffments,

ŧ

Ć

É

ŧ

-

E T

V

6

4

K

fe

it

G

ar

ki

th

ne

it

me

m

ments, and the whole Mount to be thirty foot high, and and fome fine Banquetting House, with some Chimnies neatly cast, and without too much Glass.

ds,

m-ge:

of ices

the

of

rk,

nd

tele

the ip-

of

the

for leys

no

ure:

noc

for ches

ith-

Ad:

ti

nI,

or lges, like

s of ious

Side

eys,

ave

off.

nts,

For Fountains, they are a great Beauty and Refreshment, but Pools marr all, and make the Garden unwholfome, and full of Flies and Froggs. Fountains I intend to be of two Natures, the one that sprinkleth or spouterb Water, the other a fair Receipt of Water, of some thirty or forty foot square, but without Fish, or Slime, or Mud. For the first, the Ornaments of Images Guilt, or of Marble, which are in use, do well; but the main matter is, fo to convey the Water, as it never flay, either in the Bowls, or in the Ciftern, that the Water be never by reft Discoloured, Green or Red, or the like; or gather any Moffiness or Putrefaction. Besides that, it is to be cleanfed every day by the hand; also some steps up to it, and some Fine Pavement about it doth well. As for the other kind of Fountain, which we may call a Bathing-Pool, it may admit much Curiofity and Beauty. wherewith we will not trouble our felves, as that the bottom be finely paved, and with Images, the fides likewife; and withal Embellished with coloured Glass, and fuch things of Luftre; Encompaffed also with fine Rails of low Statues. But the main point is the fame, which we mentioned in the former kind of Fountain, which is, that the Water be in perpetual motion, fed by a Water higher than the Pool, and delivered into it by fair Spouts, and then discharged away under Ground by some equality of Bores, that it stay little. And for fine Devices of Arching Water without spilling and making it rife in feveral forms (of Feathers, Drinking-Glaffes, Canopies, and the like) they be pretty things to look on, but nothing to Health and Sweetneis. -

For the Heath, was the third part of our Plot, I wish it to be framed, as much as may be, to a Natural Wildness. Trees I would have none in it, but some Thickets, made only of Sweet-Briar, and Hony-Suckle, and some Wild

128 Sir Francis Bacon's Effays.

Wild Vins amongst, and the Ground set with Vielets. Strawberries and Primrofes: for thefe are Sweet, and prosper in the Shade. And these to be in the Heath. here and there; not in any Order. I like also little Heaps, in the Nature of Mole-Hills (fuch as are in Wild Heaths) to be fet, some with Wild-Thyme, some with Pinks, some with Germander, that gives a good flower to the eye; fome with Periwinkle, fome with Violers. some with Strawberries, some with Coullips, some with Daizies, fome with Red-Roses, some with Lilium Convallium, some with Sweet-Williams Red, some with Bears-Foot, and the like Low Flowers, being withal Sweet and Sightly. Part of which Heaps, to be with Standards, of little Bushes, prickt upon their top and part without; the Standards to be Roses, Juniper, Holly, Bear-berries, (but here and there, because of the smell of their blossom) Red Currans, Gooteberries Rosemary, Bays, Sweet-Briar, and fuch like. Bur these Standards to be kept with Cutting, that they grow not out of Courfe.

For the Side Grounds, you are to fit them with varie ty of Alleys, private, to give a full shade, some of them, wherefoever the Sun be. You are to frame fome of them, likewise for shelter, that when the wind blow sharp, you may walk as in a Gallery. And those Alleys must be likewise hedged at both ends, to keep out the Wind, and these closer Alleys must be ever finely Gravelled, and no Grafs, because of going wet. In many of these Alleys likewise, you are to set Fruit Treat of all forts; as well upon the Walls, as in Ranges. And this would be generally observed, that the Borden wherein you plant your Fruit Trees, be fair and large, and low, and not steep, and set with fine Flowers, but thin and sparingly, lest they deceive the Trees. At the end of both the fide Grounds, I would have a Mount of fome pretty Height, leaving the Wall of the Enclosure breaft-high, to look abroad into the Fields.

1.1

A

P

りのかる古

tr

.01

+10

2 rio:

35 ma

AT Ler

lets

and ath.

ttle

ild

ich

Wer

ets.

me

um

me

ing

be op,

per,

of ics

Bur

OW

rie

of ome

W

Alout ely In

rees \nd

den rge,

but the

of ure

Fer

For the Main Garden, I do not deny, but there should le some fair Alleys ranged on both fides with Fruit-Trees, and some pretty Tufts of Fruit-Trees and Arbors with Seats, fet in some decent Order; but these to be by no means fet too thick; but to leave the Main Garden fo, as it be not close, but the Air open and free; for as for Shade I would have you rest upon the Alleys of the Side Grounds, there to walk, if you be disposed, in the Heat of the Year or Day; but to make account, that the Main Garden is for the more temperate parts of the Year; and in the Heat of Summer, for the Morning and the Evening, or Over-cast Days.

For Aviaries, I like them not, except they be of that largeness, as they may be turfed, and have Living Plants and Bushes fet in them, that the Birds may have more scope, and natural Nesting, and that no foulness appear in the floor of the Aviary. So I have made a Plat-form of a Princely Garden, partly by Precept, partly by Drawing, not a Model, but some general Lines of it, and in this I have spared for no cost. But it is nothing, for Great Princes, that for the most part taking edvice with Work-men, with no less Cost, fer their things together, and fometimes add Statua's and fuch things, for State and Magnificence, but nothing to the true pleasure of a Garden.

XLVII.

Of Negotiating.

IT is generally better to deal by Speech, than by Letter; and by the mediation of a Third, than by a man's felf. Letters are good, when a Man would draw an Answer by Letter back again; or when it may herve for a Man's Justification afterwards to produce his own Letter, or where it may be danger to be in-200 3 1

0 0 0

80

W

in lei

0

Fo

Af

bu

the ger

na

fol

fine

non

Th

ger cre

yet

terrupted or heard by pieces. To deal in Person is good when a Man's face breedeth Regard, as common with Inferiors; or in tender Cases, where a Man Eye upon the Countenance of him with whom he speaketh, may give him a Direction how far to go: And generally where a man will referve to himself ! berty either to Difavor, or to Expound. In choice & Infruments, it is better to chuse men of a plainer for that are like to do that is committed to them, and to report back again faithfully the fuccess, than those the are cunning to contrive out of other Mens Bufines fomewhat to grace themselves, and will help the man ter in Report for fatisfaction fake. Use all fuch Perfons as affect the business wherein they are imployed for that quickneth much; and fuch as are fit for the matter: As bold Men for Expostulation, fair spoke Men for Perswasion, crafty Men for Enquiry and Ob fervation, froward and abfurd Men for business that doth not well bear out it felf. Use also fuch as have been lucky, and prevailed before in things wherein you have imployed them, for that breeds confidence, and they will strive to maintain their Prescription. It better to found a Person with whom one Deals all off, than to fall upon the point at first; except you men to furprise him by some short Question. It is better Dealing with Men in Appetite, than with those that are where they would be. If a Man Deal with ano ther upon Conditions, the start of the first Performance is all, which a Man cannot reasonably De mand, except either the nature of the thing be fund which must go before; or else a Man can persward the other Party that he shall still need him in some o ther thing; or elfe that he be counted the honele Man. All Practice is to Discover, or to Work: Ma Discover themselves in Trust, in Passion, at unaware, and of necessity, when they would have fomewhat done, and cannot find an apt Pretext. If you would Work any Man, you must either know his nature and fathions, ans he go:

e of fon

that ness nar-Per-

Ren

Ob that nate

you

1 名 2 主

for De fuch

ef

ares,

v M ould

ons,

falhions, and so lead him; or his ends, and so perfwade him; or his weakness and disadvantages, and so awe him; or those that have Interest in him, and so govern him. In Dealing with cunning Persons we must ever consider their ends to interpret their Speeches; and it is good to say little to them, and that which they least look for. In all Negotiations of difficulty a Man may not look to sow and reap at once, but must prepare business, and so ripen it by degrees.

XLVIII.

Of Followers and Friends.

COSTLY Followers are not to be liked, lest while a Man maketh his Train longer, he makes his Wings fhorter. I reckon to be costly, not them alone which charge the Purse, but which are wearisome and importunate in Suits. Ordinary Followers ought to challenge no higher Conditions than Countenance, Recommendation, and Protection from wrongs. Factious Followers are worse to be liked, which follow not upon Affection to him with whom they range themselves, but upon Discontentment conceived against some other; whereupon commonly enfueth that ill intelligence that we many times fee between great Parfonages. Likewise glorious Followers who make themfelves as Trumpets of Commendation of those that follow, are full of Inconvenience; for they taint bufiness through want of Secrecy, and they export Honour from a Man, and make him a return in Envy. There is a kind of Followers likewise which are dangerous, being indeed Espials; which enquire the fecrets of the House, and bear Tales of them to other; yet fuch Men, many times, are in great favour; for they are officious, and commonly exchange Tales, the Following by certain Estates of Men, answerable to the which a great Person himself professeth, (as of Sold ers to him that hath been employed in the Wars, and the like) hath ever been a thing Civil, and well take even in Monarchies; so it be without too much pom of popularity. But the most honourable kind of R lowing, is to be followed, as one that apprehendeth to advance Vertue and Defert in all forts of Person And yet where there is no eminent odds in fufficience it is better to take with the more passable, than with the more able. And besides, to speak truth, in bal times Active Men are of more use than Vertuous. It is true, that in Government it is good to use Mend one Rank equally; for to countenance fome extraodinarily, is to make them infolent, and the rest di content, because they may claim a due. But contra riwife, in favour to use Men with much difference and election is good; for it maketh the Persons pr ferred more thankful, and the rest more officious, be cause all is of favour. It is good discretion not to make too much of any Man at the first; because on cannot hold out that proportion. To be governed put (as we call it) by one, is not fafe; for it shews Soft ver ness, and gives a freedom to Scandal and Difreputation on; for those that would not censure or speak ill a if is a Man immediately, will talk more boldly of those is that are so great with them, and thereby wound that say honour, yet to be distracted with many is worse; for Co it makes Men to be of the last Impression, and full die Change. To take advice of some few Friends is even in honourable; for Lookers on, many times, see more the abl Gamesters, and the Vale best discovereth the Hill. Then not is little Friendship in the World, and least of all be friendship in the World, and least of all be friendship in the was wont to be magnified. The the that is, is between Superior and inferior, whose For-the that is, is between Superior and inferior, whose For-the that is, is between Superior and inferior, whose For-the than the that is, is between Superior and inferior, whose For-the than the than the superior and inferior, whose For-the superior and inferior is the superior and inferior tunes may comprehend one the other.

M

10.10

ne

the

the

Re

the

an

for apt

w

M

the

ver

stalk one into deferve

r Francis Bacon's Ellays.

wing the faces barely, and in the state of the s n of 品 ntra-

eng

pre-

C b

OR rned

Soft-

itati-

hole

Of Suitors.

M ANY ill matters and projects are undertaken, and private Suits do putrefie the publick Good. Many good matters are undertaken with bad minds, I mean, not only corrupt minds, but crafty minds that intend not Performance. Some embrace Suits which never mean to deal effectually in them; but if they fee there may be life in the matter by some other mean. they will be content to win a Thank, or take a fecond Reward, or at least to make use in the mean time of the Suitor's hopes. Some take hold of Suits only for an occasion to cross some other; or to make an information, whereof they could not otherwise have apt Pretext, without care what become of the Suit when that turn is ferv'd; or generally, to make other Mens business a kind of Entertainment to bring in their own. Nay, some undertake Suits with a full purpose to let them fall, to the end, to gratifie the adverie Party or Competitor. Surely there is in some fort a Right in every Suit; either a Right of Equity, I d if it be a Suit of Controversie; or a Right of Desert, if it be a Suit of Petition. If Affections lead a Man to the favour the wrong side in Justice, let him rather use his for Countenance to compound the matter, than to carry and it. If Affection lead a Man to favour the less worthy ere in Defert, let him do it without depraying or difthe abling the better Deserver. In Suits which a Man doth her not well understand, it is good to refer them to some be Friend of Trust and Judgment, that may report, when the her he may deal in them with Honour; but let him For duse well his Referendaries, for else he may be ed by the Nose. Suitors are so distasted with Delays and Abuses, that plain dealing in denying to deal in 134 Sir Francis Bacon's Essays.

Suits at first, and reporting the fuccess barely, and in challenging no more thanks than one hath deferved. is grown not only Honourable, but also Gracious. In Suits of Favour, the first coming ought to take little place; so far forth Consideration may be had of his Trust, that if intelligence of the matter could not otherwise have been had, but by him, advantage be not taken of the Note, but the Party left to his other means, and in some fort recompenced for his Discovery. To be ignorant of the value of a Suit is fimplicity; as well as to be ignorant of the Right thereof is want of Conscience. Secrecy in Suits is a great mean of obtaining; for voicing them to be in forwardness, may discourage some kind of Suitors; but doth quicken and awaken others; but Timing of the Suit is the principal. Timing, I fay, not only in respect of the Person that should grant it, but in respect of those which are like to cross it. Let a Man in the choice of his mean, rather chuse the fittell mean, than the greatest mean; and rather them that deal in certain Things, than those that are General, The Reparation of a Denial, is sometimes equal to the first Grant; if a Man shew himself, neither dejected, nor discontented: Iniquum petas, ut Aguum feras; is a good rule, where a Man hath strength of Favour; But otherwise a Man were better rise in his Suit; for he that would have ventured at first to have lost the Suitor, will not in the Conclusion lose both the Suitor, and his own former favour. Nothing is thought fo easie a request to a great Person as his Letter; and yet; if it be not in a good Cause, it is so much out of his Reputation. There are no worse Instruments than thefe general Contrivers of Suits, for they are but a kind of poylon and infection to publick proceedings.

0

a

re

In the

his O-

be er

0-

11-

of

at

-10

ut he

e-

an eft at al, he 15

r:

ne

of of

in

Of Studies.

CTUDIES ferve for Delight, for Ornament, and I for Ability. Their chief use for Delight is in Privateness and Retiring; for Ornament is in Discourse; and for Ability, is in the Judgment and Disposition of Business. For expert Men can execute, and perhaps judge of particulars one by one; but the general Counfels and the Plots, and Marshalling of Affairs, come best from those that are Learned. To spend too much time in Studies is floth; to use them too much for Ornament is affectation; to make Judgment wholly by their Rules is the humour of a Scholar. They perfect Nature, and are perfected by experience: for Natural Abilities are like Natural Plants, that need Proyning by Study, and Studies themselves do give forth Directions too much at large, except they be bounded in by experience. Crafty Men contemn Studies, Simple Men admire them, and Wife Men use them: For they teach not their own use, but that is a Wisdom without them, and above them, won by Read not to Contradict and Confute, Observation. nor to believe and take for granted, nor to find Talk and Discourse, but to weigh and consider. Some Books are to be tafted, others to be fwallowed, and fome few to be chewed and digested; that is, some Books are to be read only in parts; others to be read, but not curiously; and some few to be read, wholly, and with diligence and attention. Some Books also may be read by Deputy, and Extracts made of them by others: But that would be only in the less important Arguments, and the meaner fort of Books, elfe diftilled Books are like common diffilled Waters, flashy things. Reading maketh a full Man; Conference a K 49 ready Man; and Writing an exact Man. And therefore if a Man Write little, he had need have a great memory; if he Confer little, he had need have a present Wit; and if he Read little, he had need have much cunning to feem to know that he doth not. Hi-Stories make Men Wife, Poets Witty, the Mathematicks Subtil, Natural Philosophy Deep, Moral Grave, Logick and Rhetorick able to Contend. Abiunt Studia in Mores; Nay, there is no Stand or Impediment in the Wit, but may be wrought out by fit Studies: Like as Diseases of the Body may have appropriate Exercises. Bowling is good for the Stone and Reins, Shooting for the Lungs and Breaft, Gentle Walking for the Stomach, Riding for the Head, and the like. So if a Man's Wit be wandering, let him Study the Mathemaricks; for in Demonstrations, if his Wit be called a way never to little, he must begin again: If his Wit be not apt to diffinguish or find differences, let him Study the School-Men; for they are Cumini sectores. If he be not apt to beat over matters, and to call up one thing to prove and illustrate another, let him Study the Lawyers Cases; so every Defect of the mind may have a special Receipt.

LI.

Of Faction.

ANY have an Opinion not Wife; that for a Prince to govern his Estate, or for a great Perfon to govern his Proceedings, according to the respect of Factions, is a principal part of Policy; whereas contrariwise, the chiefest Wisdom is, either in ordering those things which are General, and wherein Men of several Factions do nevertheless agree; or in dealing with correspondence to particular persons one by one

at a ve

li-

ki ch

6-

he

10

0-4-ait

m

If

nê

re

n

But I fay not, that the confideration of Factions is to be neglected. Mean Men in their rifing must adhere, but great Men that have strength in themselves, were better to maintain themselves indifferent and Neutral: Yet even in beginners to adhere so moderately, as he be a Man of the one Faction, which is most passable with the other, commonly giveth best way. The lower and weaker Faction is the firmer in Conjunction: and it is often feen, that a few that are fliff, do tire out a great number that are more moderate. When one of the Factions is extinguished, the remaining subdivideth: As the Faction between Lucullus, and the rest of the Nobles of the Senate (which they called Optimates) held out a while against the Faction of Pommy and Cafar; but when the Senates Authority was pulled down, Cafar and Pompey foon after brake. The Faction or Party of Antonius, and Octavianus Cafar, against Brutus and Cassius, held out likewise for a time: But when Brutus and Cassius were overthrown, then foon after Antonius and Octavianus brake and fubdivided. These examples are of Wars, but the same holdeth in private Factions: And therefore those that are Seconds in Factions, do many times, when the Faction fubdivideth, prove Principals; but many times also they prove Cyphers and cashier'd. For many a Man's strength is in opposition, and when that faileth, he groweth out of use. It is commonly seen, that Men once placed, take in with the contrary Faction to that, by which they enter, thinking belike that they have their first sure, and now are ready for a new Purchase. The Traitor in Faction lightly goeth away with it; for when matters have fluck long in Ballancing, the winning of some one Man casteth them, and he getteth all the thanks. The even carriage between two Factions, proceedeth not always of moderation, but of a trueness to a Man's self, with end to make use of both. Certainly in Italy, they hold it a little suspect in Popes, when they have often in their mouth padre commune, and take it to be a Sign of one that meaneth to refer all to the greatuess of his own House. Kings had need beware, how they side themfelves, and make themselves as of a Faction or Party; for Leagues within the State are ever pernicious to Monarchies; for they raife an Obligation, Paramount to Obligation of Soveraignty, and make the King, Tangnam unus ex nobis; as was to be feen in the League of France. When Factions are carried too high, and too violently, it is a fign of weakness in Princes, and much to the prejudice both of their Authority and Bufinefs. The motions of Fastions under Kings, ought to be like the motions (as the Astronomers speak) of the Inferior Orbs, which may have their proper motions, but yet still are quietly carried by the higher motion of Primum Mobile.

LII.

Of Ceremonies and Respects.

TE that is only real, had need have exceeding great parts of Virtue, as the Stone had need to be rich, that is fet without foil. But if a Man mark it well, it is in praise and commendation of Men, as it is in gettings and gains: For the Proverb is true, That light gains make heavy purfes; for light gains come thick, whereas great come but now and then. So it is true, that fmall matters win great commendation, because they are continually in use, and in note; whereas the occasion of any great Virtue cometh but on Festivals. Therefore it doth much add to a Man's Repuration, and is, (as Queen Isabella faid) Like perpetual Letters Commendatory, to have good forms. To attain them, it almost sufficeth not to despise them; for so shall a Man observe them in others: And let him trust - himfelf

R

1-0 nt

go we d

1-0

le,

e

t

himself with the reft. For if he labour too much to express them, he shall lose their Grace, which is to be Natural and Unaffected. Some Mens behaviour is like a Verse, wherein every Syllable is measured. How can a Man comprehend great matters, that breaketh his mind too much to fmall observations? Not to use Ceremonies at all, is to teach others not to use them again; and so diminish respect to himself; especially, they are not to be omitted to strangers, and formal Natures: But the dwelling upon them, and exalting them above the Moon, is not only tedious, but doth diminish the faith and credit of him that speaks. And certainly, there is a kind of conveying of effectual and imprinting Paffions amongst Complements, which is of fingular use, if a Man can hit upon it. Amongst a Man's Peers, a Man shall be fure of familiarity; and therefore it is good a little to keep State. Amongst a Man's Inferiors, one shall be fure of Reverence; and therefore it is good a little to be familiar. He that is too much in any thing, fo that he giveth another occasion of Society, maketh himself cheap. To apply ones felf to others is good, fo it be with Demonstration, that a Man doth it upon regard, and not facility. It is a good Precept generally in seconding another, yet to add fomewhat of ones own; as if you would grant his opinion, let it be with some distinction; if you will follow his Motion, let it be with Condition; if you allow his Counfel, let it be with alledging further Reason. Men had need beware, how they be too perfect in Complements: For be they never fo fufficient otherwise, their enviers will be sure to give them that Attribute, to the disadvantage of their greater Vertues. It is loss also in business, to be too full of respects, or to be too curious in observing Times and Opportunities. Solomon faith, He that confidereth the Wind shall not Sow, and he that looketh to the Clouds shall not Reap. A wife Man will make more opportunities than he finds. Mens Behaviour should be like their Apparel, not too Strait, or point device, but free for Exercise or Motion.

Sir Francis Bacon's Effays.

LILL margers, when brookers

- ment all Of Praise inimis of hor are

RAISE is the Reflection of Vertue, but it is as the Glass or Body which giveth the Reflection. If it be from the common People, it is commonly false and naught, and rather followeth vain Persons than vertuous. For the common People understand not many excellent vertues: the lowest vertues draw praise from them, the middle vertues work in them Aftonishment or Admiration, but of the highest Virtues they have no fence or perceiving at all, but shews and Species virtutibus similes serve best with them. Certainly Fame is like a River, that beareth up things light and fwoln, and drowns things weighty and folid: But if Persons of Quality and Judgment concur, then it is (as the Scripture faith) Nomen bonum inftar unevents fragrantis. It filleth all round about, and will not easily away: For the Odours of Oyntments are more durable than those of Flowers. There be so many false Points of Praise that a Man may justly hold it a fuspect. Some Praises proceed meerly of Flattery, and if he be an ordinary Flatterer, he will have certain common Attributes, which may ferve every Man: If he be a cunning Flatterer, he will follow the Arch Flatterer, which is a Man's felf: And wherein a Man thinketh best of himself, therein the Flatterer will uphold him most; but if he be an impudent Flatterer, look wherein a Man is conscious to himself that he is most defective, and is most out of Countenance in himself, that will the Flatterer Entitle him to per force, Spreta, Conscientia. Some Praises come come of good wishes and respects, which is a form due in Civility to Kings and great Persons, Laudando pracipere, when by telling Men what they are, they represent to them what they should be. Some Men are praifed maliciously to their hurt, thereby to ftir envy and jealousie towards them, Pessimum genus inimicorum laudantium, infomuch as it was a Proverb amongst the Grecians; that he that was praised to his burt should have a push rise upon bis Nose; as we say, That a blifter will rife upon ones Tongue that tells a Lye. Certainly moderate praise, used with opportunity, and not vulgar, is that which doth the good. Solomon faith, He that praiseth bis friend aloud, rising early, it shall be to bim no better than a Curse. Too much magnifying of a Man or matter, doth irritate contradiction, and procure envy and fcorn. To praise a Man's felf cannot be decent, except it be in rare cases; but to praise a Man's Office or proteffion, he may do it with good Grace, and with a kind of Magnanimity. The Cardinals of Rome, which are Theologues, and Fryars, and Schoolmen, have a Phrase of notable contempt and scorn towards civil bufiness: For they call all Temporal business, of Wars, Embassages, Judicature, and other employments, Shirreri, which is under Sheriffries, as if they were but matters for Under-Sheriffs and Carchpoles: though many times those Under-Sheriffries do more good than their high speculations. Saint Paul. when he boafts of himfelf, he doth oft interlace; I speak like a Fool; but speaking of his Calling, he saith, Magnifico Apostolatum meum.

15

d

N

es

d r-nt:

n

n-11

re.

y of 11 de i-of

i-

es

routing a Company

life into believes a cond

Of Vain Glory.

IT was prettily devised of Asletree of the Chariot-Wheel, and said, What a Dust do I raise? So are there some vain Persons, that whatsoever goeth alone, or moveth upon greater means, if they have never to little hand in it, they think it is they that carry it. They that are glorious, must needs be factious; for all bravery stands upon comparisons. They must needs be violent, to make good their own vaunts. Neither can they be fecret, and therefore not effectual; but according to the French Proverb, Beaucoup de Bruit, peu de Fruit ; Much Bruit, little Fruit. Yet certainly there is use of this Quality in Civil Affairs. Where there is an Opinion and Fame to be created, either of Virtue or Greatness, these Men are good Trumpeters. Again, as Titus Livius noteth in the case of Antiochus, and the Atolians, There are sometimes great effects of cross Lyes: As if a Man that Negotiates between two Princes, to draw them to joyn in a War against the third, doth extol the Forces of either of them above measure, the one to the other: And sometimes he that deals between Man and Man, raiseth his own credit with both, by pretending greater Interest than he hath in either. And in these and the like kinds, it often falls out, that somewhat is produced of nothing: For Lyes are fufficient to breed Opinion, and Opinion brings on Substance. In Military Commanders and Soldiers, Vain Glory is an effential Point: For as Iron sharpens Iron, so by Glory one Courage sharpneth another. In cases of great Enterprife, upon Charge and Adventure, a Composition of Glorious Natures doth put Life into Business; and those that are of solid and sober Natures have more of the Ballast than of the Sail. In Fame of Learning the Flight will flow, without some Feathers of Offentation. Qui de contemnenda Gloria Libros scribunt, Nomen Suum inscribunt. Socrates, Aristotle, Galen, were Men full of Oftentation. Certainly Vain Glory helpeth to perpetuate a Man's Memory; and Virtue was never so beholden to humane Nature, as it received his due at the Second Hand. Neither had the Fame of Cicero, Seneca, Plinius Secundus, born her Age fo well, if it had not been joyned with fome Vanity in themfelves; like unto Varnish, that makes Cielings not only shine, but last. But all this while, when I speak of Vain Glory, I mean not of that property that Tacitus doth attribute to Mucianus, Omnium quie dixerat, feceratque, Arte quadam Ostentator: For that proceeds not of Vanity, but of Natural Magnanimity and Discretion: And in some Persons, is not only Comely, but Gracious. For Excufations, Ceffions, Modesty it felf well governed, are but Arts of Oftentation. And amongst those Arts there is none better than that which Phinius Secundus speaketh of, which is to be liberal of Praise and Commendation to others, in that wherein Man's felf hath any Perfection. For, faith Pliny very wittily, In commending another, you do your felf right: For he that you commend, is either Superior to you, in that you commend, or Inferior. If he be Inferior, if he be to be commended, you much more: If be be Superior, if he be not to be commended, you much less. Glorious_ Men are the scorn of wife Men, the admiration of Fools, the Idols of Parafites, and the Slaves of their own Vaunts.

lo if

is

s.

tc

4-

it.

f-

be

re

ie-

en of

: 1

n,

ıt-

nd

o-)- nne n-

on

nd

of

es of Sopering Hances, are

A mace are, Carditones impediants, tras, and Communication; study as were LV.

Of Honour and Reputation.

THE Winning of Honour is but the revealing of Man's Virtue and Worth without Difadvantage For some in their Actions do woo and affect Honor and Reputation; which fort of Men are commonly much talked of, but inwardly little admired. And Some, contrariwife, darken their Virtue in the shew of it, fo as they be undervalued in Opinion. If a Man perform that which hath not been attempted before, or attempted and given over, or hath been atchieved, but not with fo good circumftance, he shall purchase more Honour, than by effecting a matter of greater difficulty or virtue, wherein he is but a follower. If a Man fo temper his Actions, as in some one of them he doth content every Faction or Combination of People, the Musick will be the fuller. A Man is an ill Husband of his Honour that entreth into any Action, the failing wherein may diffrace him more than the carrying of it through can Honour him. Honour that is gained and broken upon another, hath the quickest reflection, like Diamonds cut with Fascets. And therefore let a Man contend to excel any Competitors of his in Honour, in out-shooting them, if he can, in their own Bow. Discreet Followers and Servants help much to Reputation: Omnis fama à Domeficis emanat. Envy, which is the Canker of Honour is best extinguished by declaring a Man's felf in his ends, rather to feek Merit than Fame; and by attributing a Man's fuccesses, rather to Divine Providence and Felicity than to his own Virtue or Policy. The true marshalling of the Degrees of Soveraign Honour, are thefe. In the first place are, Conditores Imperiorum, Founders of States, and Commonwealths; fuch as were Romulus,

CE

y id of

in

S, d, fe

er

H

m of

m u

5 ŀ

ì

ě.

is

5,

,

Romulus, Cyrus, Cafar, Ottoman, Ifmael. In the fecond place are, Legislatores, Law-givers; which are also caled Second Founders, or Perpetui Principes, because they overn by their Ordinances after they are gone; fuch were Lycurgus, Solm, Justinian, Edgar, Alphonfus of Castile the wife, that made the Siere Patridas. In the hird place are, Liberatores or Salvatores; fuch as comfound the long miferies of Civil Wars, or deliver their Countreys from Servitude of Strangers or Tyrants; & Augustus Cusar, Vespasianus, Aurelianus, Theodoricus, King Henry the Seventh of England, King Henry the Fourth of France. In the fourth place are Propagatores, or Propugnatores Imperii; fuch as in Honourable Wars enlarge their territories, or make noble defence against Invaders. And in the last place are Patres Patrie, which Reign justly, and make the times good wherein they live. Both which last kinds need no Examples, they are in fuch number. Degrees of Flonour in Subeds are ! First, Participes Curarum, those upon whom Princes do discharge the greatest Weight of their Afhirs, their Right Hands, as we call them. The next are, Duces Belli, Great Leaders, fuch as are Princes Lieutenants, and do them notable fervices in the Wars. The third are Gratiosi, Favourites, such as need not this feantling, to be Solace to the Soveraign, and harmlefs to the People. And the fourth Negotiis Pares, fuch as have great places under Princes, and execute their places with fufficiency. There is an Honour likewise which may be ranked amongst the greatest, which hapneth rarely, that is, of fuch as Sacrifice themselves to Death or Danger for the Good of their Country; as was M. Reguhis, and the two Decii.

LVI

Of Judicature.

TUDGES ought to remember, that their Office is Tus dicere, and not Tus dare : To interpret Law, and not to make Law, or give Law: Elfe will it be like the Authority claimed by the Church of Rome, which under pretext of exposition of Scripture, doth not flick to add and alter, and to pronounce that which they do not find; and by flow of Antiquity to introduce Novely Judges ought to be more learned than Witty, more Reverend than Planfible, and more advised than Confident. Above all things Integrity is their Portion and proper Virtue: Curfed (faith the Law) is he that reme weth the Land Mark. The millayer of a meer-Stone is to blame; but it is the unjust Judge that is the Capital Remover of Land-Marks, when he defineth amis of Land and Property. One foul Sentence doth more hurt than many foul Examples; for these do but corrupt the Stream, the other corrupteth the Fountain. So faith Solomon, Fons turbatus, & Vena corrupta, est Justus cadens in causa fua coram Adversario. The Office of Judges may have reference unto the Parties that Sue, unto the Advocates that plead, unto the Clerks and Ministers of Fustice underneath them, and to the Soveraign or State above them.

First, For the Causes or Parties that sue. There be (saith the Scripture) that turn Judgment into Wormwood; and surely there be also that turn it into Vinegar; for Injustice maketh it bitter, and Delays make it sour. The principal Duty of a Judge is to suppress force and fraud, whereof force is the more pernicious when it is open, and fraud when it is close and disguised. Add thereto contentious Suits, which ought to be spewed out as the Surfeit of Courts. A Judge ought to prepare his way to a Just Sentence, as God useth to prepare his way by rufing Valleys, and taking down Hills: So when there eareth on either fide an high Hand, violent Profeamon, cunning Advantages taken, Combination, Power, Great Counfel, then is the Virtue of a Judge en, to make Inequality Equal, that he may plant his Judgment as upon an even Ground. Qui fortiter emunit, elicit sanguinem; and where the Wine-Press is hard wrought, it yields a harsh Wine that tastes of the Grape-Stone. Judges must beware of hard Constructions, and strained Inferences; for there is no worse Torture than the Torture of Laws, especially, in case of Laws penal; they ought to have care, that that which was meant for Terror, be not turned into Rigor, and that they bring not upon the People that Shower whereof the Scripture speaketh, Pluet Super eos Laqueos: for penal Laws preffed are a Shower of Snares upon the People. Therefore let Penal Laws, if they have been Sleepers of long, or if they be grown unfit for the present Time, be by wise Judges confined in the Execution, Judicis Officium est, ut Res ita Tempora Rerum, &c. In Causes of Life and Death, Judges ought (as far as the Law permitteth) in Justice to remember Mercy; and to cast a severe Eye upon the Example, but a merciful Eye upon the Person.

il de

ler dd ot

nd

10

.

d

011 ve

tes

0-ve

th

n-

he

d,

n,

to 10

y

Secondly, For the Advocates and Council that plead; Patience and Gravity of hearing is an effential part of Justice, and an over-speaking Judge is no well-tuned Cymbal. It is no Grace to a Judge, first to find that which he might have heard in due time from the Bar, or to shew quickness of conceit in cutting off Evidence or Counsel too short, or to prevent Informations by Questions though pertinent. The parts of a Judge in hearing are four; To direct the Evidence; to moderate length, repetition, or impertinency of Speech. To Recapitulate, Select, and Collate the material Points of that which hath been said; And to give the Rule or Sentence. Whatsoever is above these, is too much; and proceedeth either of Glory and willing ness to speak, or of Impatience to hear, or of short nels of Memory, or of want of a stayed and equi Attention. It is a strange thing to see, that the bold ness of Advocates should prevail with Judges; where as they should imitate God in whose feat they sit, who represseth the Presumptuous, and giveth Grace to the Model. But it is more strange, that Judges should have noted Favourites; which cannot but cause multiplication of Fees, and fulpicion of By-ways. There is due from the Judge to the Advocate Iome Commendation and Gracing, where Causes are well handled, and fair pleaded; especially towards the side which obtaineth not; for that upholds in the Client the Reputation of his Counsel, and beats down in him the conceit of his Caufe. There is likewife due to the Publick a civil Reprehension of Advocates, where there appeareth cunning Counfel, groß Neglect, flight Information, indiscreet Pressing, or an overbold Defence. And let not the Counsel at the Bar chop with the Judge, nor wind himself into the handling of the Caule anew, after the Judge hath declared his Sentence: But on the other lide, let not the Judge meet the Cause half way, nor give occasion to the Parry to say, His Counfel or Froofs were not beard.

L 2

Thirdly, For that that concerns Clerks and Ministers. The Place of Justice is an hallowed Place; and therefore not only the Bench, but the Foot-pace, and Precincts, and Purprise thereof ought to be preserved without Scandal and Corruption. For certainly Grapu (as the Scripture saith) will not be gathered of Thorns or Thistles; neither can Justice yield her Fruit with Sweetness amongst the Briars and Brambles of Carching and Poling Clerks and Ministers. The Attendance of Courts is subject to four bad Instruments: First, Certain Persons that are sowers of Suits which make the Court swell, and the Country pine, The second fort is, Of those that engage Courts in Quarrels of Jurisdiction, and are not truly Amici Carie, but Parafiri Carie, puffing a Court up beyond her bounds, for their in Scraps and Advantage. The third fort is, Of those that may be accounted the Lest hands of Courts; Persons that are full of nimble and sinister tricks and hists, whereby they pervert the plain and direct Courts of Courts, and bring Justice into oblique Lines and Labyrinths. And the fourth is, the Poller and Exacter of Fees, which justifies the common resemblance of the Courts of Justice to the Bush, whereunto while the sheep slies for Desence in Weather, he is sure to lose part of his Fleece. On the other side, an Ancient Clerk, skilful in Precedents, wary in proceeding, and understanding in the Rusiness of the Court, is an excellent Finger of a Court, and doth many times point the way to the Judge himfelf.

Hard on a tribia

e

n

n-

la or

IF

n-

s.

es

r.

Ü

d

1

Fourthly, For that which may concern the Soveraign and Estate. Judges ought above all to remember the conclusion of the Roman Twelve Tables, Salus Populi Suprema Lex; and to know, that Laws, except they be in order to that end, are but things captious, and Oracles not well inspired. Therefore it is an happy thing in a State, when Kings and States do often confult with fudges; and again, when Judges do often confult with the King and State: The one, when there is a matter of Law intervenient in business of State; The other, when there is some consideration of State intervenient in matter of Law. For many times the things deduced to Judgment may be Meum and Tuum, when the reason and consequence thereof may Trench to point of Estate. I call marter of Estate not only the parts of Soveraignty, but whatfoever introduceth any great Alteration, or dangerous Precedent, or concerneth manifestly any great portion of People. And let no Man weakly conceive, that Just Laws and true Policy have any Antipathy: For they are like Spirits and Sinews, that one moves with the other. Let Judges also remember, That Solomon's Throne was supported by

L

Lions

Lions on both fides: Let them be Lions, but yet Lions under the Throne; being circumspect, that the do not check or oppose any points of Soveraignty. It not Judges also be so ignorant of their own right, at think there is not lest to them, as a Principal part of their Office, a wife Use and Application of Laws; for they may remember what the Apostle saith of a greater Law than theirs, Nos scimus quia Lex bona est, modo quis ea utatur legitime.

LVII.

Of Anger.

To feek to extinguish Anger utterly, is but a bravery of the Stoicks. We have better Oracles: Be angry, but sin not. Let not the Sun go down upon your anger. Anger must be limited and confined, both in Race and Time. We will first speak, how the Natural Inclination and Habit to be angry, may be attempted and calmed. Secondly, How the particular motions of anger may be repressed, or at least-refrained from doing mischies. Thirdly, How to raise anger, or appeale anger in another.

For the first: There is no other way but to Meditate and Ruminate well upon the effects of Anger, how it troubles Man's Life. And the best time to do this is, to look back upon Anger, when the fit is throughly over. Seneca saith well; That Anger is like Ruine, which breaks it self upon that it falls. The Scripture exhorteth us, To possess our Souls in passence. Who loever is out of patience, is out of Possession of his Soul. Men must not turn Bees :

⁻⁻⁻ Animasque in vulnere ponunt.

Anger is certainly a kind of Bafeness; as it appears all in the Weakness of those Subjects in whom it agns, Children, Women, Old Folks, Sick Folks. Only Man must beware, that they carry their Anger rather with Scorn, than with Fear: So that they may feen rather to be above the injury than below it, which is a thing easily done, if a Man will give Law to himself in it.

For the fecond Point. The Caufes and Motives of Anger are chiefly three: First, to be too sensible of burt: For no Man is Angry that feels not himfelf hurt; and therefore tender and delicate Persons must needs be often Angry: They have so many things to trouble them, which more robust Natures have little sence of. The next is, the Apprehension and Construction of the Injury offered, to be in the circumstances thereof, full of contempt. For contempt is that which putteth an edge upon Anger, as much or more than the burt it felf: And therefore when Men are ingenious in picking out circumstances of contempt, they do kindle their Ango much. Laftly, Opinion of the touch of a Man's Reputation doth multiply and sharpen Anger: Wherein the remedy is, that a Man should have, as Gonfalvo was wont to fay, Telam Honoris Crassiorem. But in all refrainings of Anger, it is the best remedy to win Time. and to make a Man's felf believe that the Opportunity of his revenge is not yet come; but that he forefees a time for it, and fo to still himself in the mean time, and referve it.

1.

d

of

To contain Anger from Mischief, though it take hold of a Man, there be two things, whereof you must have special Caution: The one, of extream bitterness of Words, especially if they be Aculeate and Proper; for Communia Maledicta are nothing so much. And again, That in Anger a Man reveal no Secrets; for that makes him not sit for Society. The other, That you do not peremptorily break off in any business in a sit of

L 4

Anger;

Anger; but howfoever you flew bitterness, do not all any thing that is not revocable.

For raising and appeasing Anger in another: It is don't chiefly by chusing of Times; when Men are frowarded and worst disposed, to incense them. Again, by gathering (as was touched before) all that you can find out to aggravate the contempt; and the two remedies are by the contraries: The former, to take good Times, when first to relate to a Man an angry business: For the first Impression is much; and the other is, to sever as much as may be the Construction of the Injury from the Point of contempt; imputing it to Missunderstanding, Fear, Passion, or what you will.

LVIII.

Of Vicissitude of Things.

COLOMON faith, There is no new thing upon the D Earth. So that as Plate had an imagination, That all knowledge was but a remembrance: So Solomon giveth his fentence, That all Novelty is but Oblivion: Whereby you may fee, That the River of Lethe runneth as well above ground as below. There is an abstruce Astrologer that faith, If it were not for two things that are constant, (The one is, That the fixed Stars ever stand at like distance one from another, and never come nearer together, nor go further asunder ; the other, That the Diurnal Motion perpetually keepeth Time) no Individual would lest one moment. Certain it is, That the matter is in a perpetual Flux, and never at a flay. The great Winding-Sheets that bury all things in Oblivion are two; Deluges and Earthquakes. As for Conflagrations and great Droughts, they do not meerly dispeople, but deltroy. Phaeten's Car went but a Day : And the Three years Drought, in the time of Elias, was but particular, and

elt and une so or en ma

ef People alive. As for the great burnings by Lightngs, which are often in the West Indies, they are but rrow. But in the other two Destructions, by Deage and Earthquake, it is further to be noted, That the remnant of People which hap to be referved, are commonly ignorant and mountainous People, that can give no account of the time past; so that the Oblivion is all one, as if none had been left. If you confider well of the People of the West-Indies, it is very probable, that they are a newer or younger People, than the People of the Old World. And it is much more likely, that the deftruction that hath heretofore been there, was not by Earthquakes, (as the Egyptian Priest told Solon, concerning the Island of Atlantis, That it was swallowed by an Earthquake) but rather, it was Desolated by a particular Deluge: For Earthquakes are feldom in those parts. But on the other fide, they have fuch pouring Rivers, as the Rivers of Asia, and Africk, and Europe, are but Brooks to them. Their andes likewise, or Mountains, are far higher than those with us; whereby it seems, that the Remnants of Generations of Men were in fuch a particular Delage faved. As for the observation that Michiarol hath, That the Jealoufie of Sects doth much extinguish the memory of things; traducing Gregory the Great, that he did what in him lay to extinguish all Heathen Antiquities. I do not find that those Zeals do any great Effects, nor last long; as it appeared in the Succession of Sabinian, who did revive the former Antiquities.

The Viciffitude or Mutations in the Superior Globe, are no fit matter for this present Argument. It may be Plato's Great year, if the World should last so long, would have some effect; not in renewing the State of like Individuals, (for that in the Fume of those, that conceive the Cælessial Podies have more accurate Insuences upon these things below, than indeed they have) but in Gross. Comets out of question have likewife Power and Effect over the Gross and Mass of things: But they are rather gazed upon, and waite upon in their Journey, than wifely observed in the Effects, especially in their respective Effects; that a What kind of Comet for Magnitude, Colour, Version of the Beams, placing in the Region of Heaven, or lafting, produceth what kind of effects.

There is a Toy which I have heard, and I would not have it given over, but waited upon a little. They fay it is observed in the Low-Countreys, (I know not in what part) That every five and thirty Years, the fame kind and fuit of Years and Weathers comes about a gain, as great Frosts, great Wet, great Droughts, warn Winters, Summers with little Heat, and the like; and they call it the Prime. It is a thing I do rather mention. because computing backwards, I have found some concurrence.

But to leave these points of Nature, and come to me The greatest Viciffitude of things amongst men, is, The Vicifitude of Sects and Religions: For those Orbs rule in mens minds most. The true Religion is built upon the Rock, the rest are tost upon the Waves of Time. speak therefore of the Causes of new Setts, and to give some Counsel concerning them, as far as the weakness of Humane Judgment can give flay to fo great Revo-

d

di fi

P

PVV

lutions.

When the Religion formerly received, is rent by Difcords; and when the Holiness of the Professors of Religion is decayed, and full of Scandal, and withal the Times be Stupid, Ignorant, and Barbarous, you may doubt the fpringing up of a new Sett, if then also there should arise any extravagant and strange Spirit to make himself Author thereof: All which points held, when Mahomet published his Law. If a new Self have not two properties, fear it not; for it will nor fpread. The one is, The Supplanting or the Oppo-fing of Authority established: For nothing is more popular than that. The other is, The giving Licence pleasures and Voluptuous Life. For as for Specula-Herefies, (fuch as were in Ancient Times the Ar-, and now the Arminians) though they work mightily upon Mens Wits, yet they do not produce my great alteration in States, except it be by the help Civil Occasions. There be three manner of Planntions of new Sects, By the Power of Signs and Mirates, by the Eloquence and Wisdom of Speech and Perfusion, and by the Sword; for Martyrdoms, I reckon them amongst Miracles, because they seem to exceed the strength of Humane Nature: And I may do the like of Superlative and Admirable Holiness of Life. Surethere is no better way to stop the rising of new Sells and Sebifms, than to reform abuses, to compound the fmaller differences, to proceed mildly, and not with Sanguinary perfecutions; and rather to take off the principal Authors by winning and advancing them, than to enrage them by violence and bitter-icy in a min min, in-た田からで歩る

if of al

8

The Changes and Vicifitude in Wars are many, but chiefly in three things: In the Seats or Stages of the War; in the Weapons, and in the manner of the Condut. Wars in Ancient Time, seemed more to move. from East to West: For the Persians, Asyrians, Arabians, Tarrars (which are the Invaders) were all Eastern People. It is true, the Gauls were Western, but we read but of two Incursions of theirs, the one to Gallo-Gracia, the other to Rome. But East and West have no certain Points of Heaven, and no more have the Wars, either from the East or West any certainty of Observation. But North and South are fixed, and it hath feldom or never been feen, that the far Southern People have invaded the Northern, but contrariwife. Whereby it is manifest, that the Northern Tract of the World is in nature the more Martial Religion; be it in respect of the Stars of that Hemisphere, or of the great Continents that are upon the North, whereas the South Part, for ought that is known, is almost all

Sea; or (which is most apparent) of the Cold of the Northern Parts, which is that, which without Aid of Discipline doth make the bodies hardest, and the Cold rages warmeft.

Upon the Breaking and Shivering of a great State and Empire, you may be fure to have Wars. For gre Empires, while they fland, do enervate and deftroy the forces of the Natives which they have subdued resting upon their own Protecting forces; and then when they fail also, all goes to ruine, and they be come a Prey. So was it in the decay of the Roman Empire; and likewise in the Empire of Almain, after Charles the Great, every Bird taking a Feather, and were not unlike to befall to Spain, if it should break The great Accessions and Unions of Kingdoms do likewise ffir up Wars. For when a State grows to an Overpower, it is like a great flood that will be fure to overflow. As it hath been feen in the States of Rame, The kie, Spain, and others. Look when the World hath fewest Barbarous People, but fuch as commonly will not marry or generate, except they know means to live; (as it is almost every where at this day, except Tartary) there is no danger of Inundations of People; but when there be great Shoals of People, which go on to populate without forefeeing means of Life and Suflentation, it is of necessity that once in an Age or two, they discharge a Portion of their People upon other Nations, which the ancient Northern People were wont to do by Lot, casting Lot what part should stay at home, and what should seek their Fortunes. When a Warlike State grows foft and effeminate, they may be fure of a War; for commonly fuch States are grown rich in the time of their Degenerating, and so the Prey inviteth, and their decay in valour encourageth a War.

As for the Weapons, it hardly falleth under Rule and Observation; yet we see even they have Returns and Vicissiandes. For certain it is, that Ordnance was known

te nd or of one of the state of th ich iot

e; ar-

e;

on

U.

or

0.

re

ay 12

re

ch

ey

be

in

in the City of the Oxydrakes in India; and was that which the Macedonians called Thunder and Lightning, and Magick. And it was well known, that the use Ordnance hath been in China above 2000 Years. The conditions of Weapons, and their improvement are; First, the fetching afar off; for that out-runs the danger, as it is seen in Ordnance and Muskets. Secondly, The strength of the Percussion, wherein likewise Ordnance do exceed all Arierations, and ancient inventions. The Third is, The commodious use of them; as that they may serve in all Weathers, that the Carriage may be light and manageable, and the like.

For the Conduct of the War; at the first Men rested areamly upon Number, they did put the Wars likewise upon main Force and Valour, pointing days for pitched fields, and so trying it out upon an even match, and they were more ignorant in Ranging and Arraying their Intles. After they grew to rest upon Number, rather Competent than Vast, they grew to advantages of Place, Caming Diversions, and the like; and they grew more skilful in the ordering of their Battles.

In the Touth of a State, Arms do flourish; in the middle Age of a State Learning, and then both of them together for a time: In the declining Age of a State, Mechanical Arts and Merchandize. Learning, hath his Infancy when it is but beginning, and almost Childish; then his Youth when it is Luxuriant and Juvenile; then his strength of Years, when it is solid and reduced; and lastly, his Old Age; when it waxed dry and exhaust: But it is not good to look too long upon these turning Wheels of Vicissitude, less we become giddy. As for the Philology of them, that is but a Circle of Tales, and therefore not fit for this Writing.

LIX.

A Fragment of an Essay of Fame.

THE Poets make Fame a Monster. They describe ther in part finely and elegantly; and in part gravery and fententiously. They fay, look how many Feathers the hath, to many Eyes the hath underneath. To many Tongues; to many Voices; the pricks up to many ny Ears.

This is a flourish: There follow excellent Parables as that the gathereth firength in going; that the goes upon the ground, and yet hideth her head in the Clouds. That in the day-time she sitteth in a Wards Tower, and flieth most by Night: That she minglet things done, with things not done: And that she a terror to great Cities: But that which paffeth all the rest is: they do recount that the Earth, Mother of the Gyants, that made War against Jupiter, and were by him deftroyed, thereupon, in anger, brought forth Fame: For certain it is, that Rebels figured by the Gr ants and Seditions Fames, and Libels, are but Brothers and Sisters; Masculine and Feminine. But now if a Man can tame this Monster, and bring her to feed at the hand, and govern her, and with her flie other ravening Fowl, and kill them, it is somewhat worth. But we are infected with the stile of the Poets. To speak now in a fad and ferious manner: There is not in all the Politicks, a Place less handled, and more worthy to be handled, than this of Fame. We will therefore speak of these points. What are false Fames; and what are true Fames; and how they may be best discerned; how Fames may be fown and raifed; how they may be spread and multiplied, and how they may be checked and laid dead: And other things concerning the Nature of Fame. Fame is of that force, as there is Scarcely farcely any great Action wherein it hath not a great part, especially in the War. Mucianus undid Vitellius Fame that he scattered; that Vitellius had in purrole to remove the Legions of Spria into Germany: and the Legions of Germany into Syria: whereupon the Legions of Syria were infinitely inflamed. Julius for took Pompey unprovided; and laid after his industry and preparations, by a Fame that he cunning-by gave out, how Casar's own Soldiers loved him not; and being wearied with the Wars, and laden with to spoils of Gaul, would forfake him as foon as he ome into Italy. Livia fetled all things for the Succeson of her Son Tiberius, by continual giving out, that Husband Augustus was upon recovery and amendment. And it is an usual thing with Bashaws, to conceal the Death of the great Tark from the Janizane and Men of War, to fave the Sacking of Confianmaple, and other Towns, as their manner is. Themi-faces made Xerxes King of Persia post apace out of Grecia, by giving out that the Gracians had a purpose tobreak his Bridge of Ships, which he had made arthwart Hellespont. There be a thousand such like Examples; and the more they are, the less they need to be repeared; because a Man meeterh with them every where: Therefore, let all wife Governours have as great a watch and care over Fame, as they have of the Attions and defigns themfelves.

The rest was not finished.

山ケ

1000 11

e

THE LE DE FRANCE

ercet Action wherein it hath not a great

A Civil Character of Julius Cafar.

ULIUS CASAR was partaker at first of exercised Fortune; which turned to his benefit For it abated the haughtiness of his spirit, and when ted his Industry. He had a Mind, turbulent in his De fires and Affections; but in his judgment and under flanding very ferene and placed: And this appears by his easie deliverances of himself, both in his Transact ons and, in his Speech. For no Man ever relove more fwiftly, or lpake more perspicuously and plainly There was nothing forced or difficult in his expressions But in his will and appetite, he was of that Conditon, that he never refled in those things he had go ten; but still thirsted and pursued after new; yet to that he would not rush into new Affairs rashly, bu fettle and make an end of the former, before he a tempted fresh Actions, So that he would put a feat fonable period to all his Undertakings. And therefore, though he won many Battles in Spain, and weakned their Forces by degrees; yet he would not give over, nor despise the Relicks of the Civil W. there, till he had feen all things composed: But the affoon as that was done, and the State fetled, inflantly he advanced in his Expedition against the Parthians.

1

H

...

h

V

t

b

u

6

ti

He was, no doubt, of a very noble Mind; but yet such as aimed more at his particular Advancement, than at any Merits for the Common Good. For he referred all things to Himself; and was the true and perfect Centre of all his Actions. By which means, being so fast tied to his Ends, he was still prosperous, and prevailed in his Purposes; Insomuch, that neither Country, nor Religion, nor good Turns done him, not Kindrels.

covered,

Kindred, nor Friendship diverted his Appetite, nor bridfed him from pursuing his own Ends. Neither was he much inclined to works of Perpetuity: For he establishanothing for the future; He founded no fumptuous Buildings; He procured to be enacted no wholfome Laws, but still minded himself: And so his thoughts were confined within the Circle of his own Life. He fought indeed after Fame and Reputation, because he thought they might be profitable to his Defigns: Otherwife, in his inward thoughts be propounded to himfelf rather Absoluteness of Power, than Honour and Fame. For as for Honour and Fame, he purfued not after them for themselves; but because they were the Instruments of Power and Greatness. And therefore he was carried on through a Natural Inclination, not by any Rules that he had learned, to effect the fole Regiment ; and rather to enjoy the same than to feem worthy of it. And by this means he won much Reputation amongst the People, who are no valuers of true Worth: But amongst the Nobility and great Men, who were tender of their own Honours, it procured him no more than this, that he incurred the Brand of an Ambitious and Daring Man.

Neither did they much err from the Truth who thought him so; for he was by Nature exceeding bold; and never did put on any shew of Modesty, except it were for some purposes. Yet notwithstanding, he so attempted his Boldness, that it neither impeached him of Rashness; nor was burthensome to Men; nor rendred his Nature suspected, but was conceived to slow out of an Innute sincerity and freeness of Behaviour, and the Nobility of his Birth: And in all other things he passed, not for a Crasty and Deceitful Person, but for an open hearted and plain-dealing Man. And whereas he was indeed an airch-Politician, that could counterfeit and dissemble sufficiently well; and was wholly compounded of Frauds and Deceits, so that there was nothing sincere in him, but all artificial; yet he covered, and disguised himself so, that no such Vices, appeared to the Eyes of the World; but he was generally reputed to proceed plainly and uprightly with all Men. Howbeit, he did not stoop to any perty and mean Artisces, as they do, which are ignorant in State Employments; and depend not so much upon the strength of their own Wits, as upon the Counsels and Brains of others, to support their Authority; for he was skilled in the Turnings of all Humane Assairs; and transacted all Matters, especially those of high Consequence by himself, and not by others.

ut

He was fingularly skilful to avoid Envy; and found it not impertinent to his Ends, to decline that, though it were with fome diminution of his Dignity. For aiming at a Real Power, he was content to pass by all vain Pomp and outward shews of Power throughout his whole Life; Till at the last, whether high-slown with the continual Exercise of Power, or corrupted with Flatteries, he affected the Ensigns of Power, (the Stile and Diadem of a King,) which was the Bait that wrough

h

la o

P

his Overthrow.

This is true, that he harboured the thoughts of a Kingdom from his very youth: And hereunto the Example of Sylla, and the Kindred of Marius, and his Emulation of Pompey, and the Corruption and Ambition of the Times, did prick him forward: But then he paved his way to a Kingdom, after a wonderful and strange manner. As first, by a Popular and Seditions Power; afterwards by a Military Power, and that of a General in War. For there was required to effect his Ends; First, That he should break the Power and Authority of the Senate; which, as long as it stood firm, was adverfe, and an hindrance, that no Man could climb to Soveraignty and Imperial Command. Then the Power of Crassus and Pompey was to be subdued and quelled, which could not be done otherwise, than by Arms. And therefore (as the most Cunning Contriver of his own Fortune) he laid his first Foundation by Bribes; By

By corrupting the Courts of Justice, by renewing the memory of Caius Marius, and his party; For most of the Senators and Nobility were of Sylla's Faction: by the Law of distributing the Fields amongst the Common People: by the Sedition of the Tribunes, where he was the Author: by the madness and fury of Cariline, and the Conspirators, unto which Action he secretly blew the Goals! By the Banishment of Cicero, which was the greatest Blow, to the Authority of the Senate, as might be; and several other the like Arts: But most of all by the Conjunction of Crassus and Pompey, both betwist themselves, and with him; which was the thing that sinished the work.

Having accomplishe this part, he betook himself to the other; which was to make use of, and to enjoy his power. For being made Proconsul of France for five years; and afterwards continuing it for five years more; he furnished himself with Arms and Legions, and the power of a Warlike and Opulent Province; as was formidable to Italy.

のでは、日本のでは、日本の

nd gh

all

ut

th

i

Neither was he ignorant, that after he had strengthned himself with Arms and a Military Power, neither Grassus nor Pompey could ever be able to bear up against him; whereof the one trusted to his great Riches, the other to his Fame and Reputation; the one decayed through Age, the other in Power and Authority: And neither of them were grounded upon true and lasting Foundations. And the rather, for that he had obliged all the Senators and Magistrates: And in a word, all those that had any power in the Common-wealth, so firmly to himself, with private benefits, that he was fearless of any Combination or Opposition against his Designs, till he had openly invaded the Imperial Power.

Which things, though he always bare in his Mind, and at the last acted it, yet he did not lay down his former person; but coloured things so, that what with the reasonableness of his Demands, what with his pretences of Peace, and what with the moderate use of his Successes, he turned all the Envy of the Adverse Party, and seemed to take up Arms upon necessity for his own preservation and safety. But the falseness of this pretence manifestly appeared; inasmuch as foon after having obtained the Regal Power, all Civil War being appealed, and all his Rivals and Oppolites, which might put him to any fear, being removed out of the way by the stroke of Death; notwithstanding he never thought of resigning the Republick; no, nor ever made any shew or offer of resigning the same. shewed plainly, that his ambition of being a King was fetled in him, and remained with him unto his last breath. For he did not lay hold upon occasions, as they hapned, but moulded and formed the occasions, ashimfelf pleafed.

M 2

His chief Abilities confifted in Martial Knowledge; in which he fo excelled, that he could not only lead an Army, but mould an Army to his own liking. For he was not more skilful in managing Affairs, than in winning of Hearts. Neither did he affect this by any ordinary Discipline, as by inuring them to fulfil all his commands; or by ftriking a shame into them to disobey, or by carrying a severe Hand over them: But by fuch a way as did wonderfully flir up an alacrity and chearfulness in them: and did in a fort affure him of the Victory aforehand, and which did oblige the Soldier to him, more than was fit for a Free Estate. Now whereas he was versed in all kinds of Martial Knowledge, and joyned Civil Arts with the Arts of War; nothing came fo fuddenly, or fo unlookt for upon him, for which he had not a remedy at hand: And nothing was fo averse, but that he could pick fomething for his Turn and Benefit out of it.

He stood sufficiently upon his State and Greatness. For in great Battels, he would fit at home in the Head Quarter, and manage all Things by Meffages, which wrought him a double benefit. First, that it secured his

Se he fe

h

W

a G Li

his Person more, and exposed him the less to Danger. Secondly, that if at any time his Army was worsted, he could put new spirit into them with his own presence, and the Addition of fresh Forces, and turn the Fortune of the Day. In the conducting of his Wars, he would not only follow former Precedents, but he was able to devise and pursue new Stratagems, according as the accidents and occasions required.

ate

iry es

as ar ch

he

e-

er

as

y

1-

3 7

n

y

0

t

He was conftant, and fingularly kind, and indulgent in his Friendships contracted. Notwithstanding, he made choise of such Friends, as a Man might eastly see, that he chose them rather to be Instruments to his Ends, than for any Good will towards them. And whereas, by Nature, and out of a firm Refolution, he adhered to this Principle; not to be eminent amongst Great and deserving Men; but to be chief amongst Inferiours and Vassals: he chose only mean and active Men, and fuch as to whom himself might be all in all. And hereupon grew that faying & So let Cafar live, though I die; and other Speeches of that kind. As for the Nobility, and those that were his Peers, he contracted Friendship, with such of them as might be, useful to him; and admitted none to his Cabinet Council, but those that had their Fortunes wholly depending upon him.

He was moderately furnished with good Literature, and the Arts; But in such fort as he applied his skill therein to Civil Policy. For he was well read in History: and was expert in Rhetorick, and the Art of speaking. And because he attributed much to his good Stars, he would pretend more than an ordinary Knowledge in Astronomy. As for Eloquence, and a prompt Elocution, that was Natural to him, and pure.

He was dissolute, and propense to Volup nounfees and Pleasures; which served well at first for a Cover to his Ambition. For no Man would imagine, that a Man so loosely given could harbour any Ambitious and Vast Thoughts in his Heart. Notwithstanding, he so governed his Pleasures, that they were no hindrance, either to his profit, or to his business: And they did rather wher, than dull the vigour of his Mind. He was Temperate at his Meals; free from Niceness and Curiosity in his Lusts; pleasant and Magnificent at publick Interludes.

M 3

Thus being accomplished, the same thing was the Means of his down-fall at last; which in his Beginnings was a step to his Rise, I mean his Affectation of Popularity: For nothing is more popular, than to forgive our Enemies. Through which, either Vertue or Cunning, he lost his Life.

LXI.

'A Civil Character of Augustus Cæsar.

MUGUSTUS CASAR, (if ever any Mortal (1 Man) was endued with a greatness of Mind, undisturbed with Passions, clear and well ordered; which is evidenced by the High Atchievements which he performed in his early youth. For those persons which are of a turbulent Nature or Appetite, do commonly pass their youth in many Errors; and about their middle, and then, and not before, they shew forth their Perfections; but those that are of a sedate and calm Nature, may be ripe for great and glorious Actions in their youth. And whereas the Faculties of the Mind, no less than the Parts and Members of the Body, do confift and flourish in a good temper of Health, and Beauty, and Strength; So he was in the strength of the Mind, inferior to his Unkle Julius; but in the Health and Beauty of the Mind, superior. For Julius being of an unquiet and uncomposed Spirit, (as those, who are troubled with the Falling-Sickness for the most part are,) notwithstanding he carried on his own ends with much Moderation and Discretion; but he did not orther ther

Tem-

in v

les.

the

ings

ula-

Our

he

der his ends well, propounding to himfelf, wast and high Deligns, above the Reach of a Mortal Man. But Angustus, as a Man sober, and mindful of his Mortality, feemed to propound no other ends to himself, than fuch as were orderly and well weighed, and governed by Reason. For first he was desirous indeed to have the Rule and Principality in his hands; then he fought to appear worthy of that Power which he should acquire Next, to enjoy an High Place, he accounted but Transitory Thing: Lastly, He endeavoured to do such Actions, as might continue his memory, and leave an Impression of his good Government to After Ages. And therefore, in the beginning of his Age, he affected Power; in the middle of his Age, Honour, and Dignity; in the decline of his years, Ease and Pleasure; and in the end of his Life, he was wholly bent to Memory and Pofferity.

THE

THE

TABLE.

$

F Adversity.		Page r	1
Of Ambition.	1977	IO.
Of Anger.		110 15	0
Of Atbeism.		4 lo = 14
Of Beauty.		15	6
Of Boldness.		Min lim 2	9
Of Building.	brid-sylle,	in of his year.
Of Ceremonies and Respects.	at their years	Wasw of A	8
Of Counsel.		and the s	3
Of Cunning,		5	8
Of Custom and Education.		10
Of Death.			3
Of Deformity.		11	7
Of Delays.		5
Of Discourse.
Of Dispatch.		6
Of Empire.		4	8
Of Envy.		i	8
Of Expence.		7
Of Faction.		13
Of Followers and Friends,		. 13
Of Fortune.		10
Of Friendship.		6
Of Gardens.		12
Of Goodness, and Goodness of	Nature.	3
Of Great Place.	2, 44	2
Of the true Greatness of King	gdoms and Estat	es. 7
Of Regiment of Health.	i de la de la de	8
Of Honour and Reputation,		14
Of Innovations.		6	4
F	11		1

of Judicature.	146
Of Love.	23
of Marriage and Single Life.	17
of Masks and Triumphs.	193
Of Nature in Men.	102
Of Negotiating.	129
Of Nobility.	33
Of Parents and Children.	ış
Of Plantations.	92
Of Proife.	140
Of Prophecies.	98
Of Revenge.	9
Of Riches.	95
Of Seditions and Troubles.	34
Of Seeming Wife.	67
Of Simulation and Dissimulation,	12
of studies. A both (10)	735
G Superstition.	1 34
Of Suspicion.	88
Of Sustors.	133
Of Trayel.	46
Of Truth.	r
Of Vain Glory.	142
Of Vicissitude of Things.	152
Of Unity in Religion.	5
Of Ulury.	110
Of Wisdom for a Mans Self.	62
Of Youth and Age.	114
A Fragment of an Essay of Fame.	158
A Civil Character of Julius Calar.	160
A Civil Character of Augustus Casar.	166

OF THE

COLOURS

O F

GOOD and EVIL

A Fragment.

IN Deliberatives, the Point is, what is Good, and what is Evil; and of Good what is greater; and of Evil what is less.

So that the Perswader's Labour, is to make things appear Good or Evil, and that in an higher or lower Degree; which as it may be performed by me and folid Reasons, so it may be represented allo by Colours, Popularities, and Circumstances, which are of fuch force, as they fway the ordinary Judgment either of a weak Man, or of a wife Man, not fully and confiderately attending and pondering the matter. Besides their power to aler the nature of the Subject in appearance, and to lead to Error, they are of no less use to quicken and strengthen the Opinions and Perswafions which are true: for Reasons plainly delivered. and always after one manner, especially with Fine and Fastidious Minds, enter but heavily and dully; whereas if they be varied, and have more Life and Vigour put into them by these Forms and Infinuations, they cause a stronger Apprehension, and many times suddenly win the mind to a Resolution. Lastly. To make a true and safe Judgment, nothing can be of greater Use and Defence to the Mind, than the Discovering and Reprehension of these Colours, shewing in what Cases they hold, and in what they deceive; which, as it cannot be done, but out of a very universal knowledge of the Nature of things; so being performed, it so cleareth Min's Judgment and Election, as it is the less apt to flide into any Error. Capita Capita Sectionum, quæ in Boni Malique Colorum Tabula continentur.

TO Di cæteræ Partes, vel Sellæ, secundas unanimiter deserunt, cum singulæ principatum sibi vendicent, Melior reliquis videtur. Nam primus quæque ex zelo videtur sumere, secundas autem ex vero & merito tribuere.

2. Cujus excellentia, vel exuperantia Meltor; il toto genere Melius.

3. Quod ad Veritatem refertur, Majus est, quan quod ad Opinionem. Modus autem & probatio eiu, quod ad Opinionem pertinet, hæc est: Quod quis, si clam putaret forte, facturus non esser.

4. Quod rem integram servat, Bonum: Quod fin receptu est, Malum; Nam se recipere non posse, impotentiæ genus est; potentia autem Bonum.

5. Quod ex pluribus constat, & divisibilibus, est Majus, quam quod ex paucioribus, & Magis Unum: Nam omnia, per partes considerata, majora videntur; quare & pluralitas partium Magnitudinem præ se fert. Fortius autem operatur pluralitas partium, si Ordo abst: Nam inducit similitudinem Infiniti, & impedit comprehensionem.

6. Cujus privatio bona, Malum : Cujus privatio mala, Bonum.

7. Quod Bono vicinum, Bonum: Quod à Bono re-

8. Quod quis culpa sua contraxit, Majus Malum : Quod ab externis imponitur, Minus Malum.

9. Quod

Bon. For

dus vid

quoc

gan

lum

9. Quod opera & virtute nostra partum est, Majus Bonum: Quod ab alieno benesicio, vel ab indulgentia Fortunæ, delatum est, Minus Bonum.

10. Gradus Privationis major videtur, quam gradus Diminutionis; & rursus gradus Inceptionis major, videtur, quam gradus Incrementi.

mu

mi.

200.

id

ius,

fine im-

rt.

tio

re-

od

11. Quod laudant homines & celebrant, bonum; fili quod vituperant & reprehendunt, malum.

12. Quod etiam ab inimicis laudatur, magnum Bonum; quod verò ab amicis reprehenditur, magnum Malum. The Heads of the Sections of the Table of the Colours of Good and Evil, rendred into English, an as fallow.

Ince all Parties, or Sects, challenge the prebeminence of the First Place to themselves; that to which all the rest with one consent give the Second Place, seems to be better than the others. For every one seems to take the First Place out of Zeal to it self; but to give the Second where it is really due.

2. That kind is altogether best, whose Excellence, or Preheminence is best.

3. That, which hath a relation to Truth, is Greater than that which refers to Opinion. But the Meafure, and Tryal of that, which belongs to Opinion, is this: It is that which a Man would not do, if he thought it would not be known.

4. That, which keeps a matter safe and entire, is Good; but what is destitute and unprovided of Retreat is Bad. For whereas all Ability of Acting is Good, not to be able to withdraw ones self, is a kind of Impotency.

5. That which confists of more Parts, and those Divisible, is Greater, and more one, than what is made up of Fewer: For all things when they are looked upon piece-meal, seem Greater; when also a Plurality of Parts make a shew of a Bulk considerable: Which a Plurality of Parts effects more strongly, if they be in no certain Order; for it then resembles an Infinity, and hinders the comprehending of them.

6. That,

the

fa

De

is

th

In

gr

90

E

be

6. That, whose Privation (or, the Want of which) is Good, is in it felf Evil: that, whose Privation (or the Want whereof) is an Evil, is in it self Good.

7. What is near to Good, is Good; what is at diflance from Good, is Evil.

8. That, which a Man hath procured by his own Default, is a Greater Mischief (or Evil:) that, which is laid on him by others, is a Lesser Evil.

9. That, which is gotten by our own Pains and Industry, is a greater Good: that, which comes by another Man's Courtefie, or the Indulgence of Fortune, is a leffer Good.

Co

, are ebe

hat.

cond very felf:

nce,

ea-

ed

on,

if

is 79. is

lè 0-

10. The Degree of Privation Seems Greater than the Degree of Diminution: And again, the Degree of Inception (or Beginning) seems greater than the Degree of Increase.

11. That, which Men commend and celebrate, is good; that, which they dispraise and reprehend, is evil.

12. That, which draws commendation even from Enemies, is a great Good; but that, which is reprehended even by Friends, is a great Evil.

6. That, while Privation (or, the West of which a Cost, it has fely Evil a char, whefe ha heating (costing) William Joney is an Itali, is in it for Good. In What mean to Good, is Good : what is at all-Sente views Greek in Evilla Se That a look of Hard his property for this age Month on Greece Littlich (er Ledt) that o year, which is getter by our constants and the Step in generate Containing and he course by the Comment, or hie indulgence of loring. sold the strain of the contraction of a saver government and again, at a Degree of The side state say We start the start of the start of See Letter the seed resident in the Soul were on homeway they deliver 117 the the plant of the branch of the corne Triend, in that here.

A Table of the Colours (or Appearances) of Good and Evil; and their Degrees, as Places of Perfwafion, and Disswafion, and their several Fallaxes, and the Elenchs of them.

1. CUI catera Partes, vel Secta, secundas unanimiter deserant, cum singula principatum sibi vendicent. Melior reliquis videtur. Nam primas quaque ex zelo ottaur sumere; secundas autem ex vero o merito tribuere. That is, since all Parties, or Sects, challenge the Preheminence of the first Place to themselves; that, to which all the rest with one consent give the second Place, seems to be better than the others. For every one seems to take the first Place out of zeal to it self, but to give the second where it is really due.

SO Cicero went about to prove the Sect of Academicks, which sufferended all Asserveration, for to be the best. In, saith he, ask a Stoick, which Philosophy is true, he will prefer his ownt then ask him, which approacheth (next) the Truth, he will confess, the Academicks. So deal with the Epicure, that will scant endure the Stoick to be in sight of him; so soon as he bath placed himself, he will place the Academicks next him.

So if a Prince took divers Competitors to a place, and examined them feverally, whom next themselves they would chiefly commend; it were like the ablest men should have the most second Voices.

The Faller of this Colour happeneth oft in respect of Boy; for men are accustomed, after themselves, and their own fashion, to incline unto them which are softest.

test, and are least in their way, in despight and derogation of them, that hold them bardest to it. So that in Colour of Meliority and Preheminence is a sign of Enerotion and Weakness.

2. Cujus excellentia, vel exuperantia Melior; id toto guent Melius. That is,

That kind is altogether best, whose Excellence, or Preheminence is best.

A Ppertaining to this are the Forms: Let us not wander in generalities. Let us compare particular with particular, &c. This appearance, though it seem of strength, rather Logical than Rhetorical, yet is very off a Fallax.

Sometimes; because fome things are in kind very a fual; which if they escape, prove excellent: so that the kind is inferior, because it is so subject to perl; but that, which is excellent, being proved, is superior. As the Blossom of March, and the Blossom of Mar, whereof the French Verse goeth:

Burgeon de Mars, enfans de Paris, Si un esobape, bien vaut dix.

So that the Bloffom of May is generally better than the Bloffom of March; and yet the best Bloffom of March is better than the best Blossom of May.

Sometimes, because the nature of some kinds is to be more equal, and more indifferent, and not to have very distant Degrees; as hath been noted in the warms a Climates, the people are generally more wise, but in the Northern Climate, the Wits of chief are greater. So the many Armies, if the matter should be tryed by Debetween two Champions, the Victory should go on the one side; and yet, if it were tryed by the gross, the would go on the other side. For Excellences go and went were by chance, but kinds go by a more certain Nature by Discipline in War.

Lastly, Many kinds have much refuse, which countrival that which they have excellent; and therefore generally Metal is more precious than Stone, and yet a Diamond is more precious than Gold.

Quod ad Veritatem refertur, Majus est, quam quod ad Opinionem. Modus autem & probatio ejus, quod ad Opinionem pertinet, bec est: Quod quis, si clam putaret fore, facturus non esset. That is,

That which hath relation to Truth, is greater than that which refers to Opinion. But the Measure, and Tryal of that, which belongs to Opinion, is this: It is that which a Man would not do, if he thought it would not be known.

50 the Epicures say to the Stoicks Felicity placed in Vertue; that it is like the selicity of a Player, who, if he were lest of his Audisors, and their Applause, would streight be out of Heart and Countenance; and therefore they call Vertue, bonum theatrale; that is, stage good. But of Riches the Poet saith, Populus me sibulat, At mibi plaudo: i.e.

Me People hifs abroad, But I my felf applaud.

And of Pleasure,

021-

TY

Pre-

Wan-

with n of

y ca chat

eril:

rior.

arch

o be

the oin Dad the

/est

-Grata sub imo

Candia corde premens, vultu simulato Pudorem: i. c.

"Your welcome Joys within let stifled lie, "But counterfeit abroid a Modesty.

The Fallax of this Colour is formewhat fubtil, though the Answer to the Example be ready: For Verme not chosen propter auram popularem, for the applause & People; but contrariwise, Maxime omnium teipsum revenre; a Man ought to fland most in awe of himself; as a Vertuous Man will be Vertuous in folitudine, in Defart, and not only in theatro, upon the Stage: though percase it will be more strong by Glory and Fame, as an Heat, which is doubled by Reflection. But that denien the Supposition, it doth not reprehend the Fallax, whereof the Reprehension is a Law, that Vertue (fuch as is joyned with Labour and Conflict) would not be chofen, but for Fame and Opinion; yet it followeth not, that the chief Motive of the Election should not be real, and for it felf; for Fame may be only causa impulsion, the impelling or urging Cause, and not causa constituent, or efficiens, the constituting, or efficient Cause. As if there were two Horses, and the one would do better without the Spur than the other; but again, the other with the Spur would far exceed the doing of the former, giving him the Spur also; yet the latter will be judge ed to be the better Horse: and the Form, as to fay, Tulh, the Life of this Horse is but in the Spur, will not ferve as to a wife Judgment; for, fince the ordinary Infrument of Horfmanship is the Spur, and that it is no matter of Impediment or Burthen, the Horse is not to be accounted the less of, which will not do well without the Spur, but the other is to be reckoned rather a Delicacy, than a Vertue. So Glory and Honour are the Spurs to Vertue: and, although Vertue would languish without them, yet fince they be always at hand to attend Vertue, Vertue is not faid to be the less chosen for it self, because it needed the Spur of Fame and Reputation. And therefore that Polition, Nota ejus re, quod propter Opinionem, & non propter veritatem eligita, bac est; Quod quis, si clam putaret fore, facturus non essi; (That is, That the Mark of a Thing chosen for Opinion, and not for Truth-fake; is this, That one would

.0

1

60

£

in ì

not do it, if he thought it would not be known,) is reprehended.

4. Quod rem integram servat, Bonum: quod fine receptu est, Malum. Nam serecipere non posse, impotentia genus est: potentia autem Bonum: That is, verein z

ugh s an ieth

ere-

5 15

ho-

ot,

ישי ens,

if

TO THE

ot

15

to 6-

ne

ille

to n

-

i,

5

8 0 ď

That, which keeps a matter safe and entire, is Good: but what is destitute, and unprovided of a retreat, is bad. For, whereas all Ability of Acting is Good, not to be able to withdraw ones self, is a kind of Impotency.

TTEreof Afop framed the Fable of the two Frogs, 11 that confulted together in the time of drought, (when many Plashes that they had repaired to were by,) what was to be done: and the one propounded to go down into a deep Well, because it was like the Wawould not fail there; but the other answered, Tea, but if it do fail, bow shall we get up again? And the Reason is, that Humane Actions are so uncertain, and subject to perils, as that feemeth the best course, which had most passages out of it. Appertaining to this Per-Iwasion, the Forms are, You shall engage your self: on the other fide, Tantum, quantum voles, sumes ex fortuna, i.e. Take what Lot you will; or, you shall keep the matter in your own Hand. The reprebension of it is, that preceeding and resolving in all actions is necessary. For, as he faith well, Not to refolve, is to refolve; and many times it breeds as many necessities, and engageth as far in some other fort, as to resolve. So it is but the coverous Man's Disease translated in power; for the covetous Man will enjoy nothing, because he will have his full fore, and possibility to enjoy the more; so, by this Reaion, a Man should execute nothing, because he should be still indifferent, and at liberty to execute any thing. Besides Necessity and this same Facta est alea, or, once having cast the Dice, hath many times an advantage; because it awaketh the powers of the mind, and strengthneth endeavour, (Caeteris pares, necessitate certe superiora istis:) which are able to deal with any others, but mafter these upon necessity.

be

b

t

1

5. Quod ex pluribus constat, & divisibilibus, est majus, quam quod ex paucieribus, & magis Unum: nam omnia, per partes considerata, majora videntur; quare & pluralitat partium Magnitudinem præ se fert. Fortius autem operatur Pluralitas partium, si Ordo absit: nam inducit similitudinem Infiniti, & impedit comprehensionem; That is,

That, which confifts of more parts, and those Divisible, is greater, and more One, than what is made up of fewer; for all things, when they are looked upon piece-meal, seem greater; whence also a purality of Parts make shew of a Bulk considerable, which a Plurality of Parts effects more strongly, if they be in no certain Order; for it then resembles an Infinity, and hinders the comprehending of them.

THIS Colour seemeth palpable, for it is not Plurality of Parts, without Majority of Parts, that maketh the total greater; yet nevertheless, it often carries the mind away; yea, it deceiveth the fense; as it feemeth to the Eye a shorter distance of way, if it be all dead and continued, than if it have Trees, or Buildings, or any other marks, whereby the Eye may divide it. great-monied man hath divided his Chefts, and Coyns, and Bags, he feemeth to himself richer than he was. And therefore the way to amplifie any thing is to break it, and to make Anatomy of it in Several parts, and to examine it according to feveral circumstances. And this maketh the greater shew, if it be done without Order, for confufion maketh things mufter more. And besides, what is fet down by Order and Division, doth demonstrate, that nothing is left out or omitted; but all is there: whereas, if it be wishous Order, both the mind comprehendesh less that which is set down, and besides it leaveth a suspi-

7

con, as if more might be faid than is expressed.

This Colour deceiveth, if the mind of him that is to be perswaded, do of it self overconceive or prejudge of the greatness of any thing; for then the breaking of it will make it feem lefs, because it makes it to appear more according to the Truth. And therefore, if a Man be in Sickness or Pain, the time will feem longer without a Clock, or Hourglass, than with it : for the mind doth value every moment; and then the Hour doth rather sum up the moments than divide the Day. So in a lead Plain the way feemeth the longer, because the Eye hath pre-conceived it shorter, than the truth: and the frustrating of that maketh it feem longer than the truth. Therefore, if any Man have an over-great Opinion of any thing, then if another think, by breaking it into feveral Considerations, he shall make it feem greater to him, he will be deceived. And therefore, in fuch Cases, it is not fafe to divide, but to extol the Entire Still in general.

Another Case, wherein this Colour deceiveth, is, when the matter broken, or divided, is not comprehended by the sence, or made at once in respect of the distracting or scattering of it: and being entire, and not divided, is comprehended. As an Hundred Pounds in Heaps of five Pounds will shew more than in one gross Heap: so as the Heaps be all upon one Table to be seen at once, otherwise not. As Flowers, growing scattered in divers Beds, will shew more, than if they did grow in one Bed: so as all those Beds be within a Plot, that they be object to view at once; otherwise not. And therefore men, whose Living lyeth together in one Shire, are commonly counted greater landed, than those, whose Livings are dispersed, though it be more; because of the notice and comprebenfion.

gth-

per litas opet fihat

on of

in

7,

A third Case, wherein this Colour deceiveth, which is not so properly a Case or Reprehension, as it is a counter Colour, being in effect as large as the Colour it self is,

N 4

Omnis

That every Composition seems to partake of a certain want; because, if one thing would ferve the turn, were ever best; but it is the Defect and Imperfection of things that hath brought in that help to piece them m: as it is faid, " Martha, Martha, attendi ad plurima, unum sufficit : that is, Mar. * Luke 10:41,42. tha, Martha, thou art troubled about many things; one thing is fufficient. So likewife hereupon Afop framed the Fable of the Fox and the Cat: wherein the Fox bragged, what a number of hifti and devices he had, to get from the Hounds; and the Cat said, He had but one, which was to climb a Trees which in proof was better worth than all the rest; where of the Proverb grew, Multa novit Vulpes, sed Felis unum magnum.

Reynard the Hounds to scape had shifts not small, Grimalkin only one, as good as all.

And in the Moral of this Fable, it comes likewife to pass, That a good sure Friend is a better belp at a pinch, than all the Stratagems and Policies of Man's own wit. So it falleth out to be a common Error in Negotiating; whereas Men have many Reasons to induce or persuade, they ffrive commonly to utter, and use them all at once, which weakeneth them. For it argueth, as was faid, a neediness in every of the Reasons by it felf, as if one did not trust to any of them, but fled from one to another, helping himself only with that.

Et quæ non prosunt singula, multa juvant.

And what help'd not alone before, Doth help full well, when joyn'd with more. 7 cam.

d d

mp:

Mar-

OOUR Wife

the hifts

rees

CTO.

to cb, So

reey

ce,

a

7,

Indeed, in a fet Speech in an Assembly, it is expected, Man should use all his Reasons in the Case he handers: but in private perswasions it is always a great stror.

A fourth Case, wherein this Colour may be reprehended is in respect of that same vis units fortior, the acknowledged strength of an united Power; according to the Tale of the FRENCH King, who, when the Emperor's Embassador had recited his Master's Style at large, which consistent of many Countries, and Dominions, the FRENCH KING willed his Chancellor, or other Minister, to repeat over FRANCE as many times as the other had recited the several Dominions; intending, it was equivalent with them all, and more compasted and united.

There is also appertaining to this Colour another Point, why breaking of a thing doth help it; not by way of adding a shew of Magnitude unto it, but a note of Excellency and Rarity: whereof the Forms are, Where you ball find such a Concurrence? Great, but not compleat: for it feems a less work of Nature or Fortune, to make any thing in his kind greater than ordinary, than to make a frange Composition. Yet, if it be narrowly considered, this Colour will be reprebended, or encountred, by imputing to all Excellencies in Compositions a kind of Poverty, or (at least) a Casualty, or Jeopardy: for from that, which is excellent in greatness, somewhat may be taken, or there may be a decay, and yet sufficient left; but from that which hath his price in Composition, if you take away any thing, or any part do fail, all is Difgrace.

6. Cujus Privatio bona, Malum: aujus Privatio mala, Bonum. That is,

That, whose Privation (or, the want of which) is Good, is in it felf Evil: that whose Privation (or, the want thereof) is an Evil, is in it felf Good.

THE Forms to make it conceived, that that was Evil, which is changed for the better, are, He that is a Hell thinks there is no Heaven. Satis quereus; Acorns wen good, till Bread was found, &c. And on the other fide the forms to make it conceived, that that was good, which was changed for the worfe, are; Bona magis carendo quan fruendo fentimus: That is, we understand the Goodness of things more by wanting, than enjoying them. Bona a tergo formosoffima: i. e. Good things never appear in thin full Beauty, till they turn their back, and be going away, &c.

The Reprehension of this Colour is, That the Good or Evil which is removed, may be efteemed Good or Evil comparatively: and not possively or simply. So that if the Privation be Good, it follows not that the former condition was Evil, but less Good: For the Flower or Blossom is a positive Good; although the remove of it, to give place to the Fruit, be a comparative Good. So in the Tale of Afop, when the old fainting man in the best of the day cast down his Burthen, and called for Death; and when Death came to know his will with him, faid, It was for nothing, but to help him up with his burthen again: It doth not follow, that because Death, which was the privation of the Burthen, was ill, therefore the Burthen was good. And in this part the ordinary Form of Malum Necessarium, a necessary Evil, aptly reprehended this Colour: For privatio mali necessarii est mala, the privation of a necessary Evil is Evil; and yet that doth not convert the Nature of the necessary Evil, but it is Evil.

Again it cometh sometimes to pass, that there is an equality in the change of privation, and (as it were) a

Dilemma

6

1

Dilemma boni, of the good; or, Dilemma mali, of the Evil; fo that the corruption of one Good is a Generation of the other.

Curruptio mius eft generatio Sorti pater æques utrique eft :

ood.

vane

wil,

ide ide nich ness

on4 beig

Ç O

ul

ner

ot

10

in

eat

6;

id,

in:

he

en

1775

0 n

n-

m

14

Both Chances the fame equal Parent have:

And contrarily, the remedy of the one Evil, is the orcasion and commencement of another; as in Seylla and Cha-Quod Bono vicinum, Bonum: quod à Bono remoture Malum. That is, W reduced hors buring ?

What is near to Good, is Good: What is at diffance from Good, is Evil.

CUCH is the Nature of things, that things contrary, and distant in nature and quality; and also severed and disjoyned in Place; and things like, and conferring in quality, are placed, and (as it were) quartered together: For partly, in regard of the Nature, to spread, multiply, and infect in fimilitude; and partly, in regard of the Nature to break, expel, and alter that which is difagreeable and contrary, most things do either affociate, and draw near to themselves the like, or (at least) assimilate to themselves that which approacheth near them, and do also drive away, chase, and exterminate their contraries. And that is the reason commonly yielded, why the middle Region of the Air should be coldest; because the Sun and Stars are either bot by Direct Beams, or by reflecti-. The direct Beams heat the upper Region; the reflected Beams from the Earth and Seas, heat the lower Regim. That which is in the mid'ft, being farther distant in place from these two Regions of beat, is most distant in Nature, that is coldest, which is that they term cold, or

* Antiperistafis is a Philosophical Term, fignifying a repulsion on every part, whereby either Heat or Cold is made more ftrong in it felf, by the restraining of the contrary.

bot, per " Antiperistafin, that is, a. vironing by contraries: which we pleasantly taken hold of by him who faid, that an honest man thefe days must needs be more hone than in Ages beretofore, propter An-tiperistalin, because the southing of bim in the mid st of Contraries must needs make the honester stronger, and more compact in it felf.

The Reprebension of this Colour is:

First, Many things of Amplitude in their kind do (were) engrofs to themselves all, and leave that which is next them most destitute. As the Shoots, or Under Wood, that grow near a great and spread Tree, is the most pined and shrubby Wood of the Field; because the great Tree doth deprive and deceive them of the fap and nourishment; so be faith well, Divitie servi maxime Servi, That rich mens Servants are the greatest Slaves: And the Comparison was pleasant of him, that compared Courtiers attendant in the Courts of Princes, without great Place or Office, to Fasting-days; which were ner the Holy-days; but otherwise were the leanest days in all the Week.

Another Reprebension is, that things of Greatness and Predominancy, though they do not extenuate the things adjoyning in Substances, yet they drown them, and obscure them in shew and appearance. And therefore the Aftronomers fay; that, whereas in all other Planets Comjunction is the perfectest amity, the Sun contrariwise is good by Aspect, but evil by Conjunction.

A third Reprehension is, because Evil approacheth to Good, fometimes for concealment, fometimes for protection; And Good to Evil for conversion and reformation. So Hypocrifie draweth near to Religion for covert and biding it felf.

Sæpe latet vitium proximitate boni.

Oft, under neighb-ring Good, Vice shrowded lies.

And Sanctuary-men, which were commonly inordiante men, and Malefactors, were wont to be nearest to Priests, and Prelates, and Holy-men: for the Majesty of and things is such, as the Confines of them are reverend. On the other side, our Saviour charged with nearness of Publicans and Rioters, said Matt. 9. 11. The Physician approaches the sick rather than the whole.

in a

net

An-

Com-

(a)

de

the the and

roi, And red

OUL

nest

ı all

and ngs

obthe

on-

to elf.

nd

8. Quod quis culpa sua contraxit, Majus Malum: quod ab externis imponitur, Minus Malum. That is,

That, which a Man hath procured by his own Default, is a greater mischief (or Evil;) that, which is laid on by others, is a lesser Evil.

THE Reason is, because the sting and remorse of the mind, accusing it self, doubletb all Advertity: Contraining, the considering and recording inwardly, that a man is clear and free from fault, and just imputation, doth attempt outward Calamities. For if the Will be in the Sense, and in the Conscience both, there is a gemination of it: But if Evil be in the one, and Comfort in Tragedies do make the most passionate Lamentation, and those that fore-run sinal despair, to be accusing, questioning, and torruring of a man's self.

Seque unum clamat causamque caputque malorum.

She railing doth confess her self to be The cause and source of her own misery.

And contrariwife, the extremities of worthy Persons have been annihilated in the consideration of their own good deserving. Besides, when the Evil cometh from without, there is lest a kind of evaporation of grief, if it come by humane injury, either by indignation, and meditating of revenge from our selves or by expetting or fore-conceiving,

that

that Newefis and Retribution will take hold of the Audin of our burt; or, if it be by fortune or accident; yet then is left a kind of expolulation against the Divine Powers

Asque Dess atque Afra vocat crudelia Mater:

The God's and cruel Stars the Mother doth charge.

But, where the Evil is derived from a man's of fault, there all finites deadly inwards and sufficients.

The Reprebension of this Colour is:

Birft in respect of Hope: For Reformation of ou fault is in notra potestate, our own power; but amend ment of our fortune simply is not: Therefore Demosth. nes in many of his Orations faith thus to the People of Athons; That which having regard to the time past, is the warfe Point and scircumstance of all the rest; That as to the time to come, is the best. What is that? Even this, that by your Sloth, Irresolution, and Milgovernment, your affain ore grang to this Declination and Decay: For, bad you will and ordered your means and forces to the best, and done you parts every way to the full; and notwithfranding your matters should have gone backward in this manner as they do there bad been no bone left of Recovery or Reputation. But fince it bath been only by your own errors, &c. So Epicleta in his Degrees faith, The worst state of man is to accuse extern Things, better than that to accuse any man's felf, and best of all to accuse neither,

Another Reprehension of this Golour, is in respect of the well bearing of Evils, wherewith a man can charge no body but himself, which maketh them the less.

Leve fit, quod bene fertur onus !

The Burben's light, that's on discreetly laid.

And therefore many natures, that are either extremit

279

5

4

0

me, and cleaving to themselves, (when they see the time of any thing that falls out ill, must light upon inselves) have no other shift, but to bear it out well, and to make the least of it: For, as we see, when sometimes a fault is committed, and before it be known who to blame, much ado is made of it; but after, if it appear to be done by a Son, or by a Wife, or by a near triend; then it is light made of: So much more, when a nan must take it upon himself. And therefore it is commonly seen, that Women which marry Husbands of their nunichusing, against their Friends consents, if they be never so ill-used, yet you shall seldom see them complain, but set a good face on it.

9. Quod opera & virtute nostra partum est; Majus Bonum: Quod ab alieno beneficio, vel ab indulgentia Fortuna, delatum est; Minus Bonum. That is,

That which is gotten by our own Pains and Industry, is a greater good; that which comes by another man's Courtesie, or the Indulgence of Fortune, is a lesser Good.

HE Reafons are,

The.

e of

s the

that वाग

your nat-

do:

But

etu

ex-

and

of

rge

First, The future Hope: Because in the favour of others, or the good Winds of Fortune, we have no state, or certainty; In our endeavours, or abilities, we have. So as when they have purchased us one good Fortune, we have them as ready, and better edged and environed to procure another.

The Forms be: You have won this by play. You have not only the Water, but you have the Receipt: You can make it again, if it be loft, &c.

Next, because these Properties, which we enjoy by the benefit of others, carry with them an obligation, which seemeth a kind of burthen: Whereas the other, which derive from our selves, are like the freest Pasents, Absque aliquo inde reddendo, without making any restitution. And of they proceed from Fortune, or Providence, yet they feem to touch us secretly with the reverence of the vine Powers, whose Favours we taste, and therefor work a kind of Religious Fear and restraint: Where in the other kind, that comes to pass, which the Prophet speaketh, Exek. Lestantur, exaltant, immolant play sus & sacrificat retissue. Men are glad, they rejoice, the offer to their Toils, and sacrifice to their Nets.

Thirdly, Because that, which cometh unto us without our own Vertue, yieldeth not that Commendation and Reptation: For Actions of great Felicity may draw wonder, but praise less; as Cicero said to Casar, Quae miremur, batterns; quae laudemus, expectamus: That is, They had what they might wonder at; but expected what they might praife.

Fourthly, Because the purchases of our own industry are joyned commonly with labour and strife; which gives an edge and appetite, and makes the fruition of our Desires more pleasant. Suavis cibus à venatu: Venison is fweet of ones own killing.

On the other fide, there be four Counter-Colours to this Colour, rather than Reprehensions; because they be as large as the Colour it felf.

First, Because felicity seemeth to be a Character of the Favour and Love of the Divine Powers; and accordingly works both of confidence in our selves, and respect and authority from others. And this felicity extendeth to many casual things; whereunto the eare and virtue of man cannot extend; and therefore seemeth to be at large Good. As when Casar said to the Sailer; Casarem portae, & fortunam ejus; That he carried Casar and his Fortune: If he had said, Et virtutem ejus, and his Valour; it had been small comfort against a Tempest; otherwise than if it might seem upon Merit, to induce Fortune.

Next, whatfoever is done by Virtue and Industry, feems to be done by a kind of Habit and Art; and thereupon open to be imitated and followed: Whereas Felicity is imitable. So we generally fee, that things of Nature feem more excellent than things of Art, because they

Mo

hat

Cal

for

bei

be imitable; for, Quod Imitabile est, potentia qua-they be imitable; for, Quod Imitabile est, potentia qua-in vulgatum est: What is imitable, is by a certain power ade known abroad.

Thirdly, Felicity commendeth those things which come about our own labour: For they seem Gifts, and the they are seen Peny-worths. Whereupon Platarch saith ele-antly of the Acts of Timoleon, who was so fortunate, compared with the Acts of Agesilaus and Epaminondas. compared with the Acts of Agefilaus and Epaminondas. That they were like Homer's Verses; they ran so easily, and well. And therefore it is the Word we give unto Poefie, terming it a happy Vein; because Facility seemeth ever to ome from Happiness. Fourthly, This same prater spem, vel expectatum, when things happen besides Hope or Expectation, it doth increase the Price and Pleasure of many things; and this cannot be incident to those things that proceed from our own care, and compassing.

bur bur bur har ight

Shy

our n is this rge

the

ng-

ind

naan

rge

em

his ife

nd as of fe

10. Gradus Privationis major videtur, quam gradus Diminutionis: Et rursus, Gradus inceptionis major videtur, quam Gradus Incrementi : That is,

The Degree of Privation feems greater than the Degree of Diminution: And again, the Degree of Inception, (or Beginning,) feems greater than the Degree of Increase.

T is a Position in the Mathematicks, that there is no Proportion between somewhat and nothing: Therefore the Degree of Nullity and Quiddity, (or Act) feemeth laror than the Degrees of Increase and Decrease. As to a Monoculus, it is more to lose one Eye, than to a Man that hath two Eyes. So, if one have lost divers Children, it is more grief to him to lose the last, than all the rest; because he is Spes Gregis, the Hope of his Stock. And therefore Sibylla, when the brought her Three Books, and had burned Two did double the whole price of both the other; because the burning of that had been gradus privationis, a Degree of Privation, and not Diminutionis, of Diminutionis, of Diminutionis, tion.

This Colour is reprehended:

First, in those things, the Use and Service whereof refe in sufficiency, competency, or determinate quantity : Asi man be to pay one bundred Pounds upon penalty, it is mor to him to want twelve Pence, than after that twelve Ponce Supposed to be wanting, to want ten Shillings more. the decay of a Man's Estate seems to be most touched in Degree, when he first grows behind, more than afterward when he proves nothing worth. And hereof the conmon Forms are: Serain fundo parsimonia; Or, It is took to pinch when the Purse is at the bottom; and, as good we a whit as never the better.

It is reprehended also in respect of that Notion, Co ruptio unius, generatio alterius: That the Corruption one thing is the Generation of another. So that Grad for Privationis, the Privative Degree is many times less Mater, because it gives the cause and motive to some me Course. As when Demosthenes reprehended the People for bearkning to the Conditions offered by K. Philip, bear that the bonourable, nor equal, he saith, They were but Element of their sloth and weakness; which if they were taken and proceeding and traces them. necessity would teach them stronger Resolutions. So Doctor Hester was wont to say to the Dames of London, who they complained, they were they could not tell how, by the yet they could not endure to take any Medicine, be been would tell them, their way was only to be fick; for comments of the control of the co then they would be glad to take any Medicine.

Thirdly, This Colour may be reprehended in respect that the degree of Decrease is more sensitive than the Do in gree of Privation; for in the mind of Men, Gradus Dimensions, the Degree of Decrease, may work a wavering be entitled. tween Hope and Fear, and keep the mind in suspence, from mon fettling, and accommodating in Patience, and Resolution was Hereof the common Forms are; Better cry out, than a who ways ask; make or mar, &c.

1

For the fecond Branch of this Colour, it depends upon fame General Reason: Hence grew the Common Place femolling the beginning of every thing;

Dimidium facti, qui bene cœpit, habet.

He bath bis Work balf done, Whoe'er bath well begun.

This made the Astrologer fo idle, as to judge of Man's Name, and Destiny by the Constellation of the moment

This Nativity, or Conception.
This Colour is reprehended, because many Inceptions are the (as Epicurus termeth them) Tentamenta, that is, important of the Offers, and Essays, which vanish, and come to no distance, without any iteration; so as, in such Cases, the send Degree seems the worthiest; as the Body-Horse in the continuous that draweth more than the Fore-Horse. Here-do the common Forms; The second Blow makes the Fray. Deing the second Word makes the Bargain. Alter principium dedit, the modum abstulit, &c. The one began, the other kept away to mean.

Odus Another Reprehension of this Colour, is in respect of Dewind ingation, which makes perseverance of greater Dignity, but than Inception: For Chance or Instinct of Nature may cause the liception: but settled Affection, or Judgment, maketh the

in the

vard

he hection: but settled Affection, or Judgment, maketh the fortinuance.

Thirdly, This Colour is reprehended in such things, Thirdly, This Colour is reprehended in luch things, which have a Natural Course and Inclination, contrary to in Inception: So that the Inception is continually evacuated, and gets no start; but there behoveth perpetua Ingles optio, that there be always a beginning; as in the comfrom non Forms: Non progredi, est regredi. Not to go for-mid ward, is to go backward. Qui non prosicit, desicit. He was who makes no Progress decays. Running against an Hill; knwing against the Stream, or with the Hill, then the Deof Inception is more than all the reft.

Fourthly,

by Fla

do

the

Fourthly, This Colour is to be understood of Gradu Inceptionis à potentia ad actum comparati, non gradus di actu ad Incrementum; Of the Degree of Inception, in conparison of the Power with the Act, not of the Degree from the Act to the Increase. For otherwise, Major video gradus ab impotentia ad potentiam, quam à potentia ad actum. The Degree from Impotency to Potency, seems greate, than from the Power to the Act.

- 11. Quod laudant homines & celebrant, bonum; quod vih. perant, & reprehendunt, malum.
- rr. That which Men praise and celebrate, is good; that which they disgrace, and reprehend, is bad.

This Colour deceives four ways, viz. either through Ignorance, or through want of Integrity; or through particular Respect and Faction, or through the natural inclination of those that praise, or dispraise First, Through Ignorance; for what signifies the Judgment of the Rabble in distinguishing and determining Good and Evil? Phocian knew well enough, who when the People applauded him more than ordinary, asked, Whether he had done any thing amis? Secondly, Through mant of Integrity; for those that praise and dispraise commonly carry on their own Designs and don't speak what they think.

Laudat venales qui vult extrudere merces.

Every Man praifes the Wares he would put off.

It is naught, it is naught, fays the Bayer; but when he is gone, he wannteth. Thirdly, Out of Partiality; for every one knows, that Men use to extol with immoderate praise those that are on their own side, and to depress those of the adverse Party below their desertative, Through a natural Inclination; for some Men are by by nature framed and moulded for fervile Fawning and Flattery, whilft others on the contrary are stiff, captious and morose; and when these commend or inveigh, they do but comply with their own Humours, not troubling their heads overmuch about the Truth of the business.

12. Quod etiam ab inimicis laudatur, magnum bonum; quod verò etiam ab amicis reprehenditur, magnum malum.

eater.

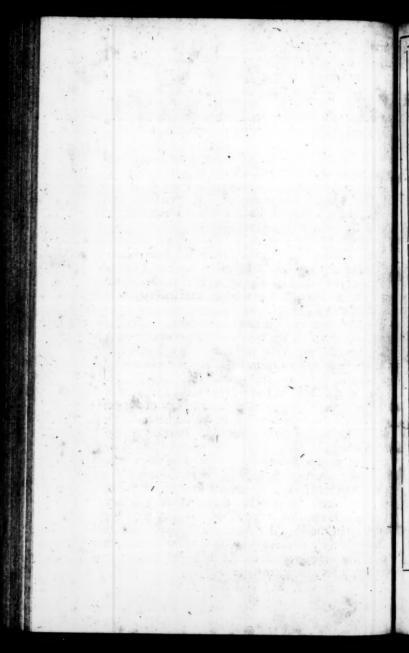

tha

by

12. That which draws commendation even from Enemies, is a great Good; but that which is reprehended even by Friends, is a great Evil.

This Colour feems to fland upon this Foundation, That it may well be believed, that the force of Truth extorts from us what foever we affirm to be againft that the wife wills, and contrary to the bent and inclination of our Wills, and contrary to the bent and inclination of our Wills.

This Colour deceives through the fubtilty, as well of finemies as Friends: For the praifes of Enemies are not always against their Wills, nor as forced by Truth, but they chuse to bestow them in such cases where they may create Envy or Danger to their Adversaries. Therefore the Grecians had a superstitious Fancy, that and with a mischievous design, he would have a push insection of the property of the property

THE

WISDOM

OF THE

ANCIENTS.

Written in Latin by the Right Honourable Sir FRANCIS BACON, Knight, Baron of Verulam, and Lord Chancellor of England.

Done into English by Sir ARTHUR GORGES, Knight.

Scutum invincibile fides.

LONDON,

Printed in the Year, 1696.

HT

MODELW

3 H T 46

RICHENIS

w.L. in by the Right 170-

78.70

TRA SAC NO MILES

Addig Specialize South

TO WED ON

mir n bemin

Dosion Bu F

PREFACE.

HE Antiquities of the first Age (except those we find in Sacred Writ) were buried in Oblivion and Silence: Silence was succeeded by Poetical Fables; and fables again were followed by the Records we now enjoy. So that the Mysteries and Secrets of Antiquity were distinguished and separated from the Records and Evidences of Succeeding Times by the veil of Fiction, which interposed it self, and came between those things which perished, and those which are extant. I suppose some are of opinion, that my purpose is to write Toys and Trifles, and to usurp the same liberty in applying, that the Poets assumed in feigning, which I might do (I confess) if I listed, and with more serious contemplation intermix these things, to delight either my self in Meditation, or others in Reading. Neither am I ignorant how fickle and inconstant a thing Fiction is, as being subject to be drawn and wrested any way, and how great the commodity of Wit and Discourse is, that is able to apply things well, yet so as never meant by the first Authors. But I remember that this liberty hath been lately much abused, in that many, to purchase the reverence of Antiquity to their own Inventions and Fancies, have for the same intent laboured to wrest many Poetical Fables: Neither hath thisold and common Vanity been used only of late, or now and then: For even Chrysippus long ago did (as an Interpreter Interpreter of Dreams) ascribe the Opinions of the Stoicks to the Ancient Poets; and more sottishly do the Chymists appropriate the Fancies and Delights of Poets in the Transformation of Bodies, to the Experiments of their Fornace. All these things, I say, I have sufficiently considered and weighed, and in them have seen and noted the general Levity and Indulgence of Men's Wits above Allegories; and yet for all this

I relinquish not my Opinion.

For first it may not be, that the Folly and Looseness of a few should altogether detract from the respect due to the Parables: For that were a conceipt which might Savour of Profaneness and Presumption: For Religion it self doth sometimes delight in such Veils and Sha dows: So that who so exempts them, seems in a manner to interdict all Commerce between things Divine and Humane. But concerning Humane Wisdom, 1 do indeed ingenuoully and freely confess, that I am inelined to imagine, that under some of the Ancient Fichons lay couched certain Mysteries and Allegories, even from their first invention. And I am persuaded (whe. ther ravished with the Reverence of Antiquity, or because in some Fables I find such fingular proportion between the similitude and the thing signified; and such apt and clear coherence in the very Structure of them, and propriety of Names wherewith the Persons or Actors in them are inscribed and intituled) that no man can constantly deny; but this Sense was in the Authors intent and meaning, when they first invented them, and that they purposely shadowed it in this fort: For who can be so stupid and blind in the open Light, as (when he hears how Fame, after the Giants were destroyed, sprung up as their youngest Sister)

Sto-

the 5 1

eri-

em

nce

bis

sels due ght

ion

ha-

anine

1 di-

noca

be-

be-ion

nd

of

ns

at

be

ed

is

en

its

7)

of

not to refer it to the Murmurs and Seditious Reports of both fides, which are wont to fly abroad for a time after the suppressing of Insurrections? Or when he hears how the Giant Typhon, baving cut out and brought away Jupiter's Nerves, which Mercury stole from bim, and restored again to Jupiter; doth not presently perceive bow fitly it may be applied to powerful Rebellions, which take from Princes their Sinews of Money and Authority; but so, that by affability of Speech. and wife Edicts (the Minds of their Subjects being in time privily, and as it were by stealth reconciled) they recover their strength again? Or when he bears bow (in that memorable Expedition of the Gods aeainst the Giants) the braying of Silenus his Ass, conduced much to the profligation of the Giants, doth not confidently imagine that it was invented to shew bow the greatest enterprizes of Rebels are oftentimes dispersed with vain Rumors and Fears.

Moreover, to what Judgment can the Conformity and Signification of Names seem obscure? Seeing Metis, the Wife of Jupiter, doth plainly fignific Counsel: Typhon, Insurrection: Pan, Universality: Nemelis, Revenge, and the like: Neither let it trouble any man, if sometimes be meet with Historical Narrations, or Additions for Ornament's sake, or confusion of Times, or something transferred from one Fable to another, to bring in a new Allegory: For it could be no otherwise, seeing they were the Inventions of Men, which lived in divers Ages, and had also divers Ends: Some being ancient, others neoterical; some have an eye to things Natural, others to Moral.

There is another Argument, and that no small one neither, to prove that these Fables contain certain hidden, and involved meanings, seeing some of them are observed to be so absurd, and foolish in the very relation that they shew, and as it were proclaim a Parable afar of: For such Tales as are probable, they may Geem to be invented for delight, and in imitation of History. And as for such as no man would so much a imagine or relate, they feem to be fought out for other ends: For what kind of Fiction is that, wherein Jupiter is faid to have taken Metis to Wife; and, perceiving that the was with Child, to have devoured her; whence himself conceiving, brought forth Pallas armed, out of his Head? Truly, I think there was never Dream (fo different to the course of Cogitation, and so full of Monstrostry, ever hatch'd in the Brain of Man. Above all things, this prevails most with me and is of fingular moment, many of thefe Fables seem not to be invented of those by whom they are related, and celebrated, as by Homer, Hefiod and others. For if it were fo, that they took beginning in that Age, and from those Authors by whom they are delivered, and brought to our hands: My Mind gives me, there could be no great or bigh Matter expected, or Supposed to proceed from them in respect of these Originals. But if with attention we consider the Matter, it will appear, that they were delivered, and related as things formerly believed, and received, and not as newly invented, and offered unto us. Befides, feeing they are diversly related by Writers that lived near about one and the felf-same time, we may easily perceive that they were common things, derived from precedent Memorials; and that they became various, by reason of the divers Ornaments bestowed on them by particular Relations: And the confideration of this must needs in creale ire

12-4 ay of a

er

u-

er.

ed

las ne-

on,

7in ith

les

re-

28, ed,

ere

DOls.

ap.

igs

in-

re

me.

at le-

be

e-

inase

trease in us a great opinion of them, as not to be accounted either the effects off the time, or inventions of the Poets, but as sacred Relicks, or abstracted Airs of better times, which by Tradition from more Ancient Nations, fell into the Trumpets and Flutes of the Gracians. But if any do obstinately contend, That Allegories are always adventitially, and as it were by constraint, never naturally, and properly included in Fables, we will not be much troublesome, but suffer them to enjoy that gravity of Judgment, which I am sure they affect, although indeed it be but lumpish, and almost leaden. And (if they be worthy to be taken notice of,) we will begin a fresh with them in some other sashion.

There is found among Men, (and it goes for current,) a twofold wfe of Parables, and those, (which is more to be admired) referred to contrary ends; conducing as well to the folding up, and keeping of things under a Veil, as to the enlightning and laying open of obscurities. But omitting the former, (rather than to undergo wrangling, and assuming ancient Fables as things vagrant, and composed only for delight,) the latter must questionless still remain as not to be wrested from us by any violence of Wit, neither can any (that is but meanly learned) hinder; but it must absolutely be received, as athing grave, and sober, free from all vanity, and exexceeding profitable, and necessary to all Sciences. This is it, I say, that leads the understanding of Man by an easie and gentle passage through all novel and abstruse inventions, which any way differ from common received Opinions. Therefore in the first Ages (when many humane Inventions and Conclusions, which are now common, and vulgar, were new, and not generally known,) all things were Full of Fables, Enigma's, Parables.

rables, and Similies of all forts: By which they fought to teach, and lay open, not to hide and conceal Know. ledge; especially seeing the Understandings of Men were in those times rude and impatient, and almost incapable of any Subtilties; such things only excepted, as were the Object of Sense; for as Hieroglyphicks preceeded Letters, fo Parables were more ancient than Arguments. And in thefe days also, he that would illuminate Mens minds anew in any old Matter, and that not with disprosit, and harshness, must absolutely take the same Course, and use the belp of Similies. Wherefore after all that bath been faid, we must thus conclude: The Wildom of the Ancients, it was either much or happy: Much, if these Figures and Tropes were invented by study and premeditation; Happy, if they (intending nothing lest,) gave Matter, and Oc-casion to so many worthy Meditations. As concerning my Labours, (if there be any thing in them which may do good,) I will on neither part count them ill bestow ed, my purpose being to illustrate either Antiquity, or Things themselves. Neither am I ignorant that this very Subject hath been attempted by others: But to Speak as I think, and that freely without oftentation, the Dignity and Efficacy of the Thing, is almost lost by these Men's Writings, though voluminous, and fall of Pains, whillt not diving into the depth of Matters, but skilful only in certain common places, have applied the sense of these Parables to certain vulgar, and general Things, not so much as glancing at their true Vertue, genuine Propriety, and full Depth. I (if I be not deceived,) shall be new in common Things. Wherefore leaving such as are plain and open, I will aim at farther and richer Matters.

To

TOOTHE

ht went

ks

an ilat ke

er es if c-

No sy

or

is to be by of ut ne

e,

.

0

BOOK.

R Ich Mine of Art, Minion of Mercury, True Truch-Man of the Mind of Myllery; Invention's Store-House, Nymph of Helicon; Deep Moralist of Time, Tradition.
Unto this Paragon of Brutus Race, Present thy Service, and with chearful Grace, Say, (if Pythagoras believ'd may be,) The Soul of Ancient Wisdom lives in Thee.

WISDOM

OF THE

ANCIENTS

CASSANDRA, or, Divination.

to

pl

ar

W

in no lic

ju St

ho

HE Poets Fable, That Apollo being enamoured of Cassandra, was by her many shifts and cunning sights still deluded in his Defire; but yet fed on with hope, untill fuch time as she had drawn from him the Gift of Prophefying; and having by fuch her Diffimulation, in the end, attained to that which from the beginning she fought after; at last, flatly rejected his Suit. Who finding himself so far engaged in his Promise, as that he could not by any means revoke again his rash Gift, and yet enflamed with an earnest desire of Revenge, highly disdaining to be made the scorn of a grafty Wench, annexed a Penalty to his Promise, viz. that she should & ver foretel the truth, but never be believed: So were her Divinations always faithful, but at no time regarded; whereof the still found the experience, yea, even in the ruine ruine of her own Countrey, which she had often forewarned them of; but they neither gave credit nor ear to her words. This Fable feems to intimate the unprofitable liberty of untimely admonitions and counfels: For they that are fo over-weened with the sharpness and dexterity of their own wit and capacity, as that they difdain to Submit themselves to the documents of Apollo, the God of Harmony, whereby to learn and observe the method and measure of affairs, the grace and gravity of Difcourfe, the differences between the more judicious and more vulgar Ears, and the due times when to freak, and when to be filent; be they never fo fenfible and pregnant, and their judgments never fo profound, and profitable; yet in all their endeavours either of perswasion, or perforce, they avail nothing, neither are they of any moment to advantage or manage matters; but do rather haften on the ruine of all those that they adhere, or devote themselves unto. And then at last, when calamity doth make men feel the event of neglect, then shall they too late be reverenced as deep, for efeeing, and faithful Prophets. Whereof a notable infrance is eminently fet forth in Marcus Cato Uticenfis, who, as from a watchtower, discovered afar off, and, as an Oracle, long foretold the approaching ruine of his Country, and the plotted Tyranny hovering over the State, both in the first Conspiracy, and as it was profecuted in the Civil Contention between Cafar and Pompey, and did no good the while, but rather harmed the Commonwealth, and hastned on his Countrey's bane; which M. Cicero wifely observed, and writing to a familiar Friend, doth in these terms excellently describe, Cato optime fertit, sed nocet interdum Reipublica: Loquitur erim tanquam in Republica Platonis, nor tanquam in face Romuli. Cato (faith he,) judgeth profoundly, but in the mean time damnifies the State; for he speaks in the Commonwealth of Plato, and hot as in the Dregs of Romulus.

ur-

nd

re;

me

ro-

in

nd-

he

ily

ın-

6-ere ed;

ne

TTPHON, or a Rebel.

JUNO being vex'd (fay the Poets) that Jupiter had begotten Pallas by himself without her, earnestly pressed all the other Gods and Goddesses that she might also bring forth of her felf alone without him; and having by violence, and importunity obtained a grant thereof, the fmote the Earth, and forthwith fprang up Typhon, a huge, and horrid Monster: This strange Birth The commits to a Serpent, (as a Foster-Father,) to nourish it; who no sooner came to ripeness of years, but he provokes Jupiter to Battel: In the Conflict the Gyant getting the upper hand, takes Jupiter upon his shoulders, carries him into a remote, and obscure Countrey, and (cutting out the finews of his Hands and Feet,) brought them away, and fo left him miferably mangled and maimed. But Mercury recovering these Nerves from Typhon by flealth, restored them again to Jupiter being again by this means corroborated, affaults the Monster afresh, and at the first strikes him with a Thunder-bolt, from whose Blood Serpens were ingendred. This Monster at length fainting, and flying, Jupiter casts on him the Mount Atna, and with the weight thereof crush'd him.

This Fable feems to point at the variable fortune of Princes, and the rebellious infurrection of Traytors in a State: For Princes may well be faid to be married to their Dominions, as Jupiter was to Juno; but it happens now and then, that being deboshed by the long custom of empiring, and bending towards Tyranny, they endeavour to draw all to themselves, and (contemning the Counsel of their Nobles and Senators) hatch Laws in their own Brain; that is, dispose of things by their own fancy, and absolute power. The people (repining at this) study how to create, and set up a Chief of their own choice. This Project by the secret instigation of the Peers, and Nobles, doth for

he

1

F

1

6

t

f

f ti

i had ftly

ght

and ant

irth

OU-

but

Gyhis

un-

and bly

refe

to bo-

kes

nts

ind ith

of

in ied

the

y-

nd

12-ofe

he let

he

or

he

the most part take his beginning; by whose connivence the Commons being fet on edge, there follows a kind of murmuring, or discontent in the State, shadow'd by the Infancy of Typhon, which being nurs'd by the natural pravity, and clownish malignity of the vulgar fort, (unto Princes, as infeftuous as Serpents,) is again repaired by a renewed ffrength, and at last breaks out into open Rebellion, which (because it brings infinite mischiefs upon Prince and People) is represented by the monstrous deformity of Typhon: his hundred heads fignifie their divided powers; his fiery mouths, their inflamed intents; his Serpentine Circles, their pestilent Malice in besieging; his Iron Hands, their merciless flaughters; his Eagles Talons, their greedy Rapines; his plumed Body, their continual Rumors, and Scouts, and Fears, and fuch like; and fometimes these Rebellions grow fo potent, that Princes are inforced (transported as it were, by the Rebels, and forfaking the chief Seats and Cities of the Kingdom,) to contract their Power, and (being deprived of the Sinews of Money and Majesty,) betake themselves to some remote and obfcure corner within their Dominions: but in process of time, (if they bear their Misfortunes with moderation,) they may recover their strength, by the virtue and industry of Mercury; that is, they may (by becoming affable, and by reconciling the minds and wills of their Subjects with grave Edicts, and gracious Speech,) excite an Alacrity to grant Aids, and Subfidies, whereby to strengthen their Authority anew. Nevertheless, having learned to be wife and wary, they will tefrain to try the chance of Fortune by War, and yet fludy how to suppress the reputation of the Rebels by some famous Action, which if it fall out answerable to their expectation, the Rebels finding themselves weakned, and fearing the fuccess of their broken Projects; betake themselves to some slight, and vain Bravadoes, like the hiffing of Serpents, and at length in despair betake themselves to slight; and then when they begin to break, it is fafe and timely for Kings to pursue, and oppress them with the Forces and Weight of the Kingdom, as it were with the Mountain Atna.

The CYCLOPS, or the Ministers of Terror.

THey fay that the Cyclops, for their fierceness, and cruelty, were by Jupiter cast into Hell, and there doomed to perpetual imprisonment; but Tellus perfwaded Jupiter that it would do well, if being fet at liberty, they were put to forge Thunder-bolts, which being done accordingly, they became so painful and industrious, as that day and night they continued hammering out in laborious diligence Thunder-bolts, and other instruments of Terror. In process of time Jupiter having conceived a Displeasure against Asculapius, the Son of Apollo, for restoring a dead Man to life by Phyfick; and concealing his diflike, (because there was no just cause of anger, the deed being pious and famous,) fecretly incens'd the Cycleps against him, who without delay flew him with a Thunder-bolt. In revenge of which Act, Apollo (Jupiter not prohibiting it) shot them to Death with his Arrows.

This Fable may be applied to the Projects of King, who having cruel, bloody, and exacting Officers, do first punish and displace them; afterwards by the counfel of Tellus, that is, of some base, and ignoble Person, and by the prevailing respect of Prosit, they admit them into their Places again, that they may have Instruments in a readinets, if at any time there should need either severity of execution, or acerbity of exaction. These service Creatures being by nature cruel, and by their former fortune exasperated, and perceiving well what is expected at their hands, do shew themselves wonderful officious in such kind of Employments; but being too rash, and precipitate in seeking

s to eight

ma.

or.

and

per-

t at hich and am-

and Julife nere

and vho

re-

(it)

gs,

do

ın-

on,

nit

In-

ıld

1.

11-

er-

W

feeking countenance, and creeping into favour, do fometimes take occasion from the secret Beckonings, and ambiguous Commands of their Prince, to perform some hateful execution. But Princes (abhorring the Fact, and knowing well, that they shail never want such kind of Instruments,) do utterly forsake them, turning them over to the Friends and Allies of the wronged, to their Accusations and Revenge, and to the general Hatred of the People; so that with great Applause, and prosperous Wishes and Acclamations towards the Prince, they are brought, rather too late, than undeservedly, to a miserable end.

NARCISSUS, or, Self-Love.

Hey fay, that Narcissus was exceeding fair and beautiful, but wonderful proud and disdainful; wherefore despising all others in respect of himself. he leads a folitary Life in the Woods and Chafes, with a few Followers, to whom he alone was all in all; amongit the rest, there follows him the Nymph Eche. During his Course of Life, it fatally so chanced, that he came to a clear Fountain, upon the Bank whereof he lay down to repose himself in the heat of the Day. And having espied the shadow of his own Face in the Water, was fo beforted, and ravished with the contemplation and admiration thereof, that he by no mea s possible could be drawn from beholding his Image in this Glass; infomuch, that by continual gazing thereupon, he in:d away to nothing, and was at last turned into a Flower of his own Name, which appears in the beginning of the Spring, and is facred to the internal Powers, Pluto, Preserping, and the Furies.

This Fable feems to flew the Dispositions, and Fortunes of those, who in respect either of their Beauty, or other Gift wherewith they are adorned, and graced by

P :

Nature

Nature, without the help of industry, are so far beforted in themselves, as that they prove the cause of their own defruction. For it is the property of Men infe-And with this Humour, not to come much abroad, orto be converfant in Civil Affairs, specially feeing those that are in publick Place, must of necessity encounter with many Contempts, and Scorns, which may much deject, and trouble their Minds; and therefore they lead for the most part a folitary, private, and obscure Life, attended on with a few Followers, and those, fuch as will adore, and admire them, like an Echo flatter them in all their Sayings, and applaud them in all their Words. So that being by this Custom seduced, and puft up, and as it were, stupified with the admiration of themselves, they are possessed with so strange a Sloth add Idleness, that they grow in a manner benumb'd, and defective of all vigour and alacrity. Elegantly doth this Flower, appearing in the beginning of the Spring, represent the likeness of these Men's Difpositions, who, in their youth do flourish, and wax famous; but being come to ripeness of years, they deceive and frustrate the good hope that is conceived of Neither is it impertinent that this Flower is faid to be confecrated to the infernal Deities, because Men of this disposition become unprofitable to all humane things: For whatfoever produceth no Fruit of it felf, but paffeth, and vanisheth as if it had never been, (like the way of a Ship in the Sea,) that the Ancients were wont to dedicate to the Ghofts, and Powers below.

SITX, or Leagues.

THE Oath by which the Gods were wont to oblige themselves, (when they meant to ratific any thing so firmly as never to revoke it,) is a thing well known to the Vulgar, as being mentioned almost in every Fable, which was when they did not invoke or call to witness any Celestial Majesty, or Divine Power, but only the River Styx, that with crooked and Meandry Turnings incircleth the Palace of the infernal Dis. This was held as the only manner of their Sacrament; and besides it, not any other Vow to be accounted firm, and inviolable; and therefore the punishment to be institled, (if any did perjure themselves,) was, that for certain years they should be put out of Commons, and not to be admitted to the Table of the Gods.

efor-

their infe-

orto

hofe

nter

uch

hey

ure

ofe,

cho

in du-

the

fo

my. ng if-

e-

f

d

11

This Fable feems to point at the Leagues and Pacts of Princes, of which, more truly, than opportunely, may be faid, That be they never fo strongly confirmed with the Solemnity and Religion of an Oath, yet are for the most part, of no validity; infomuch that they are made rather with an Eye to Reputation, and Report, and Ceremony, than to Faith, Security, and Effect. Moreover, add to these the Bond of Affinity, as the Sacraments of Nature, and mutual Deferts of each Part, and you shall observe, that with a great many, all these things are placed a degree under Ambition and Profit, and the licentious defire of Domination; and fo much the rather, because it is an easie thing for Princes to defend and cover their unlawful Defires and unfaithful Vows, with many outwardly feeming fair Pretexts, especially seeing there is no Umpire or Moderator of Matters concluded upon to whom a Reason should be tendred. Therefore there is no true and proper thing made choice of, for the confirmation of Faith, and that no celestial Power neither, but is indeed Necessity, (a great God to great Potentates,) the Peril also of State, and the Communication of Profit. As for Necessity, it is elegantly represented by Styx, that fatal and irremeable River; and this Godhead did Iphicrates, the Athenian, call to the Confirmation of a League; who because he alone is found to speak plainly that which many hide covertly in their Breafts, it would not be amiss to relate his words. He observing how the Lacedemonians P 4 had abf

Par

tim

Ch

the

Fo

H

for

H

his dy

fh

hi

Ju R

CI

H

had thought upon, and propounded divers Cautions. Sanctions, Confirmations and Bonds, pertaining to Leagues, interposed thus: Unum Laced emonii, nobis vobijeum viculum & fecuritatis ratio effe poffit; si plane demonstretis, vos ea nobis concessisse, & inter manus posuisse, ut vobis fa ultas lælendi nos, si maxime velletis, minime Suppetere p fit. There is one thing (O Laced emonians) that would link us unto you in the Bond of Amity, and be the occasion of Peace and Security; which is, if you would plainly demonstrate, that you have yielded up and put into our hands fuch things as that, would you hart as never fo fain, you should yet be disfarmined of means to do it. If therefore the power of hurting be taken away, or if by breach of League there follow the danger of the ruine or diminution of the State or Tribute; then indeed the Leagues may feem to be ratified and established, and as it were confirmed by the Sacrament of the Stygian Lake; feeing that it includes the fear of Prohibition and Sufpension from the Table of the Gods, unger which name the Laws and Prerogatives, the Plenty and Felicity of a Kingdom were fignified by the Ancients.

PAN, or Nature.

THE Ancients have exquisitely described Nature under the Person of Pan, whose original they leave doubtful; for some say that he was the Son of Mercury, others attribute unto him a far different beginning, affirming him to be the common Off-spring of Penelope's Suitors, upon a suspicion, that every one of them had to do with her; which latter relation doubtless gave occasion to some after-Writers to entitle this ancient Fable with the name of Penelope, a thing very frequent amongst them, when they apply old Fictions to young persons and names, and that many times absurdly ons,

to lane

iffe, ime ns)

15, ld-

at,

be ver

que

of

ay

nng

on, he

4

e

abfurdly and indifcreetly, as may be feen here: For Pan being one of the Ancient Gods, was long before the time of Uliffes and Penelope. Besides (for her Matronal Chaffiry) the was held venerable by Antiquity. Neither may we pretermit the third conceit of his Birth: For some fay, That he was the Son of Jupiter and Hybris, which fignifies contumely or difdain. But howfoever begotten, the Farcæ (they fay) were his Sifters. He is pourtrayed by the Ancients in this guife; on his Head a pair of Horns to reach to Heaven, his Body rough and Hairy, his Beard long and shaggy, his shape biformed, above like a Man, below like a Beast, his Feet like Goat's-hoofs, bearing these Ensigns of his Jurisdiction, to wit, in his left-hand a Pipe of seven Reeds, and in his right a Sheep-hook, or a Staff grooked at the upper end, and his Mantle made of a Leopard's Skin. His Dignities and Offices were thefe: He was the God of Hunters, of Shepherds, and of all Rural Inhabitants: chief President also of Hills and Mountains, and next to Mercury, the Embassador of the Gods. Moreover, He was accounted the Leader and Commander of the Nymphs, which were always wont to dance the rounds, and frisk about him; he was accosted by the Satyrs and the old Sileni. He had power aifo to frike Men with terrors, and those especially vain and superstitious, which are termed Panick fears. His acts were not many, for ought that can be found in Records, the chiefest was, that he challenged Cupid at wrestling, in which conside hehad The Tale goes too, how that he caught the Gyant Typhon in a Net, and held him fast. Moreover, where Ceres (grumbling and chafing that Proferpina was ravished) had hid her felf away, and that all the Gods took pains (by difperfing themselves into every corner) to find her out, it was only his good hap (as he was hunting) to light on her, and acquaint the rest where she was. He presumed also to put it to the tryal who was the belt Mulician, he or Apolio, Apollo, and by the judgment of Midas was indeed pre. ferred: But the wife Judge had a pair of Affes Ean privately chopt to his Noddle for his fentence. Of his Love-tricks, there is nothing reported, or at leaf not much, a thing to be wondred at, especially being among a Troop of Gods fo profufely amorous. This only is faid of him, that he loved the Nymph Edn (whom he took to Wife) and one pretty Wench more called Syrinx, towards whom Cupid (in an angry and revengeful humour, because so audaciously he had challenged him at Wrestling) instanced his define Moreover, he had no Issue (which is a marvel allo, feeing the Gods, especially those of the Male kind, were very generative) only he was the reputed Fatherd a little Girl called Jambe, that with many pretty Tals was wont to make ftrangers merry; but fome think that he did indeed beget her by his Wife Jambe. (if any be) is a noble Tale, as being laid out and bigbellied with the Secrets and Mysteries of Nature.

Pan (as his name imports) reprefents and lays open the All of Things or Nature. Concerning his original there are two only Opinions that go for currant; for either he came of Mercury, that is, the Word of God, which the Holy Scriptures without all controversie affirm, and such of the Philosophers as had any smack of Divinity affented unto; or else from the confused Seeds of things. For they that would have one simple beginning, refer it unto God; or if a materiate beginning, they would have it various in power. So that we may end the Controversie with this Distribution, That the World took beginning, either from Mercury, or from the Seeds of all things.

Virg. Eclog. 6.

Namque canebat uti magnum per inane coacta Semina terrarumque, animæque, marisque fuissent, fta

tio

ful

co

be an

CO

gin

fut

Ca

Sif

CO

dif

of

an bro

all

col

pe

Et liquidi simul ignis : Et his exordia primis Omnia, & ipse tener mundi concreverit Orbis.

d pre-

Ean

being

This

Ech

more

y and had lefire

alfo,

Were

ner of

Tals

think

This

big-open

origi-

ant;

d of ntro-

any

the

have ma-

wer.

MOTE

Of t leaft

For rich-vein'd Orphens fweetly did rehearfe How that the Seeds of Fire, Air, Water, Earth, Were all pact in the vast void Universe: And how from these as Firstlings, all bad birth, And how the Body of this Orbick frame, From tender infancy so big became.

But, as touching the third conceit of Pan's Original. i feems that the Gracians (either by intercourse with the Agyptians, or one way or other) had heard fomething of the Hebrew Mysteries; for it points to the fate of the World, not confidered in immediate Creation, but after the fall of Adam, exposed and made subject to Death and Corruption: For in that state it was (and remains to this day) the Off-spring of God and Sin. And therefore all these Three Narrations concerning the manner of Pan's birth may feem to be true, if it be rightly distinguished between Things and Times. For this Pan or Nature (which we suspect, contemplate and reverence more than is fit) took beginning from the Word of God by the means of confused matter, and the entrance of Prevarication and Corruption. The destinies may well be thought the Sifters of Pan or Nature, because the beginnings and continuances, and corruptions and depreffions, and diffolutions, and eminences, and labours and felicities of things, and all the chances which can happen unto any thing, are linkt with the Chain of Caufes natural.

Horns are attributed unto him, because Horns are broad at the root and sharp at the ends, the nature of all things being like a Pyramis, sharp at the top. For individual or singular things being infinite are first collected into species, which are many also; then from species into generals, and from generals (by ascending) are contracted into things or notions more general; so that at length Nature may feem to be contracted into an unity. Neither is it to be wondred at, that Par Ge toucheth Heaven with his Horns, feeing the height of Nature or universal Ideas do, in some fort, pertain to G things Divine, and there is a ready and short Passage

that

12 ab

21 21 ap

po

th

m

CO

th

Sh

na

St

pe

th

fo

d

h e li te C

H 1

(

C

t

(

from Metaphysick to natural Theology.

The Body of Nature is elegantly and with deep judg. ment depainted hairy, reprefenting the beams or operations of creatures; for beams are as it were the Hairs and Briftles of Nature, and every creature is either more or less beamy, which is most apparent in the faculty of feeing, and no less in every vertue and operation that effectuates upon a distant Object, for whatfoever works upon any thing afar off, that may rightly be faid to dart forth Rays or Beams.

Moreover, Pan's Beard is faid to be exceeding long because the beams or influences of Coelestial Bodies do operate and pierce farthest of all; and the Sun, when (his higher half is shadowed with a Cloud) his Beams break out in the lower, and looks as if he were bearded.

Nature is also excellently set forth with a biformed Body, with respect to the differences between superior and inferior Creatures. For one part, by reason of their Pulcritude, and equability of motion, and constancy and dominion over the Earth and earthly things is worthily fet out by the shape of Man: and the other part in respect of their perturbations and unconstant motions, (and therefore needing to be moderated by the Cœlestial) may be well fitted with the Figure of Brute Beaft. This Description of his Body pertains alfo to the participation of Species, for no natural being feems to be simple, but as it were participated and compounded of two. As for example, Man hath fomething of a Beaft, a Beaft fomething of a Plant, a Plant fomething of inanimate Body, of that all natural things are in very deed biformed, that is to fay, compounded of a superior and inferior Species.

d into It is a very wirty Allegory, that fame of the Feet of the Goat, by reason of the upward tending motion of Terrefirial Bodies towards the Air and Heaven, for the Goat is a climbing Creature, that loves to be hanging afface about the Rocks and steep Mountains; and this is done also in a wonderful manner, even by those thing which are destinated to this inferior Globe, as may manifestly appear in Clouds and Meteors.

Pur the of

in to judz.

Ope-

e the

ire is nt in

e and , for may long,

es do vhen

eams bear-

med

erior n of

COnings,

cher tant

by

of a

al-

ing

omme-

ant

ngs

ded

k

The two Enfigns which Pan bears in his hands do point, the one at Harmony, the other at Empire: For the Pipe confishing of feven Reeds, doth evidently demonstrate the confent, and Harmony, and discordant concord of all inferior Creatures, which is caused by the Motion of the feven Planets: And that of the Sheep-hook may be excellently apply'd to the order of nature, which is partly right, partly crooked: This Staff therefore or Rod is specially crooked in the upper end, because all the works of Divine Providence in the World are done in a far fetcht and circular manner. fo that one thing may feem to be affected and yet indeed a clean contrary brought to pass; as the felling of Toleph into Agypt, and the like. Besides in all wise Humane Government, they that fit at the Helm do more happily bring their purposes about, and infinuate more early into the minds of the People, by pretexts and oblique courfes, than by direct methods: fo that all Scepters and Masses of Authority ought in very deed to be crooked in the upper end.

Pan's Cloak or Mantle is ingeniously feigned to be a Skin of a Leopard, because it is full of Spots: So the Heavens are spotted with Stars, the Sea with Rocks and Islands, the Land with Flowers, and every particular Creature also is for the most part garnished with divers colours about the superficies, which is as it were a Mantle unto it.

The Office of Pan can be by nothing fo lively conceived and exprest, as by feigning him to be the God of Hunters, for every natural action, and fo by confequence,

quence, Motion and Progression, is nothing else but The Hunting. Arts and Sciences have their works, and Humane Counsels their ends which they earnestly hun after. All natural things have either their Food as a Prey, or their Pleasure as a Recreation which they seek for, and that in most expert and sagacious man the her.

Torva Leæna Lupum sequitur, Lupus ipse Capellam. Florentem Cytisum sequitur lasciva Capella.

The hungry Lioness, (with sharp desire) Pursues the Wolf, the Wolf the wanton Goat: The Goat again doth greedily aspire To have the trifoil Juyce pass down her Throat.

Pan is also said to be the God of the Country-Clowns, because Men of this condition lead lives more agreeable unto Nature, than those that live in the Cities and Courts of Princes, where nature by too much Art is corrupted: So as the saying of the Poet (though in the sense of Love) might be here verified:

Pars minima est ipsa puella sui.

The Maid so trickt her self with Art, That of her self she is least part:

He was held to be Lord President of the Mountains, because in the high Mountains and Hills, Nature lays her self most open, and Men most apt to view and contemplation.

Whereas Pan is said to be (next unto Mercury) the Messenger of the Gods, there is in that a Divine Mystery contained, for next to the Word of God, the Image of the world proclaims the Power and Wisdom Divine, as sings the Sacred Poet, Psal. xix. 1. Cali enarrant glariam Dei, at que opera manum ejus indicat sirmamentum.

h

net

The

and for dul

for

the

the

Na

ak

nin

emp

So

har

tuat

but

(

Wal

folu

and

the

but The Heavens declare the glory of God, and the Firma-

Hu ment sheweth the Works of his Hands.

nuch

ugh

ains,

lays age

ine,

glo-

MIN: The.

hur The Nymphs, that is, the Souls of living things take as a great delight in Pan. For these Souls are the delights they or minions of Nature, and the direction or conduct of man these Nymphs is with great reason attributed unto Pan. because the Souls of all things living do follow their natural dispositions as their guides, and with infinite vanety every one of them after his own fashion, doth leaps and frisk and dance with incessant motions about her. The Satyrs and Sileni also, to wir, Youth and Old-age, are some of Pan's followers: For of all natural things, there is a lively, jocund, and (as I may fay) a dancing age. and an age again that is dull, bibling and reeling. The carriages and dispositions of both which ages, to some fuch as Democritus was, (that would observe them duly,) might peradventure feem as ridiculous and deformed, as the gambols of the Satyrs, or the gestures of the Sileni.

Of those fears and terrors which Pan is faid to be the Author, there may be this wife construction made: Namely, that Nature hath bred in every living thing a kind of care and fear, tending to the prefervation of is own life and being, and to the repelling and shunning of all things hurtful. And yet Nature knows not how to keep a mean, but always intermixes vain and empty fears with fuch as are discreet and profitable: So that all things (if their insides might be seen) would appear full of Panick frights: But men especially in hard, fearful, and diverse times, are wonderfully infamated with superstition, which indeed is nothing else and but a Panick terror.

Concerning the audacity of Pan in challenging Cuthe dy. pid at wrestling: The meaning of it is, that Matter wants not inclination and defire to the relapfing and difsolution of the World into the old Chaos, if her malice and violence were not reftrained and kept in order, by the prepotent unity and agreement of things fignified by Cupid, or the God of Love; and therefore it was happy turn for Men, and all things elfe, that in the conflict Pan was found too weak, and overcome.

To the same effect may be interpreted his catching of Typhon in a Net: For howsoever there may some times happen vast and unwonted Tamours (as the name of Typhon imports) either in the Sea, or in the Air, or in the Earth, or elsewhere; yet Nature de intangle it in an intricate toil, and curb and restraining as it were with a Chain of Adamant, the excesses and infolencies of these kind of Bodies.

But forasmuch as it was Pan's good fortune to solut Core as he was Hunting, and thought little of it which none of the other Gods could do, though the did nothing else but seek her, and that very seriously; it gives us this true and grave admonition, That we expect not to receive things necessary for life and manners from Philosophical Abstractions, as from the greater Gods; albeit they applied themselves to no other study, but from Pan; that is, from the discreet observation and experience, and the universal knowledge of the things of this World; whereby (oftentimes even by chance, and as it were going a Hunting) such Inventions are lighted upon.

The quarrel he made with Apollo about Musick, and the event thereof contains a wholfome instruction, which may serve to restrain men's Reasons and Judgments with Reins of Sobriety, from boasting and glorying in their gifts. For there seems to be a twofold Harmony, or Musick; the one of Divine Providence, and the other of Humane Judgment, the Administration of the World and Creatures therein, and the more secret Judgments of God, sound very hard and harsh; which foliy, albeit it be well set out with Asses Ears; yet notwithstanding these Ears are secret, and do not openly appear, neither is it perceived or noted as a de-formity by the vulgar.

n

16

Wast

die die

in in es and find

of it,

they ully;

at we man-grea

other

bfer-

ge of even ven-

and

tion,

udg-l glo-told

nce, îtra-

nore

rfh; ars; not de-

Lastly, It is not to be wondred at, that there is non their thing attributed unto Pan concerning Loves, but only of his marriage with Echo: For the World or Nature tching doth enjoy it felf, and in it felf all things elfe. Now fome he that loves would enjoy fomething, but where there as the senough, there is no place left to defire. Therefore here can be no wanting love in Pan, or the World, for defire to obtain any thing (feeing he is contented with himself) but only Speeches; which (if plain) may be intimated by the Namph Echo, or if more quaint by Syrinx. It is an excellent invention that Pan, or the World is faid to make choice of Echo only (above all other Speeches or Voices) for his Wife: For that alone is true Philosophy, which doth faithfully render the very words of the World; and it is written no otherwise than the World doth dictate, it being nothing else but the Image or reflection of it, not adding any thing of its own, but only iterates and refounds. It belongs also to the sufficiency or perfection of the World, that he begets no Iffue; for the World doth generate in respect of its parts, but in respect of the whole, how can it generate, seeing without it there is no Body? Notwithstanding all this, the Tale of that tatling Girl fathered upon Pan, may in very deed, with great Reason, be added to this Fable: For by her are represented those vain and Idle Paradoxes concerning the Nature of things which have been frequent in all Ages, and have filled the World with Novelties; Fruitless, if you respect the matter; Changlings if you respect the kind, sometimes ereating Pleasure, sometimes tediousness with their overmuch pratling.

PERSEUS, or War.

DERSEUS is faid to have been employed by Pal las, for the destroying of Medusa, who was very infestuous to the Western Parts of the World, and especially about the utmost Coasts of Hiberia. A Monfter fo dire and horrid, that by her only aspect the turned Men into Stones. This Medula alone of all the Gorgons was mortal, the rest not subject to Death. Pr. feus therefore preparing himfelf for this noble enterprife, had Arms and Gifts bestowed on him by three of the Gods: Mercury gave him Wings annexed to his Heels, Pluto a Helmet, Pallas a Shield and a Look ing-Glass. Notwithstanding (although he were thus furnished) he went not directly to Medusa, but firth to the Grea, which by the Mothers fide were Sisters to the Gregons. These Greæ from their Birth were Hoar-headed, refembling old Women. They had bu one only Eye, and one Tooth among them all; both which, the that had occasion to go abroad, was won to take with her, and at her return to lay them down again. This Eye and Tooth they lent to Perseus; and fo finding himself throughly furnished for the effecting in of his delign, haftens towards Medula. Her he found a fleeping, and yet durft not prefent himfelf with his Face towards her, left she should awake; but turning to his head aside, beheld her in Pallas's Glass, and (by this means directing his blow) cut off her head; from whose Blood gushing out, instantly came Pagasus, the fi Flying-Horse. Her head thus smote off, Perseus bestows on Pallas her Shield, which yet retained this vertue, at whatfoever looked upon it, should become as studies as a Stone, or like one Planet-strucken.

This Fable seems to direct the preparation and order, that whatfoever looked upon it, should become as stupid as a Stone, or like one Planet-strucken.

that is to be used in making of War; for the more apt 1 and confiderate undertaking whereof, three grave and

.wholefome

pr

re

n

re

00

Ь

t N

b

H

d

th

e ú

M 0-0

.

wholesome Precepts (favouring of the wisdom of Pal-

First, That men do not much trouble themselves about the Conquest of Neighbour Nations, seeing that private possessions and Empires are enlarged by different means: For in the augmentation of private Revenues, the vicinity of mens Territories is to be considered; but in the propagation of Publick Dominions, the occasion and facility of making War, and the Fruit to be expected ought to be instead of vicinity. Certainly the Romans, what time their Conquests towards the West scarce reacht beyond Liguria, did yet in the East bring all the Provinces as far as the Mountain Taurus within the compass of their Arms and Command; and therefore Perseus, although he were bred and born in the East, did not yet resulte to undertake an expedition seen to the uttermost bounds of the West.

Secondly, There must be a care had that the Mosives of War be just and honourable, for that begets an alacrity, as well in the Soldiers that fight, as in the people that pay, it draws on and procures Aids, and brings many other Commodities besides. But there is no pretence to take up Arms more pious, than the suppressing of Tyranny; under which yoke, the people lose their courage, and are cast down without heart and vigor, as in the fight of Medufa.

Thirdly, It is wifely added, that feeing there were three Gorgons (by which Wars are represented) Persons undertook her only that was mortal; that is, he made choice of such a kind of War as was likely to be effected and brought to a period, not pursuing vast and endless hopes.

The furnishing of Perseus with necessaries was that which only advanced his attempt, and drew Fortune to be of his side; for he had speed from Mercury, concealing of his Counsels from Orcus, and Providence from Pallas.

V Pal.

and Mona fhe

ll the

Per-

enter-

three

d to

Look-

thus first

ifters

Were

d but both

Wont

own

and

Cring

bund

his c ning

(by from

the

tows

rtue,

ftu-

der,

apt and ome

to tro

for

he goo

con

Neither is it without an Allegory, and that full of matter too, that those Wings of Celerity were fashed to Perseus his Heels, and not to his Ankles, to his Feet, and not to his Shoulders; because speed and celerity is required, not so much in the first preparations for War, as in those things which second and yield aid to the first; for there is no Error in War more frequent, than that Prosecutions and Subsidiary forces do fail to answer the alacrity of the first onlets.

Now for that Helmet which Pluto gave him, powerful to make men invisible, the Moral is plain; but the twofold gift of Providence (to wit, the Shield and Looking Glass) is full of Morality; for that kind of Providence, which like a Shield avoids the force of blows, is not alone needful, but that also by which the strength and motions, and Counfels of the Enemy are descryed, as in the Looking Glass of Pallas.

But Perf us, albeit he were fufficiently furnished with aid and courage, yet was he to do one thing of special importance before he entred the Lists with this Monster, and that was to have fome intelligence with the Gra These Great are Treasons which may be termed the Si fters of War not descended of the same stock, but far unlike in Nobility of Birth; for Wars are generous and heroical, but Treasons are base and ignoble. Their description is elegant, for they are said to be Gray-headed, and like old Women from their Birth; by reason that Traytors are continually vext with cares and trepidations. But all their strength (before they break out into open Rebellions) confifts either in an Eye or in a Tooth; for every faction alienated from any State, contemplates and bites. Besides, this Eye and Tooth is as it were common; for whatfoever they can learn and know, is delivered and carried from one to another by the hands of Faction. And as concerning the Tooth, they do all bite alike, and fing the fame fong; fo that hear one, and you hear all. Perfeus there fore was to deal with these Gree for the love of their Eye

Feet

ity is

War.

o the

than

an-wer.

that

and

d of

e of

the emy

with ecial

fter.

irea.

Si

far

and heir hea. afon tre-

reak 10 9

Eye and Tooth. Their Eye to discover, their Tooth fned no fow rumors and flir up envy, and to moleft and mouble the Minds of men. These things therefore being thus disposed and prepared, he addresses himself to the Action of War, and fets upon Medufa as the flept; for a wife Captain will ever affault his Enemy, when he is unprepared and most secure; and then is there good use of Pallas her Glass: For most men, before it ome to the push, can acutely pry into and discern their Enemies estate; but the best use of this Glass is in the very point of danger, that the manner of it may be 6 considered, as that the terror may not discourage, which is fignified by that looking into this Glass with the face turned from Medufa.

The Monster's Head being cut off, there follow two effects. The first was, the procreation and raising of Perafus, by which may be evidently understood Fame, that (flying thorough the World) proclaims Victory. The fecond is the bearing of Medula's Head in his Shield; to which there is no kind of defence for excliency comparable; for the one famous and memorable at prosperously effected and brought to pass, doth refrain the Motions and Infolencies of Enemies, and makes Envy her felf filent and amazed.

ENDYMION, or a Favourite.

IT is faid, that Luna was in love with the Shepherd Endymion, and in a strange and unwonted manner and L can bewrayed her affection: For he lying in a Cave fra-e to med by Nature under the Mountain Latmus, she of-ning miles descended from her Sphere to enjoy his comame only as he flept; and after she had kissed him, ascend-the up again. Yet notwithstanding this his idleness, their and sleepy security, did not any way impair his Estate by Fortune; for Luna brought it so to pass, that he alone alone (of all the rest of the Shepherds) had his Flock in best plight, and most fruitful.

This Fable may have reference to the nature and dispositions of Princes; for they being full of doubt, and prone to jealousie, do not easily acquaint Men of prying and curious Eyes, and as it were of vigilant and wakeful dispositions, with the secret humours and manners of their life; but fuch rather as are of quie and observant Natures, suffering them to do what they lift without further scanting, making as if they were ignorant, and perceiving nothing but of a stupid depolition, and possest with sleep, yielding unto them simple obedience, rather than flie complements; For it pleafeth Princes now and then to descend from their Thrones or Majesty (like Luna from the Superior Orb) and laying afide their Robes of Dignity (which a ways to be cumbred with, would feem a kind of buthen) familiarly to converse with Men of this condition, which they think may be done without danger; a quality chiefly noted in Tiberius Cafar, who (of all others) was a Prince most severe; yet such only were gracious in his favour, as being well acquainted with his disposition, did yet constantly dissemble, as if they knew nothing. This was the Custom also of Lewis the Eleventh, King of France, a cautious and wily Prince.

Neither is it without elegancy, that the cause of Edymion is mentioned in the Fable, because that it is a thing usual with such as are the Favourites of Prince, to have certain pleasant retiring places, whither to invite them for recreation both of Body and Mind and that without hurt or prejudice to their Fortunes also. And indeed these kind of Favourites are Mea commonly well to pass; for Princes, although peradventure they promote them not ever to Places of Honour, yet do they advance them sufficiently by their favour and counterrance. Neither do they affect them thus, only to serve their own turn; but are wont to inrich

Floor mich them now and then with great Dignities, and Rounties.

The Sifter of the GIANTS, or Fame.

e and oubs.

en of gilant

their Orb)

h albur-

condan-

who fuch

10 rich

T is a Poetical Relation, that the Giants begotten of the Earth, made War upon Jupiter, and the other Gods; and by the force of Lightning, they were refifted and overthrown. Whereat the Earth them brought forth Fame, the vounges Sister of the For dren brought forth Fame, the youngest Sister of the Illam terra parens ira irritata Deorum, Extremam (ut prohibent) Cao Enceladoque sororem Progenuit - Provok'd by wrathful Gods, the Mother Earth Gives Fame, the Giants youngest Sister, Birth.

ain-The meaning of the Fable feems to be thus: By the ible, of Earth, is fignified the Nature of the Vulgar, always and swoln and malignant, and still broaching new scandals against Superiors, and having gotten fit opportunity this up Rebels and Seditious Persons, that with impi-Enis a courage do molest Princes, and endeavour to subvert their Estates; but being supprest, the same natuindicated in the superior of the People still leaning to the viler fort, (being impatient of Peace and Tranquility,) foread Rumours, raise malicious Slanders, repining Whisperings, infamous Libels, and others of that kind, to the detraction of them that are in Authority: So as Rebellious Actions, and Seditious Reports, differ anothing in kind and Blood, but as it were in Sex oniner by; the one fort being Masculine, and the other Feminine:

ACT ÆON.

in the

ACT EON and PENTHEUS, or a Curi-

The curiofity of Men, in prying into secrets, and covering with an undiscreet defire to attain the knowledge of things forbidden, is set forth by the Ancients in two other Examples: The one of Act con, the other of Pentheus.

Allicon having unawares, and as it were by chang beheld Diana naked, was turned into a Stag, and devoured by his own Dogs.

And Pentheus climbing up into a Tree, with a define to be a spectator of the hidden sacrifices of Bacebus, was strucken with such a kind of frensie, as that whatsever he lookt upon, he thought it always double, supposing (among other things) he saw two Suns, and two Thebes; infomuch that running towards Thebes, spying another Thebes, instantly turned back again, and so kept still running forward and backward with perpenual unrest.

Eumenidum weluti demens vidit agmina Pentleut, Et Solem geminum, duplices se ostendere Thebas.

Pentheus amaz'd, doth troops of furies spie; And Sun, and Thebes seem double to his Eye.

The first of the Fables pertains to the secrets of Princes, the second to Divine Mysteries. For those that are near about Princes, and come to the knowledge of more secrets than they would have them, do certainly incur great hatred. And therefore, (suspecting that they are shot at, and opportunities watcht for their overthrow,) do lead their lives like Stags, searful and full of suspicion. And it happens oftentimes that ther Servants, and those of their Houshold, (to infinuare uri-

Anci-

he o nano

d de

define , was refor

fup-

bebes,

and erpe-

chat

e of inly

that

r 0-

and heir

nto

into the Prince's favour) do accuse them to their destruction; for against whomsoever the Princes displeasure is known, look how many servants that Man hath, and you shall find them for the most part so many Traytors unto him, that his end may prove to be like Attern's.

The other is the mifery of Pentheus: For that by the height of Knowledge and Nature in Philosophy, having climbed, as it were, into a Tree, do with rash attempts (unmindful of their frailty) pry into the fecrets of Divine Mysteries, and are justly plagued with perpetual inconftancy, and with wavering and perplexed conceits: For feeing the light of Nature is one thing, and of Grace another; it happens so to them sif they faw two Suns. And feeing the Actions of Life, and degrees of the Will to depend on the Understanding, it follows that they doubt, are inconstant no less in Will than in Opinion; and so in like manner they may be faid to fee two Thebes: For by Theby (feeing there was the habitation and refuge of Pentheus) is meant the end of Actions. Hence it comes to pass that they know not whither they go, but as difracted and unresolved in the scope of their intentions. are in all things carried about with fudden Passions of the Mind.

ORPHEUS, or Philosophy.

The tale of Orpheus, though common, had never the fortune to be fitly applied in every point. It may feem to represent the Image of Philosophy: For the Person of Orpheus (a Man admirable and divine, and so excellently skilled in all kind of harmony, that with his sweet ravishing Musick he did as it were charm and allure all things to follow him) may carry a singular description of Philosophy: For the labours of Orpheus do to far exceed the labours of Herein les in dignity and efficacy; as the Works of Wildom excel the Works of Fortitude. Worl 2001

Orpheus for the love he bare to his Wife, fnarcht, as it were, from him by untimely Death, resolved to go down to Hell with his Harp, to try if he might obtain her of the infernal power. Neither were his hopes frustrated: For having appealed them with the melodious found of his voice and touch, prevailed at length fo far, as that they granted him leave to take her away with him; but on this condition, that the should follow him, and he not to look back upon her. till he came to the light of the upper World; which he (imparient of, out of love and care, and thinking that he was in a manner past all danger) nevertheless violated, infomuch that the Covenant is broken; and she forthwith tumbles back again headlong into Hell. Orpheus falling into a deep melancholy, became a contemner of Women kind, and bequeathed himfelf, to a folitary life in the Defarts; where, by the same melody of his voice and Harp, he first drew all manner of wild Beafts unto him, (who forgetful of their favage fierceness, and casting off the precipitate provecations of lust and fury, not caring to fatiate their yoracity by hunting after prey) as at a Theatre in fawning and reconciled amity one towards another, flanding all at the gaze about him, and attentively lend their Ears to his Musick. Neither is this all; for fo great was the power and alluding force of this harmony, that he drew the Woods, and moved the very Stones to come and place themselves in an orderly and decent fashion about him. These things succeeding happily, and with great admiration for a time; at length certain Thracian Women (possest with the spirit of Bacchus,) made such a horrid and strange noise with their Corners, that the found of Orpheus's Harp could no more be heard, infomuch as that harmony, which was the hond of that Order and Society being " diffolved, Affolved, all diforder began again; and the Beafts (returning to their wonted Nature) purfued one another unto Death as before: Neither did the Trees or stones remain any longer in their places: And Orphens himself was by these Female suries torn in pieces, and stattered all over the Desart. For whose cruel Death the River Helicon (sacred to the Muses) in horrible indignation, hid his Head under ground, and raised it again in another place.

The meaning of this Fable feems to be thus: Orpher's Musick is of two forts, the one appealing the Inlemal Powers, the other attracting Beasts and Trees, The first may be fitly applied to Natural Philosophy, the second to Moral or Civil Discipline.

eren

lom,

cht,

d to ight

his.

the

at akes

the

ner,

ich

es

nd

ell.

1

2

10-er a-

on

r,

3

The most noble work of Natural Philosophy, is the Restitution and Renovation of things corruptible; the other (as a leffer degree of it) the Prefervation of Bodies in their Estates, detaining them from dissolution and putrefaction; and if this gift may be in Mortals, certainly it can be done by no other means than by the due and exquisite temper of Nature, as by the melody and delicate touch of an Instrument. But seeing it is of all things most difficult, it is seldom or never attained unto; and in all likelihood for no other reason, more than through curious diligence and untimely impatience. And therefore Philosophy hardly able to produce fo excellent an effect in a pensive humour, (and that without cause) busies her self about Humane Objects, and by Perfuation and Eloquence, infinuating the love of Vertue, Equity, and Concord in the minds of Men; draws multitudes of People to a Society, makes them subjects to Laws, obedient to Government, and forgetful of their unbridled Affections, whil it they give ear to Precepts, and fubmit themselves to Discipline; whence follows the building of Houses, erecting of Towns, planting of Fields and Orchards, with Trees and the like, infomuch that it would not be amifs to fay, That even thereby Stones and Woods

He

は出る行物は

10

h

m

were called together and settled in order. And after serious trial made and frustrated about the restoring of a body mortal; this care of Civil affairs follows in his due place: because by a plain demonstration of the unevitable necessity of death, Mens minds are moved to seek Eternity by the same and glory of their Merits. It is also wisely said in the Fable, that Orpheus was averse from the love of Women and Marriage, because the delights of Wedlock and the love of Children do for the most part hinder Men from enterprising great and noble designs for the publick good, holding Posterity a sufficient step to Immortality without Actions.

Besides even the very works of Wisdom (although amongst all Humane things they do most excel) do ne vertheless meet with their periods. For it happens that (after Kingdoms and Commonwealths have flourished for a time) even Tumults, and Seditions, and Wars arife; in the mid'ft of which hurly-burlies, first Laws are filent. Men return to the pravity of their Natures; Fields and Towns are wasted and depopulated; and then (if their fury continue) Learning and Philosophy must needs be dif-membred; so that a few Fragments only, and in some places will be found like the scattered Boards of Shipwrack, fo as a barbarous Age must follow; and the Streams of Hellicon being hid under the Earth, (untill the Viciffitude of things passing,) they break out again, and appear in some other remote Nation, though not perhaps in the same Climate.

COELUM, or Beginnings.

W E have it from the Poets by Tradition, that Coclum was the Ancientest of the Gods, and that his Members of Generation were cut off by his Son Saturn Saturn had many Children, but devoured them as foon as they were born; Jupiter only escapt, who being come ome to Man's effate, thrust Saturn his Father into Hell, and so usurped the Kingdom. Moreover he pared off his Father's Genitals with the same Faulchion that Saturn distinction Calum, and cast them into the Sea; from whence came Venus. Not long after this, (Jupiter being scarce setled and confirmed in this Kingdom) was invaded by two memorable Wars. The sirft of the Titans, in the suppressing of which Sol (who alone of all the Titans Favouring Jupiter's side) took exceeding great pains. The second was of the Giants, whom Jupiter himself destroyed with Thunderbolts: and so all Wars being ended, he reigned secure.

This Fable feems enigmatically to shew from whence all things took their beginning, not much differing from that Opinion of Philosophers, which Democritus alterwards laboured to maintain, attributing Eternity to the first Matter, and not to the World. In which he comes somewhat near the truth of Divine Writ, telling us of a huge deformed Mass, before the beginning of the fix days Work.

fter g of his

ine-

erfe de-

110-

y 2

nethat hed aiws res;

ind

hy

ents

tte-

uft

the

ney Na-

01-iis

ח.

18

nc

The meaning of the Fable is this: By Calum may be understood that vast concavity, or vaulted compass that comprehends all Matter: and by Saturn may be meant the matter it felf, which takes from his Parent all power of generating; for the universality or whole Bulk of Matter always remains the same, neither increasing or diminishing in respect of the quality of its Nature: But by the Divers agitations and motions of it, were first produced imperfect, and ill agreeing compolitions of things, making as it were certain Worlds for Proofs or Eslays, and so in process of time a perfeet Fabrick or Structure was framed, which should fill retain and keep his form. And therefore the Government of the first Age was shadowed by the Kingdom of Saturn, who for the frequent dissolutions and more continuances of things was aptly feigned to devour his Children. The fucceeding Government was decyphered by the Reign of Jupiter, who confined those those continual Mutations unto Tartarus, a place fig. nifying Perturbation. This place feems to be all the middle place between the lower fuperficies of Heaven and the Centre of the Earth: in which all perturbate ons, and fragility, and mortality or corruption and frequent: During the former Generation of things in the time of Saturn's Reign, Venus was not born: for 6 long as in the universality of Marter, Discord was beter and more prevalent than Concord, it was necessary that there should be total dissolution or mutation, and that in the whole Fabrick. And by this kind of Ge neration were Creatures produced before Saturn was deprived of his Genitals. When this ceafed, that other which wrought by Venus, immediately came in, confi fling in fetled and prevalent concord of things, fo that Mutation should be only in respect of the parts, the univerfal Fabrick remaining whole and inviolate.

no

of

B

an ci

in

Saturn, they say, was deposed and cast down inn Hell, but not destroyed and utterly extinguisht, be cause there was an Opinion that the World should relapse into the old Chaos and interregnum again, which

Lucretius prayed might not happen in his time:

Quod procul à nobis flectat fortuna gubernans: Et ratio potius quam res persuadeat ipsa.

Of guiding Providence be gracious, That this Dooms-day be far remov d from us; And grant, that by us it may be expected, Rather than on us, in our times effected.

For afterwards the World should subsist by its own quantity and power. Yet from the beginning there was no rest: for in the Celestial Regions there suff solowed notable Mutations, which by the power of the Sun (predominating over superiour Bodies) were so quieted, that the state of the World should be conserved: and afterwards (in inferior Bodies) by the suppressions

The Wisdom of the Ancients.

tha

Vcn:

bath

are gs in or fo

ber-

flary and Gewas

onfi

chat

uni-

into

be d re

hich

own

here

the e fo

fup

Hing

47 winds, and general Earthquakes, a more peaceable durable Agreement and Tranquility of things followed. But of this Fable it may convertibly be faid, That the Fable contains Philosophy, and Philosophy again the Fable: For we know by Faith, that all these things are nothing else but the long since ceasing and failing Orades of Sense, seeing that both the Matter and Fabrick of the World are most truly referred to a Creator.

PROTEUS, or Matter.

THE Poets fay that Proteus was Neptune's Herds-man. a grave Sire, and so excellent a Prophet, that he might well be termed thrice excellent: for he knew not only things to come, but even things past as well as present; so that besides his skill in Divination, he was the Messenger and Interpreter of all Antiquities and hidden Mysteries. The place of his abode was a huge vaff Cave, where his Cuftom was every day at noon to count his Flock of Sea-calves, and then to go to fleep. Moreover he that defired his advice in any thing, could by no other means obtain it, but by catching him in Manacles, and holding him fast therewith; who nevertheless to be at liberty would turn himself into all manner of Forms and Wonders of Nature; fometimes into Fire, fometimes into Water, fometimes into the hape of Beafts, and the like; till at length he were reflored to his own Form again.

This Fable may feem to unfold the secrets of Nature and the properties of Matter. For under the Person of Proteus, the first Matter (which next to God is the Ancientest thing) may be represented: For Matter dwells in the concavity of Heaven, as in a Cave.

He is Neptune's bond-man, because the Operations and Dispensations of Matter are chiefly exercised in liquid Podies.

His Flock or Flord seems to be nothing but the ordinary Species of sensible Creatures, Plants and Metals in which Matter seems to diffuse and as it were spends self; so that after the forming and perfecting of the Kinds, (having ended is it were her Task,) she seem to sleep and take her rest, not attempting the composition of any more Species. And this may be de Moral of Protess his counting of his Flock, and of his fleeping.

Now this is faid to be done, not in the morning nor in the evening, but at noon; to wit, at fuch time as is most fit and convenient for the perfecting and bringing forth of Species out of Matter, duly prepared and predifposed, and in the middle, as it were be tween their beginning and declinations, which we know fufficiently (out of the Holy History) to be done about the time of the Creation: for then by the power of that Divine Word (Producat.) Matter 2 the Creator's command did congregate it felf (notby ambages or turnings, but inflantly) to the production of its work into an Act and Constitution of Species And thus far have we the Narration of Proteus, (fre. and unreftrained,) together with his Flock complex: for the universality of things, with their ordinary Structures and Compositions of Species, bears the face of matter, not limited and conftrained, and of the Flock also of material beings. Nevertheless if any expert Minister of Nature, shall encounter Matter by main force, vexing and urging her with intent and purpose to reduce her to nothing; she contrariwise (feeing annihilation and absolute destruction cannot be effected by the Omnipotency of God) being thus caught in the ftraits of necessity, doth change and turn her felf into divers strange Forms and Shapes of things, fo that at length (by fetching a circuit as it were) she comes to a period, and (if the force comtinue) betakes her felf to her former being. The resfon of which constraint or binding, will be more fa-

th

ne

10 pc

10 ar

21 ba

m

3 8 6

The Wisdom of the Ancients.

ale and expedite, if matter be laid hold on by Mana-des, that is, Extremities.

ne or letak.

endi

the feem

come the

of hi

ning,

and pared

we be by l

ter z ot by

Ction

free.

leat:

nary

face

the

any

by

and wife

not thus

and

s of s it

no

res-

facik Now whereas it is feigned that Protein was a Prophet, well skilled in three differences of Times, it hath an excellent Agreement with the Nature of Matter: for it is necessary that he that will know the Properties and Proceedings of Matter, should comprehend in his Understanding the sum of all things, which have been, which are, or which shall be, although no Knowledge can extend so far as to singular, and individual Beings.

MEMNON, or a Youth too forward.

The Poets fay, that Memon was the Son of Aurora, who (adorned with beautiful Armour, and animated with popular Applause,) came to the Trojan War; where (in rash Boldness, hasting unto, and thirsting after Glory,) he enters into single Combat with Achilles, the valiantest of all the Gracians, by whose powerful hand he was there slain. But Jupiter pitying his destruction, sent Birds to modulate certain lamentable, and doleful Notes at the Solemnization of his Funeral Obsequies. Whose Statue also (the Sun restecting on it with his Morning Beams) did usually, as is reported send forth a mournful Sound.

This Fable may be applied to the unfortunate deffinies of hopeful young Men, who like the Sons of Antora, (puffed up with the glittering shew of vanity, and oftentation,) attempt actions above their strength, and provoke, and press the most valiant Heroes to combate with them; so that (meeting with their overmatch) they are vanquished, and destroyed; whose untimely Death is oft accompanied with much pity and commisseration. For among all the Disasters that can happen to Mortals, there is none so lamentable, and so powerful to move compassion, as the flower of Vertue cropt with too sudden a Mischance. Neither hath it been often known that Men in their green year become so loathsome, and odious, as that at their Deaths either Sorrow is stinted, or Commiscration moderated; but that Lamentation and Mourning do not only flutter about their Obsequies, like those Funeral Birds; but this pitiful Commiscration doth continue for a long space, and specially by Occasions, and new Motions, and beginning of great Matters, as it were by the Morning-Rays of the Sun, their Passions and Desires are renewed.

TITHONUS, or Satiety.

T is elegantly feigned, that Tithonus was the Parmour of Aurora, who (defirous to enjoy his Company) petitioned Jupiter that he might never die; but, (through Womanish oversight) forgetting to infert this clause in her Petition, that he might not withal grow old, and feeble; it followed that he was only freed from the condition of Mortality; but for old Age, that came upon him in a marvellous, and milerable fashion, agreeable to the state of those who cannot die, yet every day grow weaker and weaker with Age: Insomuch that Jupiter in commisseration of that his Misery,) did at length metamorphose him into a Grass-hopper.

This Fable feems to be an ingenious Character, or Description of Pleasure, which in the beginning, and as it were, in the morning, seems to be pleasant and delightful, that Men desire they might enjoy, and monopolize it for ever unto themselves, unmindful of that Satiety, and Loathing, which (like old age,) will come upon them before they be aware. And so at last, (when the use of Pleasure leaves Men, the Desire and Affection not yet yielding unto Death,) it comes to pass that Men please themselves only by talking, and commemorating those things which brought pleasure unto them in the flower of their Age, which may be observed in libidinous Persons, and also in Men of Military Professions; the one delighting in beastly Talk, the other boasting of their valorous Deeds, like Grass-hoppers, whose Vigour consists only in their Voice.

and

JUNO'S SUITOR, or Baseness.

The Poets say, that Jupiter, to enjoy his lustiful Delights, took upon him the shape of sundry Creatures, as of a Bull, of an Eagle, of a Swan, and of a Golden Shower; but being a Suitor to Juno, he came in a Form most ignoble and base, an Object full of contempt and scorn, resembling indeed a miserable Cuckow, weather beaten with Rain and Tempest, numb d, quaking, and half dead with Cold.

er of ither

years

their

mo-

not neral

inue

new were ara-

om-

die;

in-ith-

on-old

nife

can-vith

that

0 2

or and

and

and

of

will fire

This Fable is wife, and feems to be taken out of the Bowels of Morality; the fense of it being this, That Men boast not too much of themselves, thinking by oftentation of their own worth, to infinuate themselves into estimation and favour with Men. The success of such intentions being for the most part measured by the nature and disposition of those to whom Men sue for Grace; who, if of themselves they be endowed with no gifts and Ornaments of Nature, but are only of haughty and malignant Spirits, (intimated by the Person of Juno,) then are Suitors to know that it is good policy to omit all kind of appearance that may any way shew their own least Praise or Worth; and that they much deceive themselves in taking any other course. Neither is it enough to shew deformity in Obsequiousness, unless they also appear even abject and base in their very Persons.

CUPID, or an Atom.

THat which the Poets fay of Cupid, or Love, cannot properly be attributed to one and the felf fame Person; and yet the difference is such, that, (by rejecting the Confusion of Persons,) the Similitude may be received.

They fay, that Love is the ancientest of all the Gods, and of all things elfe except Chaos, which they hold to be a Contemporary with it. Now as touching Chaos, that by the Ancients was never dignified with Divine Honour, or with the Title of the God. And as for Love, they absolutely bring him in without a Father; only fome are of opinion, that he came of an Egg that was laid by Nox, and that on Chaos he begat the God, and all things elfe. There are four things attributed to him, perpetual Infancy, Blindness, Nakedness, and an Archery. There was also another Love, which was the youngest of the Gods, and he, they fay, was the Son of Venus. On this also they bestow the Attributes of the elder Love, as in some fort we'll apply unto him.

This Fable tends, and looks to the Cradle of Nature, Love feeming to be the appetite or defire of the first Matter, or (to speak more plain) the natural motion of the Atom, which is that Ancient and only Power that Forms and Fashions all things out of Matter, of which there is no Parent, that is to fay, no Cause, seeing every Cause is as a Parent to its effect. Of this power or virtue there can be no Caufe in Nature (as for God, we always except him,) for nothing was before it, and therefore no efficient Cause of it. Neither was there any thing better known to Nature, and therefore neither

th

Sove

a

b

C

1

.

ther Genus nor Form. Wherefore whatfoever it is, pofitive it is, and but inexpressible. Moreover, if the manner and proceeding of it were to be conceived, yet could it not be by any Caufe, feeing that (next unto God,) it is the Caufe of Caufes, it felf only without any Caufe. And perchance there is no likelihood that the manner of it may be contained or comprehended within the narrow compass of humane fearch. Not without reason therefore it is seign d to come of an Egg which was laid by Nox. Certainly the Divine Philosopher grants fo much.

bjeat

canfelf

(by may ods,

hold

baos.

vine

for

er;

Egg

the

ed-ove, ay, the

ply

irft

of

hat

ich

or we

nd

re

ei-

er

Eccl. 3. 11. Cuncta fecit tempestatibus suis pulchra, & mundum tradidit disputationibus ecrum, ita tamen ut non inveniat bomo opus, quod operatus est Deus, principio ad finem. That is, he hath made every thing beautiful in their Seasons, also he hath set the World in their Meditarions; yet Man cannot find the Work that God hath wrought, from the beginning even to the end: For the principal Law of Nature, or Power of this Defire, created (by God,) in these parcels of things, for concurring and meeting together, (from whose Repetitions and Multiplications all Variety of Creatures proceeded, and were composed,) may dazle the Eyes of Men's Understandings, and comprehended it can hardly be. The Greek Philosophers are observed to be very acute and diligent in fearching out the material Principles of things; but in the beginnings of motion (wherein confifts all the efficacy of operation,) they are negligent and weak, and in this that we handle, they feem to be altogether blind, and stammering; for the Opinion of the Peripatericks concerning the appetite of Matter caused by privation, is in a manner nothing else but Words, which rather found, than fignifie any Reality. And those that refer it unto God, do very well; but then they leap up, they afcend not by degrees; for doubtless there is one chief Law subordinate to God, in which all natural things concur and meet, the fame that in the fore-cited Scripture is demonstrated in these Words, Opus quod operatus est Deus à principio usque ad f. nem; the Work that God hath wrought from the beginning even to the end. But Democritus, which entred more deeply into the confideration of this point, after he had conceived an Atom, with fome finall dimension and form, he attributed unto it one only defire, or first motion, simply, or absolutely, and another comparatively, or in respect; for he thought that all things did properly tend to the Centre of the World. whereof those Bodies which were more material, defcend with fwifter motion, and those that had less Matter, did, on the contrary, tend upward. But this Meditation was very shallow, containing less than was expedient; for neither the turning of the Celestial Bodies in a round, nor shutting and opening of things, may feem to be reduced or applied to this beginning. And as for that opinion of Epicurus, concerning the casual declination and agitation of the Atom, it is but a mere Toy, and a plain evidence, that he was ignorant of that Point. It is therefore more apparent (than we could wish,) that this Cupid, or Love, remains as yet clouded under the shades of Night. Now as concerning his Attributes; He is elegantly described with perpetual Infancy, or Childhood; because compound Bodies they feem greater, and more ftricken in years: Whereas the first Seeds of things, or Atoms, they are little, and diminute, and also in their Infancy.

He is also well feigned to be naked, because all compound Bodies, to a Man rightly judging, seem to be apparelled and cloathed, and nothing to be properly naked but the first Particles of things.

Concerning his Blindness, the Allegory is full of Wisdom; for this Love, or Desire (whatsoever it be) feems to have but little Providence, as directing his pace and motion by that which it perceives nearest; not unlike blind men that go by feeling: More admirable then, must that chief divine Providence, be, which (from things empty and destitute of Providence, and

6 ti fi

I

0 ad fi

ie be-

h en-

oint,

Il di-

y de-

ano-

that

orld,

de-

Mat-

Me-

s ex-

odies

may

And

fual

nere

that bluc

ou-

ing

ual

ney

di-

mbe

ly

of-

is is

h

d

as it were, b.ind,) by a constant and fatal Law, produceth so excellent an Order and Beauty of Things.

The last Thing which is attributed to Love, is Archery; by which is meant, that his Virtue is such, as that it works upon a distant Object; because that whatfoever operates as a off, seems to shoot, as it were, an Arrow. Wherefore whosoever holds the Being both of Atoms and Vacuity, must needs infer, that the Virtue of the Atom reacheth to a distant Object; for if it were not so, there could be no motion at all, by reason of the interposition of Vacuity; but all things would stand stone still, and remain immoveable.

Now as touching that other Cupid or Love, he may well be termed the youngest of the Gods, because he could have no being before the constitution of Species. And in his description the Allegory may be applied and traduced to manners: Nevertheless he holds some kind of conformity with the Elder; for Venus doth generally stir up a desire of Conjunction and Procreation, and Cupid her Son doth apply this desire to some individual Nature; so that the general disposition comes from Venus, the more exact sympathy from Cupid: the one derived from Causes more near, the other from Beginnings more remote and satal, and as it were from the elder Cupid, of whom every exquisite sympathy doth depend.

DIOMEDES, or Zeal.

DIOMEDES flourishing with great Fame and Glory in the Trojan Wars, and in high Favour with Pallas, was by her inftigated (being indeed forwarder than he should have been) not to sorbear Venus a jot, if he encountered with her in Fight; which very boldly he performed, wounding her in the right Arm. This presumptuous Fact he carried clear for a R 4 while;

while, and being honoured and renowned for his maby heroick Deeds, at last returned into his own Country, where finding himselfhard bestead with domestick Troubles, fled into Italy, betaking himfelf to the Protection of Foreigners where in the beginning he was fortunate and royally entertained by King Daunus with fumptuous Gifts, raising many Statues in honour of him throughouthis Dominions. But upon the very first Calamity that hapned unto this Nation whereunto he was fled for Succour, King Daunus enters into a conceit with himself that he had entertained a wicked Guest into his Family, and a Man odious to the Goddefs, and an Impugner of their Divinity, that had dared, with his Sword, to affault and wound that Goddefs, who, in their Religion, they held it Sacrilege so much as to touch. Therefore, that he might expiate his Countrey's Guilt, (nothing respecting the Duties of Hospitality, when the Bonds of Religion tied him with a more reverend regard) fuddenly flew Diemedes, commanding withal that his Trophies and Statues should be abolished and destroyed. Neither was it fafe to lament this miserable Deltiny; but even his Companions in Arms, whilft they mourned at the Funeral of their Captain, and filled all the places with Plaints and Lamentations, were fuddenly metamorphofed into Birds like unto Swans, who, when their Death approacheth, fing melodious and mournful Hymns.

This Fable hath a most rare and singular Subject: For in any of the Poetical Records, wherein the Heroes are mentioned, we find not that any one of them, besides Diomedes, did ever with his Sword offer Violence to any of the Deiries. And indeed, the Fable scems in him to represent the nature and fortune of Man, who of himself, doth propound, and make this as the end of all his Actions, to worship some Divine Power, or to follow some Sect of Religion, though never so van and superstitious, and with Force and Arms to defend

the

th

lip

116 is A

W

6

e

0

2 0

3.04

the fame: For although those bloody Quarrels for Religion were unknown to Ancients, (the Heathen Gods not having so much as a touch of that Jealousie, which is an Attribute of the true God,) yet the Wisdom of the Antient Times feems to be fo copious and full, as that, what was not known by Experience, was yet comprehended by Meditations and Fictions. They then that endeavour to reform and convince any Sect of Religion, (though vain, corrupt, and infamous, shadowed by the Person of Venus,) not by the force of Argument and Doctrine, and Holiness of Life, and by the weight of Examples and Authority, but labour to extirpate and root it out by Fire and Sword, and Tortures, are encouraged, it may be, thereunto by Pallas; that is, by the Acrity of Prudence, and Severity of Judgment, by whose Vigour and Efficacy, they see into the Falsity and Vanity of these Errors. And by this their hatred of Pravity, and good zeal to Religion, they purchase to themselves great Glory, and by the Vulgar (to whom nothing moderate can be grateful) are effeemed and honoured as the only Supporters of Truth and Religion, when others feem to be luke-warm and full of Yet this Glory and Happiness doth seldom endure to the end, feeing every violent Prosperity, if it prevent not alteration by an untimely Death grows to be unprosperous at last: For if it happen that by a change of Government, this banished and depressed Sect get ftrength, and fo bear up again, then thefe zealous Men, fo fierce in opposition before, are condemned, their very Names are hateful, and all their Glory ends in Obloquy.

In that Diomedes is faid to be murthered by his Hoft, it gives us to understand that the difference of Religion breeds Deceit and Treachery, even among nearest Acquaintance.

oun-

Pro-

Was

With

ir of

o he con-

God-da-

lege

xpi-

Dutied

Dio-Sta-

was his

the

rith

or-eir

ful

a:

oes

ice

im

of

of

to

in

id

10

Now in that Lamentation and Mourning was not tolerated but punished; it puts us in mind, that let there be never so nesarious an Act done, yet there is fome

some place left for Commiseration and Pity, that even those that hate Offences, should yet in Humanity commiserate Offenders, and Pity their distress, it being the Extremity of Evil when Mercy is not suffered to have commerce with Misery. Yea, even in the cause as well of Religion as Impiery, many Men may be noted and observed to have been compassionate. But on the contrary the complaints and moans of Diomedes's Followers, that is, of Men of the same Sea and Opinion, are wont to be shrill and loud, like Swans or the Birds of Diomedes. In whom also that part of the Allegory is excellent to fignifie that the last Words of those that suffer Death for Religion, like the Songs of dying Swans, do wonderfully work upon the Minds of Men, and strike and remain a long time in their Senses and Memories.

té

DÆDALUS, or Mechanick.

TEchanical Wisdom and Industry, and in it un-M lawful Science perverted to wrong ends, is shadowed by the Ancients under the Person of Dædalus, a Man ingenious, but execrable. This Dædalus (for murthering his fellow-fervant that emulated him) being banished, was kindly entertained (during his Exile) in many Cities and Princes Courts: For indeed he was the Raifer and Builder of many goodly Structures, as well in honour of the Gods, as the Beauty and Magnificence of Cities, and other publick places, but for his Works of Mischief he is most notorious. It is he that framed the Engine which Pasiphae used to fatisfie her Lust in company with a Bull; so that by his wretched Industry, and pernicious Device, that Monster Minotaur (the destruction of fo many hopeful Youths) took his accurred and infamous beginning, and studying to cover and increase one Mifchief chief with another; for the security and preservation of this Monster he invented and built a Labyrinth, a Work for intent and use most nesarious and wicked, for Skill and Workmanship samous and excellent. Asterwards, that he might not be noted only for Works of Mischief, but be sought after as well for Remedies, as for Instruments of Destruction, he was the Author of that ingenious device concerning the Clew of Thread, by which the Labyrinth was made passable without any let. This Dædalus was persecuted by Minos with great Severity, Diligence, and Inquiry, but he always found the means to avoid and escape his Tyranny. Lastly, he taught his Son Icarus to sly; but the Novice, in Ostentation of this Art, soaring too high, fell into the Sea and was drowned.

The Parable feems to be thus: In the beginning of it may be noted that kind of Envy or Emulation that lodgeth, and wonderfully fways and domineers amongft excellent Artificers, there being no kind of People more reciprocally tormented with bitter and deadly Hatred than they.

even

anity

t befered

1 the may mate.

f Di-

Sea

like that

t the like

c up-

long

un-

Tha-alus,

(for eing ile)

he

res,

and

but

It

ta

by

nat

-3c

inif-

ief

The Banishment also of Dedalus (a punishment inflicted on him against the Rules of Policy and Providence) is worth the noting: For Artificers have this Prerogative to find entertainment and welcome in all Countries, so that Exile to an excellent Workman can hardly be termed a punishment, whereas other Conditions and States of Life can scarce live out of their own Countrey. The admiration of Artificers is propagated and increased in foreign and strange Nations, seeing it is a natural and unbred disposition of Men to value their own Countrey-men (in respect of Mechanical Works) less than Strangers.

Concerning the use of Mechanical Arts, that which follows is plain. The Life of Man is much beholden to them, seeing many Things (conducing to the Orna nent of Religion, to the Grace of Civil Discipline, and to the beautifying of all Humane Kind) are extracted

tracted out of their Treasuries: And yet notwith. standing from the same Magazine or Store-house are produced Instruments both of Lust and Death; for to omit the Wiles of Bands, we will know how far exquifite Poyfons, Warlike Engines, and fuch like Mifchiefs (the effects of Mechanical Inventions) do exceed the Minotaur himself in Malignity and savage Cruelty.

Moreover that of the Labyrinth is an excellent Alle. gory, whereby is shadowed the nature of Mechanical Sciences; for all fuch handicraft Works as are more ingenious and accurate, may be compared to a Laby. rinth in respect of Subtilty and divers intricate Passages, and in other plain refemblances, which by the Eye of Judgment can hardly be guided and discerned, but only by the Line of Experience.

Ci

Neither is it impertinently added, that he which invented the intricate Nooks of the Labyrinth, did also thew the Commodity of the Clew: For Mechanical Arts are of ambiguous use, serving as well for hurt as for Remedy, and they have in a manner Power bothto loofe and bind themselves.

Unlawful Trades, and so by consequence, Arts themselves are often perfecuted by Minos, that is by Laws, which do condemn them, and prohibit Men to use Nevertheless they are hid and retained every where, finding lurking holes and places of Receipt, which was well observed by Tacitus of the Mathematicians and Figure-flingers of his time, in a thing not fo much unlike ; Genus Hominum quod in Civitate noftra semper & retinebitur & vetabitur. There is a kind of Men that will always abide in our City, though always forbidden. And yet notwithstanding unlawful and curious Arts of what kind foever, in tract of time, when they cannot perform what they promife, do fall from the good Opinion that was held of them, (no otherwise than learns fell down from the Skies,) they grow to be contemned and fcorned, and fo perish by too much Ostentation. And to fay the Truth, they vith.

are or to ex-

Mifceed ty.

Alle-

nical

nore

byaffa-

the ned,

in-alfo

ical

t as hto

em-

Ws,

use

ery

ipt,

ma-

not

Ara

of

al-

ful

of ife,

em, es,) peth,

ey

they are not fo happily strairened by the Reins of Law, as bewrayed by their own Vanity.

ERICTHONIUS, or Imposture.

The Poets Fable that Vulcan folicited Minerva for her Virginity, and impatient of denial, with an inflamed defire offered her violence, but in flruggling his Seed fell upon the Ground, whereof came Eriethonius, whose Body from the middle upward, was of a concely and apt proportion, but his Thighs and Legs like the tail of an Eel, small and deformed. To which Monstrosity he being conscious, became the first inventor of the use of Chariots, whereby that part of his Body which was well proportioned might be seen, and the other which was ugly and uncomely might be hid.

This strange and prodigious Fiction may feem to hew that Art which (for the great use it hath of Fire) is shadowed by Vulcan, although it labour by much friving with corporeal fubstances to force Nature, and to make her subject to it, (she being for her industrious Works rightly represented by Minerva;) yet feldom or never attains the end it aims at, but with much ado and great pains (wrestling as it were with her) comes short of its purpose, and produceth certain imperfect Births and lame Works, fair to the Eye, but weak and defective in use, which many Impostors (with much fubtilty and deceit) fet to view, and carry about, as it were in triumph, as may for the most part be noted in Chymical productions, and other Mechanical fubtilities and novelties, especially when (rather perfecuting their intent, than reclining their Ertors) they rather strive to overcome Nature by force, than fue for her Embracements by due obsequiousness and observance.

DEUCALION,

P

ol

fo

d

h

Y

f

h

al d

DEUCALION, or Restitution.

The Poets fay, that (the People of the Old World being destroyed by a general Deluge) Dencalmand Pyrrha were only left alive; who praying win fervent and zealous devotion, that they might know by what means to repair Mankind, had answer from an Oracle that they should obtain what they desired, if taking the Bones of their Mother they cast them be hind their Backs; which at first struck them win great amazement and despair, seeing (all things being desaced by the Flood) it would be an ended work to find their Mothers Sepulchre, but at length they understood that by Bones the Stones of the Earth (seeing the Earth was the Mother of all things) were signified by the Oracle.

This Fable seems to reveal a secret of Nature, and to correct an error familiar to Men's conceits: For through want of knowledge Men think that thing may take renovation and restauration from their patrefaction and dregs, no otherwise than the Phanis from the Ashes, which in no case can be admitted seeing such kind of Materials, when they have fulfills, their periods, are unapt for the beginnings of such things: We must therefore look back to more common Prince ples.

NEMESIS, or the Vicissitude of things.

TEMESIS is faid to be a Goddels venerable unto all, but to be feared of none but Potentates and Fortunes favourites. She is thought to be the Daughter Oceanus and Nox. She is pour trained with Wing on her Shoulders, and on her Head a Coroner, bear ing in her Right Hand a Javelin of Ash, and in her left a Pitcher with the similitudes of Ethiopians engraven on it; and lastly, she is described sitting on an Hart.

The Parable may be thus unfolded. Her name Nemess doth plainly signific Revenge or Retribution, her office and administration being (like a Tribune of the People) to hinder the conftant and perpetual felicity of happy Men, and to interpose her word, veto, I forbid the continuance of it; that is, not only to dastife Infolency, but to intermix prosperity (though harmless and in a mean) with the Viciffitudes of adversity, as if it were a custom, that no mortal Man hould be admitted to the Table of the Gods but for fort. Truly when I read that Chapter, wherein Cai-Blinius hath collected his misfortunes and mileries of Augustus Casar, whom of all Men I thought the most happy, who had also a kind of Art to use and enjoy his Fortune, and in whose mind might be noted neither pride, nor lightness, nor niceness, nor disorder, nor melancholy, (as that he had appointed a time to die of his own accord,) I then deemed this Goddess to be great and powerful, to whose Altar so worthy a Sacrifice as this was drawn.

The Parents of this Goddess were Oceanus and Nox, that is, the Vicissitude of things and Divine Judgment obscure and secret: For the alteration of things are apply represented by the Sea, in respect of the continual Ebbing and Flowing of it, and hidden Providence is well set forth by the Night: For even the Nocturnal Nemesis (seeing Humane judgment differs much from Divine) was seriously observed by the Heathen.

Vorld

ecalim

know

from

fired

n be with

s be adles

ength

Earth

Were

, and

For

hing

r pu

boniz

itted

Ifille,

ing:

ind

754 unto

and ugh-

ing

ear-

ing

Virgil Ancid. lib. 2.
—Cadit & Rippeus justissimus umus, Qui fuit ex Teucris, & servantissimus æqui.
Dis aliter visum—

64 The Wifdom of the Ancients.

That day, by Greekish force, was Ripheus slain So just and strict observer of the Law, As Troy within her Walls, did not contain A better Man: Yet God then good it saw.

She is described with Wings, because the changes of things are so sudden, as that they are seen before sorteen: For in the Records of all Ages, we find it for the most part true, that great Potentates, and wise Men, have perished by those missortunes which they most contemned; as may be observed in Marcus Cicen, who being admonished by Decius Brutus of Octavius Casar's hypocritical friendship and hollow-heartedness towards him, returns this answer, Te autem, mi Brute, sicut debeo, amo, quod istud quicquid est nugarum me scine voluisti: I must ever acknowledge my self (Dear Brutus) beholden to thee, in love, for that thou hast been so careful to acquaint me with that which I esteem but a a needless triffe to be doubted.

Nemesis is also adorned with a Coronet, to shew the envious and malignant disposition of the vulgar, for when Fortunes Favourites and great Potentates come to ruine, then do the common People rejoyce, setting, as it were, a Crown upon the head of Revenge.

The Javelin in her right hand points at those whom the actually strikes and pierceth through.

And before those, whom she destroys not in their calamity and misfortune, she ever presents that black and dismal spectacle in her less hand: for questionless to Men sitting as it were upon the Pinacle of Prosperty, the thoughts of Death and painfulness of sickness and misfortunes, persidiousness of Friends, treachers of Foes, change of Estate, and such like, seem as ugly to the Eye of their Meditations, as those Ætbiopians pictured in Nemesis her Pitcher. Virgil in describing the Battel of Astium, speaks thus elegantly of Cleopatra.

The Wildom of the Ancients.

45

Regina in medis patrio vocat agmina fiftro Nee dum etiam gominos à tergo respicts angues.

es of fore-

for wife

cero.

Ca-

s to-

rute,

Scire:

utus)

n fo

the for

ne to

The Queen amid'ft this hurly-burly stands, And with her Countrey Timbrel calls her Bands; Not spying yer, where crawl'd behind her Back. Two deadly Snakes with Venom speckled black.

But not long after, which way foever the turned, Trops of Athiopians were fill before her Eyes.
Laftly, It is wifely added, That Namelis rides upon in Harr, because a Harr is a most lively Creature, and albeit, it may be, that such as are cut off by Death in their Youth prevent and shun the power of Nam sis; it doubtless such, whose prosperity and power continuous, are made subject unto her, and lie as it were moden under her Feet.

ACHELOUS, or, Battel.

T is a Fable of Antiquity, that when Hereules and Achelons as Rivals contended for the Marriage of the Marriag

S

This Fable hath relation unto the Expeditions of War, for the Preparations thereof on the defensive part (which exprest in the Person of Achelous) is very diverse and uncertain. But the invading Party is mo commonly of one fort, and that very fingle, confishing of an Army by Land, or perhaps of a Navy by S But for a King that in his own Territory, expects Enemy, his occasions are infinite. He fortifies Town he attembles Men out of the Countreys and Village he raileth Citadels, he builds and breaks down Bridge he disposeth Garisons, and placeth Troops of Soldie on Passages of Rivers, on Ports, on Mountains, and Ambushes in Woods, and is busied with a multitude of other Directions, infomuch, that every day he prefer beth new Forms and Orders; and then at last having accommodated all things compleat for defence, he the rightly represents the form and manner of a fierce fig ting Bull. On the other fide, the Invader his greate care is, the fear to be diffressed for Victuals in Enemy-Country; and therefore affects chiefly to haften on Battel: For if it should happen, that after a Field fight, he prove the Victor, and as it were, break the Horn of the Enemy, then certainly this follows, the his Enemy being ftricken with Terror, and abased in his Reputation, prefently bewrays his weakness, an feeking to repair his loss, retires himfelf to some Itron ho d, abandoning to the Conqueror the spoil and fac of his Country and Cities: which may well be terme a Type of the Amalthean Horn.

DIONTSUS, or Passions.

THEY fay that Semele, Jupiter's Sweet-heart, (he ving bound her Paramour, by an irrevocable Oath, to grant her one Request which she would require) desired that he would accompany her in the fame form wherein he accompanied Juno: Which he granting (as not able to deny) is came to pass, that he miserable Wench was burnt with Lightning. But the Infant which she bare in her Womb, Jupiter, the Pather, took out, and kept it in a gash which he cut his Thigh, till the Months were compleat that it hould be born. This burthen made Jupiter somewhat o limp, whereupon the Child (because it was heavy and troublesome to its Father while it lay in his Thigh was called Dionyfus. Being born, it was committed o Proserpina for some years to be Nurst, and being rown up, it had fuch a Maiden face, as that a Man could hardly judge whether it were a Boy or Girl. He was dead also, and buried for a time, but afterward erived: Being but a Youth, he invented and taught he planting and dreffing of Vines, the making also, indule of Wine; for which, becoming famous and reowned, he subjugated the World, even to the uttermost bounds of India. He rode in a chariot d awn with Tygers. There danced about him certain deformed Hobgoblins called Cobali, Acratus, and others, yea, even the Muses also were some of his Followers. He nok to Wife Ariadne, forfaken and left by Thefens. The Tree facred unto him was the Ivy. He was held the Inventor and Institutor of Sacrifices, and Ceremonies, ad full of Corruption and Cruelty. He had power to rike Men with fury and madness; for it is reported, That at the celebration of his Orgies, two famous Worthies, Pembeus and Orpheus, were torn in pieces by terrain francick Women, the one because he got upon Tree to behold their Ceremonies in these Sacrifices; e other for making melody with his Harp: And for his Gods, they are in a manner the fame with Jupiter's.

of the contract of the contrac flen

the the and and fact

(ha

d re-

There is such excellent morality coucht in this Fable, is that Moral Philosophy affords not better; for under the Person of Bacchus is described the nature of Affection, Passion, or Perturbation, the Mother of which (though never so hurtful) is nothing else but the Object of apparent good in the Eyes of Appetite. And it is always conceived in an unlawful defire, rashly propounded and obtained, before well understood and confidered; and when it begins to grow, the Mother of it, which is the defire of apparent good by too much fervency, is destroyed and perisheth. Neverthele whil'st yet it is an imperfect Embrio) it is nourished and preferved in the Humane Soul, (which is as it were a Father unto it, and represented by Jupiter,) but especially in the inferior part thereof, as in a Thigh, where also it causeth so much trouble and vexation, as that good determinations and actions are much hindred and lamed thereby; and when it comes to be confirmed by confent and habit, and breaks out as it were into act, it remains yet a while with Proferpina, as with a Nurse, that is, it seeks corners and secret places, and as it were, Caves under Ground, until (the Reigns of Shame and Fear being laid aside in a pampered audaioulnels) it either takes the pretext of some Vertue, or becomes altogether impudent and shameless. And it is most true, that every vehement Passion is of a doubtfull Sex, as being Masculine in the first Motion, but Feminine in Profecution.

It is an excellent Fiction that of Bacchus his reviving; for Passions do sometimes seem to be in a dead fleep, and as it were utterly extinct, but we should not think them to be fo indeed, no, though they lay, a it were, in their Grave; for let there be but matter and opportunity offered, and you shall fee them quickly to revive again.

The invention of Wine is wittily ascribed unto him? every affection being ingenious and skilful in finding out that which brings nourishment unto it; and indeed, of all things known to Men, Wine is most powerful and efficacious to excite and kindle Passions of what kind foever, as being in a manner common Nurse to bis 2i (labrine)

themall.

al

Again, his conquering of Nations, and undertaking infinite Expeditions is an elegant device; for Defire never refts content with what it hath, but with an infinite and unfatiable Appetite still covers and gapes after more.

His Chariot also is well said to be drawn by Tygers; for as soon as any affection shall from going a foot, be advanced to ride in a Chariot, and shall captivate reason, and lead her in a triumph, it grows cruel, untamed, and sierce against whatsoever withstands or opposeth it.

It is worth the noting also, that those ridiculous Hobgoblins are brought in dancing about his Chariot; for every Passion doth cause, in the Eyes, Face and Geflure, certain undecent, and ill-seeming, apish, and deformed motions; so that they who in any kind of Passion, as in anger, arrogancy, or love, seem gloricus and brave in their own Eyes, do yet appear to omers misshapen and ridiculous.

In that the Muses are said to be of his company, it hews that there is no affection almost which is not soothed by some Art, wherein the indulgence of Wits doth derogate from the glory of the Muses, who (when they ought to be the Mistress of Life) are made the Waiting-maids, of affections.

1 is

ro-

on-

of

le hed

ere

ipe-

that

and into th a

and s of

aci-

of it is full

mi-

evi-

not

, 25

and v to im;

ling

rful

hat

to.

in,

Again, where Bacchus is said to have loved Ariadne, that was rejected by Theseus; it is an Allegory of special observation; for it is most certain, that Passions always covet and desire that which Experience forsakes, and they all know (who have paid dear for serving and obeying their Lust) that whether it be honour, or riches, or delight, or glory, or knowledge, or any thing else which they seek after, yet are they but things cast off, and by divers Men, in all ages after experience had utterly rejected and loathed.

Neither is it without a Mystery, that the Ivy was facred to Bacchus; for the Ap lication holds, First, in that the Ivy remains green in Winter. Secondly, In that it flicks to, embraceth, and overtoppeth fo many di vers Bodies, as Trees, Walls, and Edifices. Touching the first, every Passion doth by resistance and reluca tion, and as it were by Antiperistafis (like the Toy of the cold Winter,) grow fresh and lusty. And as for the other, every predominate Affection doth again (like the Ivy) embrance and limit all Humane Ac ons and Determinations, adhering and cleaving fast unto them.

5

Neither is it a wonder, that superstitious Rites and Ceremonies were attributed unto Bacchus, feeing every giddy headed humour keeps in a manner Revel-rout in false Religions; or that the cause of Madness should be ascribed unto him, seeing every affection is by Nature a short fury, which (if it grow vehement, and become habitual) concludes in madness.

Concerning the rending and difmembring of Pember and Orpheus, the Parable is plain, for every prevalent affection is outrageous and severe, and again curious inquiry, and wholfome and free admonin-

on.

Lastly, That confusion of Jupiter and Bacchus, their Persons may be well transferred to a Parable, seeing noble and famous Acts, and remarkable and glorious Merits, do fometimes proceed from Vertue, and we ordered Reason and Magnanimity, and sometimes from a fecret Affection, and hidden Passion, which are so dignified with the celebrity of Fame and Glory, that Man can hardly diftinguish between the Acts of Bacchui, and the Gests of Jupiter.

ATALANTA, or Gain.

TALANTA, who was reputed to excel in swiftness, would needs challenge Hippomenes at a march in running. The conditions of the prize were ele: That if Hippomenes won the Race, he should oufe Afalanta; if he were out-run, that then he said forfeit his Life. And in the Opinion of all, the fory was thought affured of Atalanta's fide, being mous, as she was, for her marchless and inconquerafreed, whereby the had been the bane of many. therefore bethinks him how to deceive her y a trick, and in that regard provides three Golden poles or Balls, which he purposely carried about him. The Race is begun, and Atalanta gets a good frart beore him. He feeing himfelf thus cast behind, being mindful of his device, throws one of his Golden Balls before her, and yet not outright, but somewhat of the one fide, both to make her linger and also to draw her out of the right course: She, out of a Womanish defire, (being thus enticed with the beauty of the Golden Apple) leaving her direct Race, suns afide, and stoops to catch the Ball, Hippomenes the while holds on his course, getting thereby a great start, and leaves er behind him: But she by her own natural swiftnels, recovers her loft time, and gets before him again. But Hippomenes still continues his sleight, and both the fecond and third times cast out his Balls, those inficing delays; and fo by craft, and not by his activity, wins the Race and Victory.

ery be

This Fable feems Allegorically to demonstrate a notable constite between Art and Nature; for Art (fignified by Atalama) in its work (if it be not letted and hindred) is far more swift than Nature, more speedy in pace, and sooner attains the end it aims at, which is manifest almost in every effect: As you may see it in Fruit-trees, whereof those that grow of a Kernel are long e're they bear, but such as are grasted on a stock a great deal sooner. You may see it in Clay, which in the generation of Stones, is long e're it become hard; but in the burning of Bricks, is very quickly affected. Also in Morat Passages you may observe, that it is a long time e're (by the benefit of Nature) forrow can be affuaged, and comfort and ed; whereas Philosophy (which is, as it were, An Living) tarries not the leifure of time, but doth it stantly, and our of hand; and yet this Prerogan and singular agility of Art is hindred by certain G den Apples to the infinite prejudice of Humane ceedings: For there is not any one Art or Sol which constantly perseveres in a true and lawful contill it come to the proposed End or Mark; but and anon makes stops after good beginnings, leaves a Race, and turns aside to Profit and Commodity, in Atalanta.

Declinat cursus, aurumque volubile tollit.

Who doth her course forsake, The Rolling Gold to take,

And therefore it is no wonder that Art and not the power to conquer Nature, and by Pact or Law of Conquest, to kill and destroy her; but on the contrary falls out, that Art becomes subject to Nature, and yield the Obedience; as a Wife the Husband.

PROMETHEUS, or the State of Man.

The Ancients deliver, that Promethers made a Man of Clay, mixt with certain parcels taken from divers Animals, who studying to maintain this his Work by Art, (that he might not be accounted a founder only, but Propagator of Humane kind) stole up to Heaven with a bundle of Twigs, which he kindled at the Chariot of the Sun, came down again, and communicated it with Men: and yet they say, (That notwithstanding this excellent work of his,) he was required with Ingratitude, in a treacherous Conspira-

For they accored both him and his Invention to er, which was not fo taken as was meet it should. the Information was pleasing to Jupiter, and all Gods. And therefore in a merry Mood, granted Men, not only the use of Fire, but perpetual h alfo, a Boon most acceptable and defirable. They ng, as it were, over joyed, did foolilhly lay this of the Gods upon the back of an Als, who bewonderfully oppress d with Thirst, and near a ountain, was told by a Serpent (which had the cuody thereof) that he should not drink, unless he would promife to give him the Burthen that was on his Back. The filly Ass accepted the condition, and to the restauration of Youth (fold for a draught of Water) past from Men to Serpents. But Prometheus full of Malice, being reconciled unto Men, after they were frustrated of their Gift, but in a Chafe yet with Jupiter, feared not to use deceit in Sacrifice; For haring killed two Bulls, and in one of their Hides wrapp d up the Flesh and Fat of them both, and in the other only the Bones, with a great shew of Religious Devoion, gave Jupiter his choice, who (detesting his Fraud, and Hypocrifie, but taking an occasion of Revenge) chose that which was stopp'd with Bones, and so turning to Revenge (when he faw that the Infolency of Prometheus would not be repressed, but by laying some grievous Affliction upon Mankind, in the forming of which, he fo much bragged and boafted) commanded fulcan to frame a goodly beautiful Women, which eing done, every one of the Gods bestowed a Gift on her; whereupon she was called Pandora. To this Woman they gave, in her hand, a goodly Box full of all Miferies and Calamities, only in the bottom of it they put Hope; with this Box the comes first to Prometheus, thinking to carch him, if peradventure he should accept it at her hands, and so open it: which he nevertheless, with good Providence and Forefight refused. Whereupon the goes to Epimethous (who, though lan on his an end and has ra-though Brother to Prometbeus, yet was of a much de fering Disposition) and offers this Box unto him, w without delay took it, and rafhly opened it; be when he faw that all kind of Miferies came flutte ing about his Ears, being wife too late, with gre speed and earnest endeavour clapt on the Cover, fo with much ado retained Hope fitting alone in bottom; at last Jupiter laying many and grieve Crimes to Prometheus his charge (as that he had sto Fire from Heaven, that in contempt of his Majelly he facrificed a Bull's Hide fuff'd with Bones, that scornfully rejected his Gift, and besides all this the he offered violence to Pallas) cast him into Chains and doom'd him to perpetual Torment: and by % piter's Command, was brought to the Mountain Can cafus, and there bound fast to a Pillar that he could not ffir; there came an Eagle also, that every d fat tyring upon his Liver and wasted it, but as much as was earen in the day, grew again in the Night, the Matter for Torment to work upon might never decay But yet they fay there was an end of this Punishmen For Hercules croffing the Ocean in a Cup, which the Sun gave him, came to Caucasus, and fet Prometheus liberty, by shooting the Eagle with an Arrow. More over in fome Nations there were instituted in the he nour of Prometheus, certain Games of Lamp-bearers in which they that strived for the Prize, were wor out, yielded the Place and Victory to those that follow ed, and so cast back themselves; so that whosever came first to the Mark with his Torch burning, got de Prize.

This Fable demonstrates and preffeth many true and grave Speculations, wherein some things have been heretofore well noted, others not so much as touch'd.

Prometheus doth clearly and elegantly fignific Providence: For in the Universality of Nature, the Fabrica and Constitution of Man only was by the Anciens pick d

YOU

ftol

the ains

the cay,

ore-

and d. fict

ms

ckd

ick'd out and chosen, and attributed unto Providence, a peculiar Work. The reason of it seems to be, not ly in that the Nature of Man is capable of a mind understanding, which is the Seat of Providence; d therefore it would feem ffrange and incredible. the reason and mind should so proceed and flow n dumb and deaf Principles, as that it should necesmly be concluded, the Soul of Man to be endued h Providence, not without the example, intention, flemp of a greater Providence. But this also is effy propounded, that man is as it were the Centre the World, in respect of final Causes, so that if in were not in Nature, all things would feem to ray and wander without purpole, and like scattered ranches (as they fay) without inclinations to their de For all things attend on Man, and he makes use , and gathers Fruit from all Creatures: For the reolutions and periods of Stars make both for the diactions of Times, and the diffribution of the World's th. Meteors also are referred to prefages of Tempelts; d Winds are ordained, as well for Navigation, as or turning of Mills, and other Engines: And Plants, nd Animals of what kind foever, are useful either for Men's Houses, and places of shelter, or for Rayment, for Food, or Medicine, or for ease of Labour, or in word, for delight and folace; fo that all things feem work, not for themselves, but for Man.

Neither is it added without consideration that certain Particles were taken from divers living Creatures, and mix'd and tempered with that clayey Mass, because it is most true that of all things comprehended within the compass of the Universe, Man is a thing nost mix'd and compounded, insomuch that he was well termed by the Ancients, a little World; for although the Chymicks do, with too much Curiosity, take and wrest the elegancy of this Word (Micrososm) to the Letter, contending to find in Man all Minerals, all Vegetables and the rest, or any thing that holds proportion with them; yet this proposition remains sound and whole, that the Body of Man, of all material Beings found to be most compounded, and most organic whereby it is endued and furnished with most admirab Vertues and Faculties. And as for limple Bodies, the Powersare not many, though certain and violent, as e fling without being weakned, diminished or flinted by mixture; for the multiplicity and excellency of Open tion have their residence in mixture and composition, and yet nevertheless, Man in his Originals feems to be thing unarmed, and naked, and unable to help it fel as needing the aid of many things; therefore Promethe made hafte to find our Fire, which suppeditates and yields comfort and help in a manner, to all humans Wants and Necessities; to that if the Soul be the Form of Forms, and if the Hand be the Instrument of Instru ments; Fire deferves well to be called the Succour of Succours, or the Help of Helps, which infinite way affords aid and affiltance too all Labours and Machanical Arts, and to the Sciences themselves.

non

The manner of flealing this fire is aprly described, even from the nature of things: It was, they say, by bundle of Twigs held to touch the Chariot of the State For twigs are used in giving blows or Stripes, to signific clearly, that fire is engendred by the violent percussion and mutual collision of Bodies, by which their material Substances are attenuated and set in Motion, and prepared to receive the heat or influence of the Heavenly Bodies; and so in a clandestime manner, and as it were by stealth, may be said to take and shatch

Fire from the Chariot of the Sun.

There follows next a remarkable part of the Parable, that Men inftead of Gratulation and Thankfgiving, were angry, and expostulated the Matter with Prometheus, informed that they accused both him and his Invention unto Jupiter, which was so acceptable to him, that he augmented their former Commodities with a new Bounty. Seems it not strange, that Ingratitude towards

SH & de fi

and awards the Author of a Benefit (a Vice that in a mancontains all other Vices) should find such Approbation and Reward. No, it seems to be otherwise: For the meaning of the Allegory is this, that Men's out-cries non the defects of Nature and Art, proceed from an excellent disposition of the Mind, and turn to their good, thereas the silencing of them is hateful to the Gods, and redounds not so much to their Profit: For they and infinitely extol Humane Nature, or the knowledge has possessed, because of the profiles, breaking out into a prodigal admiration of the profiles, breaking out into a prodigal admiration. contains all other Vices) should find such Approbaey profess, would have them be accounted perfect; by do first of all shew little Reverence to the divine Nature, by equalizing, in a manner, their own Deeds with God's Perfection: Again, they are wonderby injurious to Men, by imagining they have attaied the highest step of knowledge, (resting themselves contented) feek no further. On the contrary, fuch bring Nature and Art to the Bar with Acculations, ad Bills of Complaint against them, are indeed of for true and moderate Judgments: For they are ever Action, feeking always to find out new Inventions. Which makes me much to wonder at the foolish and inconfiderate Dispositions of some Men, who (making memfelves Bond-flaves to the Arrogancy of a few) have the Philosophy of the Peripateticks (containing only a Portion of Gracian Wildom, and that but a small one mether) in so great esteem, that they hold it, not only in uriprofitable, but a fuspicious, and almost heinous ming, to lay any imputation of Imperfection upon it. I approve rather of Empedocles his Opinion , who like a Mad-man, and of Democritus his Judgment, who with great moderation complained how that all things were involved in a Mist) that we knew nothing, that we difcerned nothing, that Truth was drowned in the depths of Obscurity, and that false things were wonderfully joined and intermix'd with true (as for the new Academy that exceeded all measure) than of the con-DE 360 101 300 2950 fident bear ans orm

tru

rof

Z.

od,

dy:

ieir

on,

the end tch

ole,

ng, me-

In-

m,

1 4 de

rds

fident and promunciative School of Arituals. Let Me therefore be admonished, that by acknowledging a Imperfection of Mature and Art, they are grateful the Gods, and shall thereby obtain new Benefits a greater Favours at their bountiful Hands, and the Aculation of Promubeus their Author and Master (thou bitter and vehement) will conduce more to their Paste, than to the effuse in the congratulation of his lyention: For in a Word the opinion of having enough to be accounted one of the greatest Causes of have too little.

Now as touching the kind of Gift which Men faid to have received in reward of their Accusate (wit, an ever-fading Flower of Youth) it is a flew, that the Ancients feemed not to delpair of taining the skill by Means and Medicines, to put Old Age, and to prolong Life, but this to be number rather among fuch things (having been once happe arrained unto) are now through Men's Negligence Carelelness, utterly perished and lost; than among fin as have been always denied and never granted: Fo they fignifie and shew, that by affording the true w of Fire, and by a good and ftern acculation and conviction of the Errors of Art, the Divine Bounty not wanting unto Men in the obtaining of fuch Gifts but Men are wanting to themselves in laying this G of the Gods upon the back of a filly flow-paced Al which may feem to be Experience, a flupid think and full of Delay: From whose leifurely and Snail like-pace, proceeds that complaint of Life's brevity, and Arts length. And to fay the Truth, I am of the opinion, that these two Faculties, Dogmatical and Em perical, are not as yet well joined and coupled toge ther, but as new Gifts of the Gods imposed either up on Philosophical Abstractions, as upon a flying Bird or upon flow and dull Experience, as upon an Afs And yet methinks, I would not entertain an ill cont ceit of this Ass, if it meet not for the accidents of avel and Thirs: For I am perswaded, that who so instantly goes on, by the conduct of Experience as a certain Rule and Method, and not covers to meet in such Experiments by the way, as conduce either gain or oftentation, (to obtain which, he must be in to lay down, and sell this Burthen) may prove no mit Porter to bear this new addition of divine Municipal.

Now, in that this Gift is faid to pass from Men to Serants, it may seem to be added to the Fable for ornament-sake in a manner, unless it were inserted to shame len, that having the use of that Coelestial Fire, and so many Arts, are not able to get unto themselves the things as Nature it self bestows upon many other reatures.

id For a single site of the si

But that fudden reconciliation of Men to Prometheus, for they were frustrated of their hopes, contains a softable and wise Note, shewing the levity and tenity of Men in new Experiments; for if they have to present Success, answerable to their expectation, ith too sudden hast desist from that they began, and ith precipitancy returning to their former experiments.

reconciled to them again.

The state of Man, in respect of Arts, and such things sconcern the Intellect, being now described, the Parible passeth to Religion: For after the planting of arts, follows the setting of Divine Principles, which hypocrise hath over-spread and polluted. By that two-shed Sacrifice therefore is elegantly shadowed out the Persons of a true Religious Man, and an Hypocrite in the one is contained Fatness, which (by reason of the Instammation and Fumes thereof,) is called, The Extino of God; by which his Affection and Zeal, (tending to God; by which his Affection and Zeal, (tending to God; Glory, and ascending towards Heaven) is ignified. In him also are contained the Bowels of Charity, and in him is found that good and wholesome Flesh. Whereas in the other, there is nothing but dry and naked Bones; which nevertheless, do stuff up the Hide, and make it appear like a fair and good ly Sacrifice: By this may be well meant those extend nal and vain Rites, and empty Ceremonies by which Men do oppress and fill up the fincere Worship of God, things compoled rather for offentation, than am way conducing to true Piety. Neither do they hole it fufficient to offer fuch mock-Sacrifices unto God except they also lay them before him, as if he had cho fen and bespoke them. Certainly the Prophet in the perion of God, doth thus expostulate concerning the Choice, Ifa. 58. 5. Num tandem boc est illud fejunium quod ELEGI, ut bomo animam fuam in diem unum affi gat, & caput inftar junceti demittat ? Is it Inch a Fall that I have chosen, that a Man should afflict his Soul for a day, and to bow down his head like a Bulrush?

Having now touch'd the State of Religion, the Parable converts it felf to the Manners and Conditions of humane Life. And it is a common, but apt interpretation, by Pandora to be meant pleafure and voluptuoufness; which (when the civil Life is pamperd with too much Art, and Culture, and Superfluity,) is ingendred, as it were, by the efficacy of Fire, and therefore the work of Voluptuoufness is attributed unto Vulcan, who also himself doth represent Fire. From this do infinite Miseries, together with too late repentance, proceed, and overslow the Minds, and Bodies, and Fortunes of Men, and that not only in respect of particular Estates, but even over Kingdoms and Commonwealths; for from this Fountain have Wars, Turmults, and Tyrannies derived their Original.

But it would be worth the Labour to confider how elegantly and proportionably this Fable doth delineate two Conditions; or (as I may fay) two Tables or Examples of humane Life, under the Perfons of Prometheus, or Epimetheus; for they that are of Epimetheus his Sect, are improvident, not forefeeing what may come to pass hereafter; effecting that best which

eemi

fer th

an pe

thi

w lac

Bu

du

ril

tur

alf

fra

Re

me

fea

the bec

to

ing

we

inc der

of

mo

Mi

can cule

wh

For

loa

thé

Pro

of

abl

Ye

remotest

feems most sweet for the present; whence it happens, that they are overtaken with many miferies, difficulties, and calamities, and fo lead their Lives almost in perperual affliction; but yet notwithstanding they please their Fancy, and out of ignorance of the pallages of things, do entertain many vain hopes in their mind, whereby they fometimes (as with fweet Dreams) foace themselves, and sweeten the Miseries of their Life. But they that are Prometheus his Scholars, are Men enthed with Prudence, forefeeing things to come, waily shunning, and avoiding many Evils and Misfortunes. But to these their good Properties, they have also annexed, that they deprive themselves, and defraud their Genius of many lawful Pleasures, and divers Recreations, and (which is worfe,) they vex, and torment themselves with cares and troubles, and intestine fears; for being chained to the Pillar of Necessity. they are afflicted with innumerable cogitations, (which, because they are very swift, may be fitly compared to an Eagle,) and those griping, and as it were, gnawing and devouring the Liver, unless sometimes, as it were, by Night, it may be they get a little recreation, and ease of Mind; but so, as that they are again suddenly affaulted with fresh anxieties and fears.

The city of the latter of the late of the 0 0 1

U4

日子の日子子田田

Therefore this Benefit happens to but a very few of either condition, that they should retain the Commodities of Providence, and free themselves from the Miseries of Care and Perturbation; neither indeed can any attain unto it, but by the affishance of Hercules, that is, Fortitude, and Constancy of Mind, which is prepared for every Event and armed in all Fortunes, foreseeing without sear, enjoying without loathing, and suffering without Impatience. It is worth the noting also, that this Vertue was not natural to Prometheus, but adventitial, and from the indulgence of another; for no in-bred and natural Fortitude is able to encounter with these Miseries. Moreover, this Vertue was received and brought unto him from the remotest part of the Ocean, and from the Sun, that is, from Wisdom, as from the Sun; and from the Meditation of Inconstancy, or of the Waters of humane Life, as from the sailing upon the Ocean; which two Virgil hath well conjoyned in these Verses;

Felix qui potuit rerum cognoscere causas: Quique metus omnes, & inexorabile fatum Subjecit pedibus, strepitumq; Acherontis avari.

Happy is he that knows the causes of things: And that with dauntless courage treads upon All Fear and Fates, relentless Threatnings, And greedy Throat of roaring Acheron.

Moreover, it is elegantly added for the confolation and confirmation of Men's Minds, that this noble Hero crofs'd the Ocean in a Cup or Pan, left peradventure, they might too much fear that the straits and frailty of their Nature will not be capable of this Fortitude and Constancy. Of which very thing Semea well conceived, when he said, Magnum of babere simulfragilitatem bominis, & securitatem Doi. It is a great matter for Humane Frailty and Divine Security to be one and the self-same subject.

But now we are to step back a little again to that, which by premeditation past over, lest a Breach should be made in those things that were so link d together. That therefore which I could touch here, is that last Crime imputed to Prometheus, about seeking to bereave Minerva of her Virginity: For questionless, it was this hainous offence that brought that punishment of devouring his Liver, upon him; which is nothing else but to shew, that when we are pust up with too much Learning and Science, they go about offentimes to make even Divine Oracles subject to Sence and Reason; whence most certainly sollows a continual diffraction.

at is,

Medimane

two ation

He-

ven-

and

For-

emecs

[mul reat

o be ame

hat,

bluc

her.

laft

ave

was

of elfe

uch

to ea-

on,

ftraction, and reftless griping of the Mind; we must therefore with a sober, and humble Judgment, distinguish between Humanity, and Divinity, and between the Oracles of Sense, and the Mysteries of Faith unless an Heretical Religion, and a commentatious Philosophy be pleasing unto us.

Lastly, it remains that we say something of the Games of Prometheus, performed with burning Torches, which again hath reference to Arts and Sciences, as that fire, in whose Memory, and Celebration, these Games were inflituted, and it contains in it a most wise admonition, that the perfection of Sciences to be expected from Succession, not from the nimbleness and promptness of one only Author; for they that are nimblest in Course, and strongest in Contention, yet happily have not the luck to keep Fire still in their Torch; feeing it may be as well extinguished by running too fast, as by going to slow. And this running and contending with Lamps, feems long fince to be intermitted, feeing all Sciences feem even now to flourish most in their first Authors, Aristotle, Galen, Euclid, and Ptolomy; Succession having neither effected, nor almost attempted any great Matter. It were therefore to be wished, that these Games, in honour of Prometheus, or Humane Nature, were again restored. and that Matters should receive success by Combate and Emulation, and not hangupon any one Man'sfparkling and haking Torch. Men therefore are to be admonished to rouse up their Spirits, and try their strengths and turns. and not refer all to the Opinions and Brains of a few.

And thus have I delivered that which I thought good to observe out of this so well known, and common Fable; and yet I will not deny, but that there may be some things in it, which have an admirable consent with the Mysteries of Christian Religion, and especially that Sailing of Hercules in a Cup, (to set Prometheus at liberty,) seems to represent an Image of the Divine Word, coming in Flesh, as in a frail Vessel, to ger be thi fer pa

Sol

ter

m

th

redeem Man from the Slavery of Hell. But I have interdicted my Pen all liberty in this kind, left I should use strange Fire at the Altar of the Lord.

SCILLA and ICARUS, or the Middle-way.

MEDIOCRITY, or the Middle-way, is most commended in Moral Actions; in Contemplative Sciences, not so celebrated; though no less profitable and commodious; but in Political Employments, to be used with great heed and jugdment. The Ancients by the way, prescribed by Icarus, noted the Mediocrity of Manners; and by the way between Scylla and Charphdis (so famous for difficulty and danger,) the Mediocrity of intellectual Operations, learus being to cross the Sea by flight, was commanded by his Father, that he should fly neither too high nor too low; for his Wings being joined with Wax, if he should mount too high, it was to be seared less the Wax would melt by the heat of the Sun; and if too low, less mistry Vapours of the Sea would make it less tenacious; but he in a youthful jollity soaring too high, fell down headlong, and perished in the Water.

The Parable is easie and vulgar; for the way of Vertue lies in a direct path between excess and defect. Neither is it a wonder that learns perished by excess, seeing that excess for the most part, is the peculiar fault of Youth, as defect is of Age, and yet of two evil and hurtful ways, Youth commonly makes choice of the better, defect being always accounted worst; for whereas Excess contains some Sparks of Magnanimity, and, like a Bird, claims Kindred of the Heavens, Defect, only like a base Worm, crawls upon the Earth. Excellently therefore said Heraclitus, Lumen siccum, optima Anima; a dry Light is the best Soul; for if the Soul

Soul contract Moisture from the Earth is become degenerate altogether. Again, on the other side, there must be moderation used, that this Light be subtilized by this laudable Siccity, and not destroyed by too much servency. And thus much every Man for the most part knows.

Now they that would fail between Scylla and Charphais must be furnished, as well with the skill, as prosperous success in Navigation: for if their Ships fall into Scylla they are Split on the Rocks: if into Charphais they are swallowed up of a Gulf.

in-

ıld

f

2-

0y-10

16

n

1-

f

5

,

The Moral of this Parable (which we will but briefly touch, although it contain matter of infinite Contemplation) feems to be this: That in every Art and Science, and so in their Rules and Axioms, there be a mean observed between the Rocks of Distinctions, and the Gulfs of Universalities; which two are famous for the Wrack both of Wits and Arts.

SPHINX, or Science.

THEY fay that Sphyme was a Monster of divers forms, as having the Face and Voice of a Virgin, the Wings of a Bird, and the Talons of a Gryphin. His abode was in a Mountain near the City of Thebes, he kept also the High-ways, and used to lie in Ambush for Travellers, and so to surprize them: To whom (being in his power) he propounded certain dark and intricate Riddles, which were thought to have been given and received of the Muses. Now if these miterable Captives were not able instantly to resolve and interpret them in the mid'st of their difficulties and doubts, she would rend and tear them in pieces. The Countrey groaning a long time under this Calamity, the Thebans at last propounded the Kingdom as a reward unto him that could interpret the Riddles of Sphymin.

there being no other way to destroy her: Whereupon, Oedipus (a Man of piercing, and deep Judgment, but Maimed and Lame, by reason of holes bored in his Feer,) moved with the hope of fo great a Reward, accepted the condition, and determined to put it to the hazard; and fo with an undaunted and bold Spirit, presented himself before the Monster; who asked him what Creature that was, which after his Birth, went first upon four Feet, next, upon two, then upon three, and laftly, upon four Feet again; answered forthwith, that it was Man; which in his Infancy, immediately after Birth, crawls upon all four, scarce venturing to creep, and not long after, flands upright upon two Feet; then growing old, he leans upon a Staff wherewith he Supports himfelf, fo that he may feem to have three Feet; and at last, in decrepid years, his strength failing him, he falls groveling again upon four, and lies bed-rid. Having therefore by this true Answer gotten the Victory, he instantly slew this Sphynx, (and laying her Body upon an Afs,) leads it, as it were, in Triumph; and fo (according to the condition,) was created King of the Thebans.

This Fable contains in it no less wisdom than elegancy, and it feems to point at Science, especially that which is joyned with practice, for Science may not abfurdly be termed a Monster, as being by the ignorant and rude multitude always held in admiration. It is diverse in shape and figure, by reason of the infinite variety of Subjects, wherein it is convertant. den Face and Voice is attributed unto it for its gracious countenance and volubility of Tongue. Wings areadded, because Sciences and their Inventions do pass and fly from one to another, as it were, in a moment, feeing that the communication of Science is as the kindling of one light at another. Elegantly also it is feigned to have sharp and hooked Talons, because the Axioms and Arguments of Science do fo fasten upon the mind, and fo throngly apprehended and hold it, as that it flip no

Sop

tan

of

and

an

Sco

wa

M

the thi

wi

tio

ve

the

fre

the kn

ne

an

Bu

M

lic mi gir do di

dr

po no th on,

but

his ac-

the rit,

im

ent

ee,

th,

ely

to wo

re-

the lies en

ng ri-

22-le-

at

b-nt

is ite

us

1

d

eg

0 15 ir

not or evade, which is noted also by the Divine Philosopher, Eccles. 12. 12. Verba sapientum (saith he) sunt tanguam aculei & veluti clavi in altum desixi. The words of the wise are like Goads, and Nails driven far in.

Moreover, all Science feems to be placed in freep and high Mountains; as being thought to be a lofty and high thing, looking down upon ignorance with a formful Eye. It may be observed and seen also a great way, and far in compass, as things set on the tops of Mountains.

Furthermore, Science may well be feigned to befet the High-way, because which way soever we turn in this Progress and Pilgrimage of Humane Life, we meet with some matter or occasion offered for Contemplation.

Sphynx is faid to have received from the Muses, divers difficult Questions and Riddles, and to propound them unto Men, which remaining with the Muses, are free (it may be) from favage cruelty; for fo long as there is no other end of Study and Meditation, than to know, the Understanding is not racked and imprisoned, but enjoys Freedom and Liberty, and even doubts and variety, find a kind of pleasure and delectation: But when once these Anigma's are delivered by the Muses to Sphynx, that is, to practice, so that if it be sollicited and urged by Action, and Election, and Determination; then they begin to be troublesome and raging; and unless they be resolved and expedited, they do wonderfully torment and vex the minds of Men, diffracting, and in a manner rendrng them into fundry parts.

Moreover, there is always a twofold condition propounded with Sphynx her Enigmaes: To him that doth not expound them, diffraction of mind; and to him that doth, a Kingdom; for he that knows that which he fought to know, hath attained the end he aimed at, and every Artificer also commands over his work.

Of Sphynx her Riddles, they are generally two kinds, fome concerning the nature of things, others touching the nature of Man. So also there are two kinds of Empires, as rewards to those that resolve them. The one over Nature, the other over Men; for the proper and chief end of true Natural Philosophy is to command and fway over Natural Beings; as Bodies, Medicines, Mechanical Works, and infinite other things; although the School (being content with fuch things as are offered, and priding it felf with Speeches) doth neglect realities and works, treading them as it were under foot. But that Anigma propounded to Oedipui (by means of which he obtained the Theban Empire) belonged to the Nature of Man: For whofoever doth throughly confider the Nature of Man, may be in manner the contriver of his own Fortune, and is born to command, which is well spoken of the Roman's Arts:

Tu regere imperio populos, Romane, memento. Hæ tibi erunt Artes-

Roman remember, that with Scepters awe. Thy Realms thou rule. These Arts let be thy Law.

It was therefore very apposite, that Augustus Casar (whether by Premeditation, or by a Chance) bare a Sphynx in his Signet: For he (if ever any) was famous not only in Political Government, but in all the course of his Life; he happily discovered many new Anigmaes concerning the Nature of Man, which if he had not done with dexterity and promptness, he had often-times faln into imminent Danger and Destruction.

Moreover, It is added in the Fable, that the Body of Sphine, when she was overcome, was laid upon any As ; which indeed is an elegant Fiction, seeing there is nothing so acute and abstrute, but (being well understopa,

t

ft

1

a

tÇ

N

flood, and divulged,) may be well apprehended by a flow capacity.

ds;

of

he

per

m-

fe-

B; oth ere

re)

rn en

3

Car

fa-

all

Yn

ch

he

e-

y

re

r-

d,

Neither is it to be omitted, that Sphynn was overcome by a Man lame in his Feet; for when Men are too fwift of Foot, and too speedy of Pace, in hasting to Sphynn her Anigma's, it comes to pass, that (she getting the upper hand) their Wits and Minds are rather distracted by Disputations, than that ever they come to command by Works and Effects.

PROSERPINA, or Spirit.

DLUTO, they fay, being made King of the Infernal Dominions, (by that memorable Division,) was in despair of ever attaining any one of the Superiour Goddesses in marriage, especially if he should venture to Court them, either with Words, or with any amorous Behaviour; fo that of necessity he was to lay fome Plot to get one of them by Rapine: Taking therefore the Benefit of Opportunity, he caught up Proferpina (the Daughter of Ceres, a beautiful Virgir,) as the was gathering Narcissus-Flowers in the Meadows of Sicily, and carried her away with him in his Coach to the Subterranean Dominions; where the was welcomed with fuch Respect, as that she was stilled the Lady of Dis. But Ceres, her Mother, when, in no place she could find this her only beloved Daughter, in a forrowful Humour, and distracted beyond measure, went compassing the whole Earth, with a burning Torch in her hand, to feek, and recover this her loft Child. But when she faw that all was in vain, supposing peradventure, that she was carried to Hell, the importuned Jupiter with many Tears and Lamentations, that she might be restored unto her again; and at length, prevailed thus far, That if she had tasted of nothing in Hell, the should have leave to bring her crom from thence. Which Condition was as good as a Denial to her Petition, Proferpina having already eaten three Grains of a Pomegranate: And yet, for all this, Ceres gave not over her Suit, but fell to Prayers and Moans afresh: Wherefore, it was at last granted, that (the Year being divided) Proferpina should by alternate Courses, remain one fix Months with her Husband, and other fix Months with her Mother. Not long after this, Thefeus, and Perithous, in an over-hardy Adventure, attempted to fetch her from Pluto's Bed: who, being weary with Travel, and fitting down upon a Stone in Hell, to rest themselves, had not the Power to rife again; but fat there for ever. Proferpins therefore remained Queen of Hell, in whose Honour there was this great privilege granted, That all though it were enacted, that none that went down to Hell should have the power ever to return from thence; yet was this fingular exception annexed to this Law, That if any presented Proserpina with a Golden Bough, it should be lawful for him to go and come at his pleasure. Now there was but one only such a Bough in a spacious and shady Grove, which was not a Plant neither of it felf, but budded from a Tree of another kind, like a Rope of Gum, which being pluckt off, another would instantly spring out.

This Fable feems to pertain to Nature, and to dive into that rich and plentiful efficacy and variety of fubalternal Creatures, from whom whatfoever we have is derived, and to them doth again return.

By Proserpina, the Ancients meant that Æthereal Spirit, which (being separated from the upper Globe) is shut up and detained under the Earth (represented by Pluto) which the Poet well exprest thus:

Sive recens tellus, seductaque nuper ab alto Ethere, cognati retinchat semina cali. Whether the Youngling Tellus (that of late Was from the high-rear'd Æther separate) Did yet contain her Teeming Womb within The living Seeds of Heaven, her nearest kin.

en

is,

nd

at er-15-

ot

dy

ı;

phe

0-vd-

en

ne

12 ot

of kt

ve of

ve

pi-

by

er

This Spirit is feigned to be rapted by the Earth, because nothing can with-hold it, when it hath time and leisure to escape. It is therefore caught and staid by a sudden contraction, no otherwise than if a Man should go about to mix Air with Water, which can be done by no means, but by a speedy and rapid Agitation, as may be seen in Froth, wherein the Air is rapted by the Water.

Neither is it elegantly added, that Proferpina was rapt as she was gathering Narcissus Flowers in the Valleys, because Narcissus hath his Name from slowness or stupidity: for indeed then is this Spirit most prepared and stated to be snatche by Terrestrial Matter, when it begins to be coagulated, and become as it were slown.

Rightly is Proserpina honoured more than any of the other God's Bed-fellows, in being stiled the Lady of Dis, because this Spirit doth rule and sway all things in those lower Regions, Pluto abiding stupid and igno-

This Spirit the power Coelestial (shadowed by Ceres) strives, with infinite sedulity, to recover and get again: For that Brand or burning Torch of Asber (which Ceres carried in her hand) doth doubtless signific the Sun, which enlightnesh the whole Circuit of the Earth, and would be of greatest moment to recover Proserpina, if possible it might be.

But Proferpina abides still; the Reason of which is accurately, and excellently propounded in the Conditions between fapiter and Ceres: For, first, it is most certain there are two Ways to keep Spirit in solid and terrestrial Matter; the one by Constipation and Ob-ftruction.

ti

d

di

W foi

m fou

TOL

wh

was on L

may

of S

Dy t

may free

tolle

IL V

Cou

wiel

yet .

struction, which is meer Imprisonment and Constraint; the other, by Administration, or proportionable Nutriment, which it receives willingly, and of its own accord: For after that the included Spirit begins to feed and nourish it felf, it makes no hafte to be gone; but is as it were, link'd to its Earth: And this is pointed at by Proferpina hereating of Pomegranate; which if the had not done, she had long since been recovered by Ceres with her Torch, compassing the Earth. Now a concerning that Spirit which is in Metals and Minerals it is chiefly perchance reffrained by the folidity of Mass: But that which is in Plants and Animals, inhabits a porous Body, and hath open Paffage to be gone in a manner, as it lifts, were it not that it willingly abides of its own accord, by reason of the Relish it finds in its entertainment. The fecond Condition concerning the fix Months Custom, it is no other than an elegan Description of the Division of the Year; seeing this Spirit mix'd with Earth, appears above Ground in Vegetable Bodies During the Summer-Months, and in the Winter finks down again.

Now as concerning Thesew and Perithous, and their attempt to bring Proserpina quite away, the meaning of it is, that it oftentimes comes to pass that some more subtil Spirits descending with divers Bodies to the Earth, never come to suck of any subalternal Spirit, whereby to unite it unto them, and so to bring it away. But on the contrary are coagulated themselves, and never rise more, that Proserpina should be by that means augmented with Inhabitants and Dominion.

All that we can fay concerning that Sprig of Gold is hardly able to defend us from the violence of the Chymicks, if in this regard they fet upon us, feeing they promife by that their Elizar to effect Golden Mountains, and the restoring of Natural Bodies, as it were, from the Portal of Hell. But concerning Chymistry, and those perpetual Suitors for that Philosophical Elizar, we know certainly that their Theory is without grounds.

uvn

ed

out

he by 计算 日本出版

Ve-

neir

g of ore rth,

eby But ver

ug-

dis

Cby-

hey

ins,

rom and we nds,

and

and we suspect that their Practice is also without cermin reward. And therefore (omitting these) of this last part of the Parable, this is my Opinion, I am induted to believe by many Figures of the Ancients, that the conservation and restauration of natural Bodies, in some fort, was not esteemed by them as a thing impossible to be attained, but as a thing abstruse and full of Difficulties, and so they seem to intimate in this place, when they report that this one only Sprig was build among infinite other Trees in a huge and thick wood, which they seigned to be of Gold, because Gold is the Badge of perpetuity, and to be artificially as it were inserted, because this effect is to be rather hoped for from Art, than from any Medicine, or simple or natural means.

METIS. or Counfel.

THE Ancient Poets report, that Jupiter took Metis to Wife, whose Name doth plainly signific Counsel, and that she by him conceived. Which when he found, not tarrying the time of her deliverance, demons both her and that which she went withan, by which means Jupiter himself became with Child, and was delivered of a wondrous birth; for out of his head or brain came forth Pallas Armed.

The Sense of this Fable (which at first apprehension may seem monstrous and absurd) contains in it a secret of State, to wit, with what policy Kings are wont to carry themselves towards their Counsellors, whereby they may not only preserve their Authority and Majesty see and entire, but also that it may be the more expelled and dignissed of the People: For Kings being as it were tied and coupled in a Nuptial bond to their Counsellors, do truly conceive that communicating with them about the affairs of greatest importance, do yet detract nothing from their own Majesty. But when when any Matter comes to be cenfured or decreed (which is a birth) there do they confine and reffrain the liberty of their Councellors; left that which is done should seem to be hatcht by their Wisdom and Judgment. So as at last Kings (except it be in such marters as are distastful and maligned, which they always will be fure to put off from themselves) do assume the the honour and praise of all matters that are ruminated in Council, and, as it were, formed in the Womb, whereby the refolution and execution (which because it proceeds from power, and implies necessity, is elegantly shadowed under the Figure of Pallas Armed) shall feem to proceed wholly from themselves. Neither fufficeth it, that it is done by the Authority of the King, by his meer will and free applaufe; except withal, this be added and appropriated as to iffue our of his own Head or Brain, intimating, that out of his own Judgment, Wifdom, and Ordinance, it was only invented and derived.

The STRENS, or Pleasures.

n

di

th

th

In

in ft

de

W

fo

Po

THE Fable of the Syrens feems rightly to have been applied to the pernicious allurements of Plafure, but in a very vulgar and groß manner. And therefore to me it appears, that the Wisdom of the Ancients have with a farther reach or infight strained desper Matter out of them, not unlike the Grapes ill pressd; from which, though fome Liquor were drawn, ye the best was lest behind. These Syrens are said tobe the Daughters of Achelous and Terpfichere one of the Mufes. Who in their first being, were winged, but after rashly entring into contention with the Muses, were by them vanquished, and deprived of their Wings. Of whose pluck'd out Feathers the Muses made themselve Coronets, to as ever fince that time all the Muses have attired mont gainsolt temptible:

attired themselves with plumed heads, except Terpsichore only, that was Mother to the Syrens. The Habitation of the Syrens was in certain pleasant Islands, from whence as foon as out of their Watch-Tower they difcovered any Ships approaching, with their fweet Tunes they would first entice and stay them, and having them in their Power would deftroy them. Neither was their Song plain and fingle, but confifting of fuch variety of melodious Tunes fo fitting and delighting the Ears that heard them, as that it ravished and betrayed all Passengers. And so great were the mischiefs they did, that these Isles of the Syrens, even as far off as Man can ken them, appeared all over white with the Bones of unburied Carcasses. For the remedying of this Mifery a double means was at last found out; the one by Ulysses, the other by Orpheus. Ulysses (to make experiment of his Device) caused all the Ears of his Company to be ftop'd with Wax, and made himself to be bound to the Main Mast, with special Commandment to his Mariners not to be loofed, albeit himfelf should require them fo to do. But Orpheus neglected and disdained to be fo bound, with a shrill and fweet Voice, finging Praises of the Gods to his Harp, suppress'd the Songs of they Syrens, and fo free'd himself from their Danger.

के जान के

out

his only have

Pla-

And

An-

dec-

efs d;

, ya

to be

Mu-after re by

Of

felve

have

trired

This Fable hath relation to Men's Manners, and contains in it a manifest and most excellent Parable: For Pleasures do for the most proceed out of the abundance and superfluity of all things, and also out of the delights and jovial contentments of the Mind; the which are wont suddenly, as it were, with winged Inticements to ravish and rap mortal Men: But Learning and Education brings it so to pass, as that it restrains and bridles Man's Mind, making it so to consider the ends and events of Things, as that it clips the Wings of Pleasure. And this was greatly to the honour and renown of the Muses; for after that by some Examples, it was made manifest, that by the power of Philosophy, vain Pleasures might grow contemptible; it presently grew to great effeem, as athing that could raile, and elevate the Mind aloft, that feemed to be base, and fixed to the Earth, make the cogitations of the Men (which do ever reside in the Head, to be athereal, and as it were winged. But that the Mother of the Syrens was left to her Feet, and without Wings; that no doubt is no otherwise meant, than of light and superficial Learning, appropriated and defigned only to Pleafures, as were those which Petronius devoted himself unto, after he had received his faral Sentence; and having his Foot, as it were upon the Threshold of Death, sought to give himself all delightful Contentments; insomuch, as when he had caused Confolatory Letters to be fent him, he would peruse none of them, (as Tacitus reports; that should give him Courage and Confrancy;) but only read fantaffical Verses, such as these are;

Vivamis, Mea Lesbia, atq; amemus, Rumoresque Senim severiorum, Omnes unius astimemus Assis.

My Lesbia, let us live and love; Though wayward Dotards us reprove, Weigh their Words light for our behove.

And this also:

Jura Senes norint, & quid sit fasq; nefasque, Inquirant tristes, Legumq; examina servent.

Let doring Gransire know the Law, And right and wrong observe with awe: Let them in that strict Circle draw.

This kind of Doctrine would easily perswade to take these plumed Coronets from the Muses, and to restore the Wings again to the Syrens. These Syrens are said ning em-

cothe But and

ant.

ited

nich ved

ere, felf

he uld

ani

dwell in remote Isles; for that pleasures Love Privacy, and retired Places, shunning always too much Company of People. The Syren's Songs are so vulgily understood, together with the Deceits and Danos of them, as that they need no exposition. But met of the Bones appearing like white Cliss, and descried afar off, hath more Acuteness in it; for thereby is signified, that, albeit the Examples of Afflictions be manifest, and eminent; yet do they not sufficiently deter us from the Wicked Enticements of Pleasures.

As for the Remainder of this Parable, though it be not over-mystical, yet it is very grave, and excellent: For in it are fet out three Remedies for this violent, micing Mischief; to wit, Two from Philosophy, and One from Religion. The first Means to thun thele inordinate Pleafures is, to withstand, and resist them in their beginnings, and feriously to shun all occasions that are offered, to debaush and entice the Mind, which is fignified in that stopping of the Ears; and that Remedy is properly used by the meaner and baser fort of People, as it were, Ulysses's Followers or Mariners; whereas more Heroick and Noble Spirits may boldly converse even in the midst of these feducing Pleafures, if with a refolved conflancy they fland upon their Guard, and fortifie their Minds; and to take greater contentment in the trial and experience of this their approved Vertue; learning rather throughly to understand the Follies and Vanities of those Pleasures by Contemplation, than by Submission: Which Solomon avouched of himself, when he reckoned up the multitude of those Solaces and Pleasures wherein he Swam, doth conclude with this Sentence, Sapientia quoque perseverabat mecum.

Wifdom also continued with me.

Therefore these Heroes, and Spirits of this excellent Temper, even in the midst of these enticing Pleasure, can shew themselves constant and invincible, and are able to support their own vertuous Inclination, against all heady and forcible perswasions whatsoever; as by the example of Ulysses, that so peremptorily interdicted all pestilent Counsel, and Flatteries of his Companions, as the most dangerous and pernicious Poysons to captivate the Mind. But of all other Remedies in this case, that of Orpheus is most predominant: For they that chaunt and resound the praises of the Gods, consound and dissipate the Voices and Incantations of the Syrens; for Divine Meditations do not only in power subdue all sensual pleasures; but also far exceed them in swiftness and delight.

FINIS.

(99) THE

CHARACTER

ira,

in his ious Re-mis of

in do a

OF

Queen Elizabeth.

Written by way of Essay.

By the Lord Verulam.

Ucen Elizabeth was one, whom Nature and Fortune had made the Wonder of her Sex, and an Ornament to Crowned Heads. For the truth of this we need not appeal to the Testimony of any Monk, or of any fuch like Solitary Recluse: For the these men write acutely, and have extraordinary ludgments; yet being wedded to, and byafled by their own Faction, they can never be faithful in transmitting a thing of this nature to Posterity. But this is a Province that more properly belongs to men of the first Rank, to fuch as have had the management of the Government in their own hands, and have been acquainted with the Secret Springs and motions of Civil Affairs. Every Age has look'd upon a Female Government as a Rarity; if prosperous as a Wonder; but if prosperous and long, almost as a Miracle. Whereas tho she reign'd full four and forty years, yet she outliv'd not her happiness. Of the happiness of her Reign I defign to fay fomething, without run-

S

000 o

e

0 n til

t

e noit

3

11 (

ning out into high Encoraiums. For Praise indeed is the Tribute of Men, but Happiness the Gift of God.

I take this to be the first step to her happi. ness, what from a Private condition she was rais a to the Administration of the Regal Power. Foralmuch as 'tis a standing Rule in the Morality and common Sense of Mankind, that those things are to be look'd upon as our greatest happines, which come beyond our hope and expectation. But this is not what I mean. That which I aim at is this, that Princes, who are bred up in Courts as the undoubted Heirs of a Crown, are fo far debauch'd by a foft, indulgent and effeminate Education, that they frequently become less capable of managing the State: Whereas those have proved the best and most excellent Princes, who have been under the Discipline of both Fortunes We need not to go far for instances, Henry the Seventh in England, and Lewis the Twelfth in France, within our own memory. and almost at the same time, mounted the Throne, not only from a Private, but also from an Adverse and harass'd Fortune; and the one prov'd famous for his Prudence, the other for his Justice. This was the Case of Q. Elizabeth; whose Fortune was as inconstant at the first, as at last, when she came to the Crown, it prov'd Constant and Even. For at her Birth the was declar d Heirefs to the Throne. afterwards difinherited, and at last despise! during her Brother's Reign the enjoy'd a more ferene ferene and favourable Fortune, but whilst her Sister sway d the Scepter the Clouds and Storms return'd upon her again. Nor was she advanc'd on a sudden from a Prison to a Throne, thereby to render her haughty after the Provocation of her Sufferings: But being restor'd to her Liberty, and rais d in her hopes, she at last quietly and happily mounted the Throne, without any Oppolition or Competitor.

in-

the ppi.

Was

ver. No-

hat

our

nuc

et I

ted

y a

hat

ag-

cd

ve

es.

arg

he

y,

he lo

nd

he

of nt

he

at e, re

10

These things I have mention'd, to shew how careful Divine Providence was of this best of Princes, by preparing her for a Crown by fuch methods of Discipline. Nor ought the missortune of her Mother to Eclipse the glory of her Birth: especially since 'tis abundantly evident, that Henry the Eighth was engaged in a new love before he gave way to his Anger against Q. Ann: nor is posterity a stranger to the nathre of that King, which was fo very prone to Love and Jealousie, and prosecuted both even with the effusion of Blood. To this we may add, that the was cut off by an Accusation grounded on flight Conjectures, and on the improbable Testimony of a wicked Accuser: all which was mutter'd privately at that very time; and Q. Ann herself with an undaunted mind, and noble presence, protested her Innocence at the time of her Death. For having (as she thought) got a faithful and generous Messenger, she just before her execution dispatcht him away with this Message to the King; That the King had very well observed, and would still keep his promise good to her, that was now going ing to be invested with new honors: since from a Private Person he rais'd her at first to the dignity of a Marchioness, and then advanc'd her to be the Partner of his Bed and Throne; and now, when he could raise her no higher on Earth, design'd to promote her an Innocent to the Crown of Martyrdom. But the Messenger durst not tell this to the King, who was devoted to another Love, tho Fame, the Asserter of Truth, has transmit

v ii

n

it

n

f

Fdt

T

Si ti

n

ted it to Posterity.

Another part of the Happiness of Q Eliza. beth feems to confift in the Period and Course of time wherein the reign d: Not only that it was Long, but because it was such a Part of her Life, as was most fit for managing the Affairs of State, and governing a Kingdom. For the was five and twenty years old when the began her Reign (at which Age she was out of her Guardians Jurisdiction) and she continud to Reign to the 70th year of her Age. So that the neither experienc'd what it was to be a Minor, and under a Governors power; nor did the labour under the Inconveniences of an extreme and miserable Old Age. An Age, which even to Private men brings too many troubles along with it ; but to Kings, befide the ordinary Miseries of human Life, it comes attended with the Decay of their States, and is back'd with an inglorious Exit. For there has scarce been a King, that has liv'd to an extreme and infirm old Age, but what loft much of that Power and Esteem, which he formerly had. Of this we have a notable Instance in Philip the Second, rity

the

ben

l to

77-

to

ve,

nit-

za.

rfe

tit

ner

irs

The

gan

ıer

to nat

Ai-

X-

ch

les

ry

ed

ď

ce

nd at

d.

ne

d,

Second, King of Spain, a Prince very potent, and one very well skill d in the Art of Governing: who in his latter days, labouring under the Impotency of old Age, deeply experienc d the truth of what we afferted. He quitted all his Conquests in France, made a Peace with that Nation, and endeavour d to do the same with others, that so he might leave all things in quiet and compos'd to his Successors. On the other hand, Q Elizabeth's Fortune was fo Constant and Vigorous, that no declension of Affairs follow d her lively, tho declining Age. Nay more, for a standing and most certain monument of her happiness, she died not before a Victory in Ireland had put an end to the Rebellion there, fo shining and so uniform was her Glory in allits Parts! Besides, I think it very material to reflect, over what fort of People she bore the sway, for had her Government been over the Palmyrenians, or any other foft and unmanly Nation of Asia, it had been a less wonder, since a Female in the Throne would be fuitable enough to an Effeminate People, but to have all things move and be directed by a Woman's Nod in England, a Nation so fierce and warlike; this, I say, justly raises our highest admiration.

But tho the Genius of her Subjects was so defirous of War, and so impatient of Peace, yet this did not hinder her from maintaining it strictly all her Reign. And this natural inclination of hers, join'd with success, is what I reckon redounds to her highest Commendation. For this conduc'd much to the Happiness of her own Life, to the Honor of her Sex, and to the Peace and Quiet of her Conscience. A. bout the tenth year of her Reign, an Insurrection was indeed attempted in the North, but it was foon hush'd and suppress'd. All the rest of her time England enjoy'd a secure and profound Peace. And I account it a most glorious Peace, upon these two accounts; which tho they make nothing to the Merit, yet contribute very much to the Glory of a Peace. The first is that it appear'd the more Conspicuous and Shining by the Calamities of its Neighbours, which were all in flames round about it. Another is, that even in the Bleflings of Peace there still remain'd so much martial Glory, as by its famous Actions not only retain'd, but likewise increased the honor of the English Nation. For the supplies sent into the Netherlands, France, and Scotland; the Voyages that were made to the Indies, and round the whole World; the Fleets that were fent to infest Portugal and the Coasts of Spain, and the Irish. Rebels so often conquer'd and cut off, were all sufficient Testimonies, that England had remitted and lost nothing of its Ancient Glory in the Field of War.

It was likewise an addition to her Glory and Deserts, that by her timely supplies, the Neighbouring Princes were maintain'd in their Thrones; and the Suppliant States, who by a conduct unbecoming Princes, were expos'd to the Cruelty of their Ministers, to the sury of

the

ess

nd

A.

ır-

ut

eft

0-rich

n-

e.

US

hit.

ce

25 ut

2-

res

ne

0 ie

F, nt

d

of the Rabble, and to all manner of Ravage and Slaughter, were at last reliev'd by her and placed in that posture of Affairs, wherein they now are. Nor were her Counsels less benefit cial than her Supplies: witness her frequent admonitions to his Catholick Majesty, to moderate the displeasure he had conceiv'd against his Subjects in the Netherlands, and to reftore them to that mildness of Government which they formerly enjoy'd: and witness her earnest importunities with the Kings of France, putting them often in mind of the Edicts wherein they had promis'd to preferve the Peace. It must indeed be acknowledged that her advices proved ineffectual. For the common interest of Enrope oppos'd the first, lest the Ambition of Spain, freed as it were from its confinement, should enlarge it felf (as affairs then flood) to the great prejudice of the Kingdoms and States of the Christian World. And the Latter was prevented by the Maffacre of fo many Innocent Persons, who with their Wives and Children were butcher'd in their own Habitations by the barbarous Rabble, who like fo many Beafts of prey seem'd to be Animated, Armed, and fent out by Publick Authority: So that the Blood which was shed cry d aloud for Revenge, that the Kingdom, stain d by so no. torious a Villany, might, be purg d by mutual Slaughters and Bloodshed. However she perform'd the Office of a Faithful, Prudent, and Generous Ally.

th

no

he

fe

th th

th

ea Sh

0

There is still another Reason, why we should admire the peaceful Reign of Queen Elizabeth. namely, because the Peace which she enjoy'd. was not owing to the inclination which the age she liv'd in had to it, but wholly to her own Prudence and wife Conduct. She struggled with an Inbred Faction at home, upon the account of Religion; and the strength of the Kingdom, like the common Bulwark of all Europe, feem'd to oppose the growing Greatness of the Spaniard, and his Ambition fo formidable at that time; fo that upon these accounts. there was a sufficient Cause of War: but by her Forces and Policy the furmounted these difficulties. This was demonstrated by one of the most memorable Events, that ever happened · in the whole course of Affairs of our age. For when the Spanish Armada rode upon our Seas, to the terror of all Europe, with so much noise, and so much assurance of success; it took not the least Fisher-boat, nor burnt the least Cottage, nor so much as touched upon our Coast: but being routed in an Engagement, was difpers'd by a miserable flight, and with frequent storms; and so left England and her Sea Coasts in an unmov'd and undisturbed Peace. was she less fortunate in disappointing the secret Plots of her private Foes, then in Conquering and Routing the Forces of an open Enemy: For tho there were many Conspiracies laid against her Life, yet were they most happily discovered and defeated. Nor was the upon that account more fearful or anxious of the the fafety of her Person; her Guards were not increas'd, nor did she confine her self in her Palace, without appearing abroad: But secure of her self, and trusting to her Subjects, she remembered her Deliverance, but forgot the Danger, and alter'd nothing of her usual Management and Behaviour.

0

r

e

S

It is likewise worthy our Observation, to consider in what fort of times she flourish'd. For some Ages are so Barbarous and Ignorant, that Men have been Govern'd with as much ease, as a Shepherd drives and manages his Sheep: But this Princess livid in a most Learned and Polite Age; wherein it requir'd great parts and a high degree of Vertue to be excellent. A Female Government is likewise very often eclips'd by Marriage, and all the Praifes and Conduct is bestow'd upon the Husband: whilft those who live unmarry d, have no sharers or partners in their Glory. And in this was our Queen the more to be commended. in that her Throne stood upon no other Basis, than what she her self had erected. She had no Brother, no Uncle, nor any other of the Royal Family, to partake of her Cares, or share in her Government. But even those whom she did advance to any places of Trust, were so manag'd and kept in fuch awe, that each of them was folicitous how to please her; so that the was always Mistress of her self. She was indeed Childless, and left no issue of her own Body to fucceed her: But this has been the case of the most fortunate Princes, of Alexan.

fe

C

C

n

OI

Ė

2

2 fo h

y

2 der the Great, of Julius Casar, of Trajan, and several others: which has been variously censured, and has always been a matter of Dispute. For some have look'd upon it as a Diminution of human Happiness, as if men could not be compleatly happy, unless they were so both in their own persons, and in the propagation of their Species: but others have esteem'd it as the greater Happiness, because then it seems to be compleat, when it is not any longer subjected to the various turns of Fortune: which 'tis impossible to secure, when a Posterity is left behind.

To all this we may add her Outward Embellishments; she was tall of stature, well shap'din her Body, and had in her Face the mixture of Sweetness and Majesty; and always enjoy'd a very Sound Health. Beside all this, she was strong and vigorous to the very last, never experienc'd the Changes of Fortune, nor the miseries of old Age, and at last by an easy and gentle death she obtain'd that Euthanasia, which Augustus Casar was us d to passionately to defire. This also is Recorded of Antoninus Pius, one of the best of Emperors, whose death seem'd to be nothing else but a quiet and sweet simber. Just so in Q. Eliza. beth's Distemper, there was nothing that was deadly, or ominous, or unsuitable to humane nature. She was not desirous of Life, or impatient under Sickness, nor disturb'd with the tortures of any Pain: No direful, no pestilential Symptom appear'd, but every thing feem'd nd

en.

oif-

Di-

ıld

fe

oa-

e-ule

ot

of

en

el-

in ire

r d vás

er

he fy oa-

0-

of

rs,

1.

as

ne

n-

he

ting id feem'd rather to prognofticate the decay of Nature, than either the corruption or difparagement of it. For some few days before her Death, being weakened by the driness of her Constitution, and the cares of the Government, having not fo much as drank any Wine, or taken any moist diet, she was seiz'd with a Dead Palfy, but yet (which is not usual in that Distemper) she retained her Speech, her Sense, and her Motion, tho not so brisk and lively as before. Nor was the long in this condition, so that it did not seem to be the last Act of her Life, but rather the first step to her Death. For tho'tis esteemed a misery to live a long time in the loss of the use of our faculties; yet to be prepar'd for Death, by a gradual decay of our fenses, is certainly a very sweet and pleasant Dissolution.

Another remarkable addition to her Happiness, is this, that she was not only very happy in her own Person, but likewise in the Worthiness of her Ministers of State. For she made choice of such men, as this Island perhaps was never so happy in before. But God that favours Kings, raises them up Ministers and adorns their Minds.

There remain two Posthumous Felicities, which seem to attend the more Noble and August Passages of her Life: The One is that of her Successor, the Other, that of her Memory. For she has got such a Successor, who, tho by his Masculine Virtue, and Off-spring, and late Accessor to the Throne, he may exceland eclipse

her

her Glory; yet is so far a favourer of her Name and Esteem, and is so willing to transmit her actions to posterity, that he has made little alterations, either in the choice of Ministers, or in the method of Governing. So that hard. ly any Father has been succeeded by his Son, with less noise, disturbance or alteration. As for her Memory, 'tis so much in the mouths, and so fresh in the minds of all men, that Death seems to have extinguished Envy, and put her Fame in a clearer light, and now the Happiness of her Memory does as it were strive to outvie that of her Life. For the through mens love to any Party, or upon the account of the difference of Religion, any factious report may be spread abroad, yet'tis such as seems to be fearful of it self, is not sincere, and can never last long. And 'tis upon this account especially that I have made this collection of things, that relate to her happiness, and are marks of the Divine favour: that so no foul-mouthed Libeller might dare to stain so great bleffings of God, by the venom of his scandalous Tongue. If any one should now fay, as one did to Cafar, que miremur, habemus; sed que landemus, expectamus; we do indeed see cause to Admire, but none to Praise: to this I answer, that I look upon Admiration as the superlative degree of Praise. Nor could that Happiness we have been describing, beattained by any, but fuch as are supported and highly indulged by the Divine favour; and fuch as in some measure by their Morals and Vertue

P

b

1

SI

Vertue are the Establishers of their own Fortune. However I thought fit to subjoin some few hints with respect to those Morals of the Queen, which seem to have been most exposed to the lash of malevolent Tongues.

er

nit

rs,

d.

n, As

ns,

at nd he

ve

gh

nt

e.

ns

an nt

of

nd

10

Co

is

W

e-

7-0 as

d

td

d

d

In Religion, Q. Elizabeth was Pions and Moderate, Constant and Steady, and a profest Enemy to Novelty. As for her Piety, tho the chief strokes of it appeared in the Actions and Affairs of State; yet some signs of it were to be feen in the course of her Life, and her ordinary Conversation. She was feldom absent from Divine Service, either in her publick or private Chappel. She employed much of her time in reading the Scriptures and the Writings of the Fathers, especially of S. Augustin. She compos'd some Prayers her self, upon some occasions, and for some extraordinary purpose. Whenever she mentioned the name of God, even in ordinary discourse, she generally added the title of Creator 3 and shewed some fort of humility and reverence in her looks and countenance, which I my felf have often obferved. As for that which some have reported, that the was so far from thinking of her Mortality, that she could not endure to be told of Old Age or Death, it is absolutely false: since she her self, several years before her Death, would frequently with much facetiousness call her self the Old Woman: and would often discourse about the Inscription, the had a mind should be upon her Tomb: She gave out, that the was no lover of Glory and and pompous Titles, but only defired her Memory might be recorded in a line or two. which should very briefly express her Name. her Virginity, the time of her Reign, the Reformation of Religion, and her Preservation of the Peace. Tis true, in the flower of her Age before the was past Child-bearing, when the was importun'd by some to declare her Successor, the did make answer, that she could by no means endure to have a Shroud held before her Eyes while she was living. However, some few years before her Death, when the was more thoughtful, and meditated (as 'tis probable) on her Mortality, as one of her bosom friends told her, that many and great Places and Offices of Trust in the Commonwealth, would be too long vacant; the role up, and with more than ordinary concern faid, that she was sure her place would not long be Vacant.

As for her Moderation in Religion, perhaps in this her Character will feem deficient, because of the severity of those Laws, which were made against her Subjects of the Romish Religion; but we will produce such things, as are well known to us, and carefully taken notice of by us. This is certain, that she was always averse from laying any constraint on mens Consciences: but yet she could not allow that the Government should be endangered under the pretence of Conscience and Religion. Hence it was that she thought nothing but a certain destruction would ensue, if she should at the first grant a liberty and toleration

ti

ti

P

W C:

t

C

b

d

2 fi

B

h

r

Ci

f

tl

n

b

h tl

E

h

N

co

B

R

her

WO.

me.

for-

the

be. was

Tor.

ans yes

ars

ht-

her old

ces

too

ace

a Ds

beere li.

are

ice

al-

on

al.

ın-

Re-ng

he raon

tion of two Religions by publick Authority to a fierce and headstrong people, who would foon upon their private Animofities fall together by the ears. Even in the beginning of her Reign, when all things looked with a fufpicious face, the kept some of the Prelates, which were of a more turbulent and factious spirit, Prisoners at large, tho she had the Law on her fide: and to the rest of both Orders, the used not any tharp inquisition, but by a generous Connivance kept them under her Protection. This was the posture of affairs at first. Nor did the swerve much from this her Clemency, tho provoked by the Bull of Excommunication, thundered against her by Pius the Fifth. This indeed might have raifed her indignation, and have been the occasion of new modelling the State, but still the retained her own generous Temper. For this Prudent and Courageous Woman was not much moved at the noise of such Threatnings, being secure of the Fidelity and Affection of her Subjects, and not fearing any harm from the Romift Faction, which was too weak to attempt any thing unless seconded by a foreign. Enemy.

But about the three and twentieth year of her Reign, the face of Affairs was quite chang'd. Nor is this Period of time, feigned to ferve a turn only, but mentioned in the Publick Records, and engraven as it were in leaves of Brass. Nor were her Subjects of the Romijh Religion punished with any severity before that year,

year, tho feveral Laws had formerly been enacted against them. But at this time it was by degrees discovered what vast and ambitious designs were laid by Spain, to conquer this Kingdom A great part of this defign was to raise a faction in the very heart of the Nation, which being no friends to the Government, and desirous of alteration, should join with the Enemy upon his Invasion. hoped would be effected upon the difference there was in Religion: whereupon they refolved to improve that breach, and Priests were fent over from the young Seminaries, to raise and increase Mens Love for the Romillo Religion, to teach and inforce the Validity of the Popes Bull, which absolved the Queens Subjects from their Allegiance, and to excite and prepare the Minds of men for an Alteration in the Government.

Much about that time, Ireland was openly invaded, and the Name and Government of Queen Elizabeth vilified by various and Scandalous Libels; and affairs were in such a strange ferment, that they prognosticated a greater Commotion. Nor indeed will I say, that every Priest knew of the design, or were conscious of what was to be done, but certainly they were the wicked Instigators and Promoters of the Villany others were to commit. And this is certainly true, (as appears by several Confessions) that almost all the Priest, who were sent into England from, the year abovemention d, to the thirtieth year of Queen Elizabeths

en-

vas

iti-

1er vas

Van-oin

ras

ce

efts

to ilh

of

ns

ite

aly

of

n.

ge

er

e.

n.

ly

0-

it.

e-

is,

ar

in is

Elizabeth's Reign (wherein the Delign of Spain and the Romanists was to be put in Execution, by that memorable preparation of a Fleet and Land-forces) I fay tis certain, that all, who were fent over within that time, among other things had this likewife in their Orders, That they should infingate, That riffairs could not last long in the same posture 3 that they would put on a new Face within fome fort time ; and that the Pope and the Catholick Princes would take care of the English Statest provided the English were not their own hinderdack. Nay, some of the Priefts were manifestly engaged in the Plots and Contrivances which were laid for the Subversion and Ruin of the Government : and which is fill more, the whole Train of this Defign was discover'd by Letters which were intercepted from all parts wherein it was written, That the Vigilancy of the Queen and her Council over the Catholichs would be baffled; For The only feem'd concerned, that the fastion fould not be headed by any Nobleman or Perfer of Quality; whereas the Design they laid was such, as was carried on by Private Men of no Note; who never met und conspir'd together in numbers, but order'd and dispor'd all things in the private way of Confession. These were the Artifices which were then us'd, and were so customary and familiar to those Men, as might be seen in a fresh and parallel case. Longon la bus sond

In a time of so much danger, Queen Elizabeth was obliged by a kind of fatal necessity to enact severe Laws, thereby to restrain those of her Subjects, who being averse toher Government, and grown past the hopes of being cur'd. began to grow rich by the private Life they led, being exempted from the charge and burden of publick Offices. The Original of this spreading Evil was charg'd upon the Seminary Priests; who were bred up in foreign parts, and maintain'd by the Charity and Benevolence of Foreign Princes the profest Enemies of the Realm: who had liv'd in places, where the best Titles they could bestow on Queen Elizabeth were those of, Heretick, Excommunicated, and Damnable Fury; who, tho they themselves were not engag'd in treasonable practices, yet were known to be the intimate Friends of fuch as were guilty of those Villanies, and who, by their Artifices and poyfonous Methods had depraved the very Sacrifice of the Mass, which before was a sweet and harmlessthing; and had as it were infected it with a new kind of Ferment and pernicious Malignity. Whereupon the only Expedient to put a stop to this growing Evil was thought to be the prohibiting these Men from coming into the Land upon pain of Death; which was accordingly enacted in the feven and twentieth Year of her Reign. Nor did the Event it felf, when fo great a Storm broke out upon, and threatned the Nation, in the least take off from the Envy and Hatred of these Men, but rather increas'd it ; fo far had they divested themselves of the Love they ow'd their Country. Afterwards when our fears l,

f

.

n

.

n

Ó

e

.

ł

t tgalet

t

y

rs

of

of Spain (the true occasion of this severity) were over and vanisht; yet the Memory of the former times was fo deeply fixt in the Minds and Senses of most Men, and to have abrogated the Laws that were once made would have argued for much Inconstancy, or to have flighted them would have been a fign of fo much Indifferency; that Queen Elizabeth as cases then stood, did not think it safe for her felf, that things should return to the same posture they were in before the three and twentieth year of her Reign. To this may be added the Industry of some to increase the Revenues of the Exchequer, and the Care of those Ministers of Justice, who are us'd to mind no other Safety of their Country than what is contain'd in the Laws: both which required and call'd loudly for the Laws to be put in Execution. However, the (to the Glory of her good Nature be it spoken) did so far blunt the edge of the Laws, that but very few Priests suffer'd Death upon that account. Nor do we speak this by way of defence, for these matters stand in need of none: since the whole Safety of the Nation depended upon this Conduct, and the Method and Measure of all this Severity was far from being bloody, and is a thing that no Christian need to be asham'd of; for it proceeded more from the Arrogance and Wicked Practices of others, than from any necessity the Nation lay under, and it stands for a Monument of Difgrace to the Romanists. But not to forget what we first afferted, we Y 2 think think we have abundantly demonstrated, that the was moderate in points of Religion, and that the Alteration which did happen, was not owing to her Nature, but to the Iniquity of the times.

Of her Constancy in Religion and the Worship thereof, the greatest proof is. That with an undaunted Mind and little Afustance she extirpated and abrogated the Romillo Religion, as being disagreeable to the Word of God, the Primitive Purity, and her own Conscience: notwithstanding in her Sister's Reign it was established by Publick Authority and a great deal of Care, and had taken deep root, and was strengthned with the Consent and Approbation of all that were in Authority and Places of Trust. Nor did she do this hastily or in a heat, but cautiously and by degrees. The truth of which appears, not only in her whole Conduct of Affairs, but also in that Answer which she once made to a Courtier upon the like occasion. For in the beginning of her Reign, when according to the Custom the Prifoners were to be releas'd, to grace and honor her first Accession to the Throne; as she was going to Chappel the was accosted by a certain Courtier, who took more than ordinary freedom, being of a pleasant and facetious Nature. He, either prompted to it by his own private Inclination, or fet on by a Wifer Head; deliver'd a Petition into her hand, and in a full Concourse of People with a loud Voice expressed himself thus, That there were still four

at.

ot

le.

ip

in

X-

n,

ne

t-

a-

al

as 12-es

he ole er he

er

ri-

or 725

in e-

Ja.

vn id;

ice

יווני

or

er five kept Prisoners, and that for no reason at all: That he came to petition for their Freedom, as well as for the rest: That they were the Four Evangelists, and the Apostle S. Paul, who had been long confin'd in an unknown tongue, as it were in a Prison, and were not suffer'd to appear abroad in the World. The Queen gave him this very cautious Reply, That it was best to consult them first, whether they were willing to have their Freedom yet, or no. And thus she kept every thing within her own Power, by giving fuch a doubtful Answer to so surprizing a Demand. Nor did the carry on things fearfully, and by fits and starts, but gravely, orderly, and maturely: A Conference first had between the Parties, and a Parliament first call'd; and at last, within the compass of a year, she so far order'd and establish'd all things which concern'd Religion, that she did not suffer the least Tittle of them to be alter'd, during all her Reign. And it was always her Publick Admonition in almost every Session of Parliament, that no Innovation should be made in the Discipline and Ceremonies of the Church. Thusfar of her Religion.

Now if any of the graver Sort should object these Levities: "That she was contented and "desirous to be Admir'd, to be Courted, and "upon the Account of Love to be Prais'd and "Extoll'd; and that she continu'd these Levities even to an Age wherein they were un- becoming her. Yet if you take even these in a milder sense, they are not without their due due Admiration, fince they are such things, as often are to be found in the fubulous Narrations of Poets and others. Thus 'tis recorded of a certain Queen in the Fortunate Islands, who in her Court and Government entertain'd that foft thing call'd Love, and yet forbad Lust to enter there. But if a harsher construction should be put upon them, yet they are to be admir'd, and that very highly too, fince thefe Softnesses cast but little blemish on her Fame, and none at all upon her Grandeur; did no Injury to her Government, and hinder'd not the Publick Administration of Affairs. these fort of things are usually joyn'd to the most Noted Fortune. But, to conclude this Estay; she was certainly a good, moral Princes, and as such she desir'd to appear: She was a hater of Vice, and study'd to grow famous by bonorable Methods. And truly at the naming of her Manners, something comes into my mind, which I will here declare. When she had order'd an Express to be written to her Embassador, concerning certain Instructions, which he was privately to impart to the Queen Mother of France at Valois, and her Secretary had incerted a certain Clause, that the Embassador to ingratiate himself the better should say, That they were two Female Princes, of whom, in the Management of Affairs, and in the Art and Skill of Governing, as great things were expected as from the best of Men; she could not endure the Comparison, but order'd it to be struck out, and faid, that the us'd quite different Arts and and Methods in the Administration of the Government. And she was extreamly pleas'd, when any one by chance dropt out fuch an Expreffion as this, That she would have liv'd and excell'd in the Eye of the World, tho she had spent ber days in a private and mean Station: So desirous was she that nothing of her Virtue and Praise should be owing to the Grandeur of her Fortune. But if Ishould enter upon her Praises, either Moral or Political, or should touch only upon her Virtues, which would be a Disparage. ment to fo great a Princess: or should I endeavour to fet them in their clear and proper light, I must run out into the History of her Life, which requires more leisure, and a larger Genius, than I can pretend to. For I have here given you her Character in short. But it must after all be said, That only Time will beflow a true Encomium on this Excellent Woman: fince no Age fince the Creation, could ever shew her Equal in her own Sex, that was fo fit to manage the Affairs of a State.

e

S

,

a

y

1,

r-ch ch d or y, in ed

re ck rts nd

and Ale in the rise in initionation of the Garthe was extremely pleased, when any une by a mod dreet out fach as Esquirethat the around have he happilerall in the last of the fall out the fee bed force in single to the same of the same of the bon and a red to wildow and on very cut Praye then the be owing to the Grandow of her But if I flouid order apon her Profiles chier Marker Pelpenk or friend token only aron her i same, which would be a title make. ment to fo test a Princels: or flould I disdeavour to ter them to their clear, and, regree and to make the out two the Light of her Ile, which requires the letture, and altract Cenius, that can place at to. For i hive here give you her the a min there , Burie out the call be feet, it may only Wine visit befor a way in communication in the frequency was min : the e no Ase fire the Cremion could ever there's to Bearing ber our Son, there as the file of a distance of a start

THE

TABLE.

Affandra, or Divination.	Page 1
CAssandra, or Divination. Typhon, or a Rebel.	18
The Cyclops, or the Ministers of Terror.	20
Narcissus, or Self-Love.	. 21
Styx, or Leagues.	22
Pan, or Nature.	24
Perseus, or War.	34
Endymion, or a Favourite.	37
The Sifter of the Giants, or Fame.	39
Acteon, and Pentheus, or a Curious Man.	40
Orpheus, or Philosophy.	41
Calum, or Beginnings.	44
Proteus, or Matter.	47
Memnon, or a Youth too forward.	49
Tythonus, or Satiety.	50
Juno's Suitor, or Baseness.	51
Cupid, or an Atom.	52
Diomedes, or Zeal.	55
Dædalus, or Mechanick.	58
Ericthonius, or Imposture.	61
Deucalion, or Restitution.	62
Nemesis, or the Vicissitude of Things.	ibid.
Achelous, or Battel.	65
Dionysus, or Passions.	66
Atalanta, or Gain.	70
Prometheus, or the Statue of Man.	72
Scylla and Icarus, or the Middle-way.	84
Sphynx, or Science.	85
Proserpina, or Spirit.	89
Metis, or Counfel.	93
The Syrens, or Pleasures.	94
The Character of Queen Elizabeth.	99
7	Same

Some Books lately Printed for, and to be Sold by ABEL SWALL, and TIM. CHILD at the Unicorn in St. Paul's Church-Tard.

Amden's Britannia newly Translated into English, with large Additions and Improvements, and Maps of every County according to the best and latest Surveys. Published by Edmond Gibson of Queen's Coll. Oxon. Folio.

L. ELLIES du PIN's History of Ecclesiastical Writers containing an Abridgment of the Writings of the Primitive Fathers, together with a History of their Lives, and all Assairs transacted in the Church, from the time of our Saviour to the end of the Ninth Century Englished with Additions. Seven small Volumes in Folio.

THE ATRUM SCOTIE. Descriptions of the Principal Cities, Towns, Castles and Palaces in Scotland, with large Prospects of each Place very curiously Engraven on Copper, and printed on broad sheets of Royal Paper. Published by Capt. 7. Sleezer. Fol.

P. VIRGILII Opera Notis & Interpretatione illustravit Carolus Ruxus justu Regis in usum Delphini. Octavo. Newly Reprinted on a very fine Paper and accurately Corrected.

P. OVIDI Metamorphoseon Interpretatione & Notis illustravit Daniel Crapinus in usum Delphini. Recensuit Joh, Friend, Oxonia, Octavo.

Romæ Antiquæ Notitia: or, The Antiquities of Rome, containing a short History of the Rife, Progress, and Decay of the Common-wealth a Description of the City, and an Account of their Religion, Government, Customs, Ceremonies, &c. with Copper Cuts of the Principal Buildings, &c. By Bafil Kennet of Oxon. Dedicated to his Highness the Duke of Glocester. Octavo.

The History of the Revolutions in Sweeden, occasioned by the change of Religion and alteration of Government in that Kingdom. Written in French by the Abbot Vertat, printed the last Year at Paris, and now English'd by 7. Mitchel M.D. Octavo.

7. CLERICI PHTSICA: five de rebus Corporeis Libri quinque, in quibus præmissis potissimis Corporearum naturarum Phœnomenis & proprietatibus, veterum & racentiorum de corum causis celeberrimæ conjecturæ traduntur.

The Evangelical History; or, the Life of our Saviour Jesus Christ comprehensively and plainly related, with practical Inferences and Discourses thereupon. Adorn'd with Copper Cuts.

printing with Amendments.

The Evangelical History, Part Second; being the Lives and Acts of the Holy Apostles, comprehenfively and plainly related, according to the Holy Scriptures and the Writings of the Primitive Fathers of most approv'd Authority. Illustrated with the Effigies of the Apostles, and a Map of their Travels fairly engraven on Copper, Octavo.

The Gentleman's Journal for the War, a Description of the principal Fortifications in Europe, with Draughts engraven in Copper of each Place. Quar-

to. Part 1,2,3.

æ

The Gentleman's Journal for the War, Part 4th. containing Descriptions and Draughts of the Fortifications of Dinant, Winexberg, Calais, Tournay, and Cambray.

The English Library; or, a short View and Character of most of the Writers now extant, either in Print or Manuscript, which may be serviceable to the Undertakers of a General History. Written by W. Nicholson, Arch-Deacon of Carlisse.

Some Books now in the Prefs.

THE Antiquities of Greece, written by Mr. John Potter of Lincoln College in Oxford. Octavo. SALLUSTIUS cum Interpretatione & Notis in usum Delphini. Octavo.

Dr. Hen. HAMMOND's Paraphrase on the Pfalms and Proverbs; Reprinting.

The Memoirs of the Count Harcourt. Written by Monsieur de St. Euvremont. Made English. Oct.

Historical and Curious Relations of several Voyages, and Travels into Germany, Holland, Switzerland, England, &c. By the famous Charles Patin. M.D. With Cuts.

ADVERTISEMENT.

There is now in the Press, and will be Publish'd in Michaelmas-Term,

THE Universal English Dictionary, explaining the Sence and Etymology of all English Words; with Setelt Phrases shewing the Force, Significancy, Construction, and different Acceptations of every Word, the native and borrow'd Graces, and all the remarkable Peculiarities of the English Idiom. And in particular containing an Explanatory account of all difficult and unufual Words, whether fuch as are Obsolete, or not yet universally received; With a full and distinct Interpretation of the Terms, Phrases, and Expressions us'd in all Sciences and Arts. The whole digested into an Alphabetical, and most natural Order, the Derivatives and Compounds being rank'd after the Primitive; and Enrich'd with many Thousands of Words that were never inferted in any other Dictionary. Illustrated with Figures curiously Engraven on Copper Plates, representing all the parts of a Humane Body, of a Horse, Ship, Fort, and several other things that cannot be well understood without such a Help to the Imagination, especially Geometrical Figures, &c. To all which is added a Collection of the Words and Phrases that are peculiar to the several Counties of England. Some of the Parts done, and the whole Revis'd by J. Mitchell, M.D. A Larger and more particular Account of the Defign and Method of this Great and Useful Work, with a Specimen, may be had of the Undertaker Abel Swall at the Unicorn in St. Paul's Church Yard.